Council passes plans for more free parking, measure could mean less jingle in city's purse

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

When spring rolls around this year, there will be a little less planting going on in downtown Charlevoix.

But no petunias are at risk.

At its regular monthly meeting Tuesday, the Charlevoix City Council approved a measure that will remove all parking meters from the lots behind the buildings on the west side of Bridge Street.

In all the change means 57 fewer parking meters will be planted and fed coins in the downtown this summer. It also means that parking fines that were $5 will be increased to $10 and those that were $15 will be increased to $30. The approved motion also included a provision for two 15-minute spaces to be created in the lot behind Central Drugs to allow for customers making quick pickups in the area.

The motion to change the parking system passed by a 4-2 vote, with council members Jill Picha and Dennis Kusina casting the dissenting votes. In December, the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority's board voted to recommend the parking plan approved by the city council Tuesday.

Meters will remain in use on Bridge Street, the first few spaces on intersecting side streets, and in the Bridge Park and the Coast Guard parking lots on the east side of Bridge Street. Two-hour parking will continue to be enforced in the same locations as previously.

The matter has been under consideration and study by city officials since May when discussions about the future of the DeWitt lot prompted a review of all downtown parking policies. At a May 31 meeting the council not only decided not to charge for parking in the 1-year-old DeWitt lot (off Park Street near Bridge Street), but several council members wanted to study the feasibility of getting rid of parking meters in the downtown completely.

At Tuesday's meeting city police chief Gerard Doan, who was given the responsibility to study the matter and report back to the council, said last year the city's revenue exceeded expenses on downtown parking by about $30,000. Parking revenues are deposited in the general fund and used to pay for other city expenses.

Doan

Doan estimated that the removal of the meters could result in a roughly 25 percent reduction in the revenue the city takes in from meter fees and fines. However, Doan said he thinks the increased parking violation fines will likely make up for the lost revenue.

Although neither Picha nor Kusina explained their "no" votes during the Tuesday's meeting, both told the Courier on Wednesday that they are concerned that the higher parking fines will trump any goodwill the additional free parking spaces create among downtown patrons.

"We're taking down meters and then doubling the fines. That bothers me," Picha said.

She added that she's concerned that the additional free parking spaces in the parking lots will be taken up by employees at downtown businesses.

Ironically, Picha was among the council members who suggested that the city re-evaluate its entire downtown parking plan in the wake of the DeWitt lot discussion. In fact, Picha was and still is in favor of doing away with the meters in the downtown altogether.

Kusina said he'd like to see the parking system left the way it was. He said he's concerned not only about he public relations aspect of the change, but also about the impact that the reduced meter revenue could have on the city's income — especially in light of the belt-tightening the city has done with its budget in recent years.

"We've been cutting things and just scraping by and I don't think it's a good idea to be reducing our income," Kusina said.

At Tuesday's meeting, Doan said he either has had or

Road overhaul expected to cost $5.2 million

BOYNE CITY — Cost estimates are in for the planned overhaul of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, one of the most traveled local roads in Charlevoix County.

The Charlevoix County Road Commission last week discussed the engineer's cost estimates for a 10-mile stretch of the highway that connects Boyne City's north end to U.S. 31, just north of Charlevoix. Both state and local officials will accept bids until Feb. 3 for the estimated $5.2 million job, and the work will be done by the end of the 2012 construction season.

"It's a terrible road and it was great when they fixed up the section closer to Boyne City. They just didn't get as far as where we live," said Greg "GT" Long, who lives along the highway in Horton Bay.

Federal dollars funneled through the Michigan Department of Transportation will cover most of the 2.5-mile section between Stephens and Sumner roads, estimated to cost around $1.7 million. Bids for that part of the project will be opened Feb. 3 in Lansing and the work deadline is at June's end.

Local money will be spent to complete the 7.5-mile section from Stephens Road

Library 'Friends' annual meeting slated: Bee there

Bee author Jack Staats to speak at Friends of the library annual meeting

Staats

The Friends of the Charlevoix Public Library will host its annual meeting, 6:30 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 17.

Organization president Joan Robinson will be reviewing the past year as well as discussing plans for the future. Officers will be elected and ideas for Friends' projects taken from the floor. The Friends provide funding for special library projects and also participate in many community service projects as well as. Their major fundraiser, an ongoing book sale, provides $14,000 annually to the youth department at the library for books, games, and programming.

Jack Staats will be the keynote speaker for the evening, discussing the social life of bees. Mr. Staats retired in 1997 after 35 years as a biology/ Earth science teacher in Warren, but his interest in social insects, especially bees, began in elementary school. His love of bees peaked while at Michigan State University and continued throughout his teaching career. Keeping bees in the city is difficult, so when he moved north it was a perfect time to start an apiary. His five hives produce enough honey to supply family and friends.

Joel Evans remains Charlevoix County board chairman

Chris Christensen appointed vice chairman, replaces Gillespie

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix County commissioners organized themselves and selected officers for 2012.

Commissioner Joel Evans, of South Arm Township, retained the chairman's seat and commissioners selected commissioner Chris Christensen, of Boyne City, to serve as vice-chairman. Commissioner Rich Gillespie, of Beaver Island, served as vice chairman last year.

Regular board meetings will continue to be at 9:30 a.m. on each month's second Wednesday and at 7 p.m. on the fourth Wednesday.

Commissioners also made some changes to committee and liaison assignments.

Commissioners Shirlene Tripp, of Hayes Township, and Ron Reinhardt, of Wilson Township, swapped spots on their respective board subcommittees. Tripp will now sit on the county board's personnel and internal government committee, while Reinhardt switched to her former position on the public safety, building and grounds committee.

Additionally, commissioner Bob Drehenstedt will now serve as the board's liaison to the Charlevoix County Planning Commission and Christensen will be the alternate, following their role reversal. Alternates also will be dropped for liaison assignments to boards that come with voting power — such as the council of governments and area agency on aging — but will be kept for liaison assignments that do not, including the road commission and veterans affairs.

Finally, commissioners agreed to remove voting power from board liaisons to several committees, including parks, GIS advisory and IT. That's because currently commissioners effectively have a "second bite at the apple" when those committees' recommendations come before the full county board for final consideration, Christensen said.

Reinhardt said he agreed with the move, which would help improve public perception of county government.

Tripp became the sole dissenter when commissioners voted to approve the reorganized committee and liaison appointments. She said that's because she disagrees with dropping alternate liaison assignments for some boards and committees. She prefers alternate assignments remain so it's certain that information will come back to the county commissioners, Tripp said.

Bandwidth boost: Merit to link to Charlevoix County building

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

CHARLEVOIX — A network provider will soon link the Charlevoix County government building to the Internet with far greater bandwidth than currently available, a move that could provide more technology options for county leaders.

Merit Network will receive a one-time $750 payment to provide a new lateral line into the county building in Charlevoix that will allow more online traffic and faster upload speeds. Charlevoix County also will pay Merit $5,850 annually for the next five years for online service.

"It's a fiber optic service line for the county with higher bandwidth capacity," said Eric Grandstaff, Merit's northwest Michigan member relations manager.

Officials said the same technology came as part of recent renovations to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office building in Charlevoix. County commissioners approved the new fiber line project last week.

"We all know it's a good thing coming in," said Joel Evans, board chairman.

Commissioner Chris Christensen championed the effort to bump up the county's bandwidth with Merit, a change from how the county currently works with multiple companies to provide Internet service, he said.

"The county is going to save a lot of money for the services," Christensen said.

The county currently pays $7,992 per year between AT&T and Charter Communications, the former for a T1 line and the latter for backup cable Internet service, said Cheryl Potter Browe, county clerk.

That means the county stands to save $2,142 per year after the switch to Merit.

There could be further benefits to county coffers, officials said.

Increased bandwidth means more online services could be made available to the public, including searchable online databases and public records. Residents wouldn't necessarily have to drive to the county clerk's office to order and pay for copies of all county records anymore, Christensen said.

That could provide a revenue boost to the county to make up for sliding property tax revenues in recent years, he said.

The high-speed Web connection could allow for all court arraignments to be done via video, eliminating the need for sheriff's deputies to transport prisoners to the court each day.

The technology development also will help remedy the lack of high-speed fiber access across the city of Charlevoix.

"What this will do is allow us to close the gap between the north and south ends of Charlevoix in terms of fiber," Christensen said.

The technology potentially could allow last-mile Internet service providers — companies that service homes and businesses — to hook into Merit's fiber lines, though it is not yet known what projects may arise.

"There are probably some public-private opportunities that will come up," Christensen said.

Grandstaff said Merit's mission is to provide improved access to schools, libraries, governments and other nonprofit organizations, part of the mandate that came with the company's federal stimulus funding in recent years. It's possible the connection to the county building will lead to additional connections for other social service agencies in the area, he said.

"I think it will be great the county will be an anchor," Browe said.

The improved bandwidth will not require the county to hire an additional program administrator, said both Grandstaff and Christensen.

"Merit handles its own work," Grandstaff said.

Christensen said not only is there no new job from the new network service agreement with Merit, but he wouldn't want such a job anyway — contrary to speculations by some in the county.

"You can kill all those rumors: I don't want to work for the county," Christensen said.

Man charged with child pornography possession

Howard

A Hayes Township man is facing several criminal charges related to a child pornography investigation in Charlevoix County.

Authorities arrested Robert Russell Howard, 47, on Dec. 24 on a six-county felony warrant. Five charges are for alleged possession of child pornography and the final charge is for allegedly using a computer to commit a crime.

The child pornography possession charges each carry a maximum penalty of up to four-year sentence and the computer charge carries a seven-year sentence, all with a conviction.

Charlevoix County sheriff's officials said the investigation revealed more than 400 images the hard drive of Howard's computer. The photographs include images of females from 7 to 16 years old in nude or semi-nude positions.

Authorities released Howard on a $20,000 bond. The investigation continues, said sheriff Don Schneider.

He is scheduled to face a preliminary examination on the charges in 90th District Court at 2:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Jan. 31.

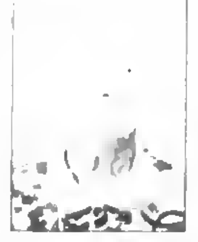
Celebrate the solstice and more daylight to come



EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

As part of an annual attempt to connect us to rest of the living and the physical world surrounding us here with my once a year effort to encourage our noticing the winter solstice. Even if we only see the sun once a week this time of year we continue to be dependent on it in many ways.

We have recently observed one of the world's great holidays. No, not Christmas, not Hanukkah, not Ramadan, not Kwanzaa, not the New Year, not Flurry Fest, although the clustering of so many ethnic, religious and commercial celebrations at about the same time of the year is no accident. What we will observe is a WORLD holiday, an astronomical one, not an ethnic religious or geographic one. We have just passed the winter solstice, an occasion that has been celebrated in some way for almost as long as there have been human beings living some distance from the equator.

For most of us in the modern world, the solstice is just a date on the calendar which in the northern hemisphere of our earth is sometimes called the beginning of winter. The word "solstice" literally means a stopping of the sun. Surrounded, as we are, with artificial light at all seasons of the year, it may be difficult to understand the significance that early temperate zone humans attached to the one day when the sun, which had been inexorably moving lower and lower in the sky, stopped its descent. Back when we believed in fickle gods who might do anything to us or for us, people built great fires and performed all sorts of rituals and entreaties in hopes of luring the sun back from its distant journey, just as we now deck our houses and businesses with lights. The day the sun stopped moving away and began to return was probably the greatest day each year.

Long before we had calendars or months or weeks, people knew intimately the pattern of movement of the sun, source of warmth and life. That the hours of light began to lengthen and the conviction that the sun was surely returning, must have helped make the cold of winter more tolerable for those people who had winter. And it should make it more tolerable for us.

Even if we humans do not much note the beginning of longer days, we are surrounded by creatures that do. There is not likely any native plant or animal here in northern Michigan that is not at some level aware that the solstice is passed and that the days are getting longer. The built-in clock which almost all living things, plant and animal, share, is accurate to within ten minutes, even in the most unconscious plant. So surely by the first week in January on our calendar, everything but us humans will know the solstice has passed and days are lengthening. Those little hormonal signals that guide the behavior and activities of every living thing have begun to tell them that spring is on the way and they should be getting ready. Buds on plants are months from swelling and doing anything we can see, but deep down inside, they are beginning to make ready. Little microscopic hints of cell division and growth are under way.

Our exalted humanness doesn't totally keep us from awareness that days are short. Some number of people suffer notably from what is called seasonal affective disorder, appropriately abbreviated "SAD." Depression of varying degrees of seriousness is part of winter for many of us. The cure for such depression is, not surprisingly, exposure to bright light for some additional hours each day.

The solstice might appropriately remind us that we are tied to the world and all its living things by bonds much stronger and longer lasting than any of the more recently inaugurated human holidays on our calendar. Celebrate the solstice, and note with joy the longer hours of daylight.

Thank to JoAnn Elzinga and family

Editor:

(To JoAnn Elzinga and family) Again you provided with your family, a wonderful Christmas dinner for the lonely on Christmas, or whoever wanted to come.

I know how difficult it was for you this year without some help from the senior center staff and it would have been nice if the heat could have been turned on over 60F. However, even in our coats we enjoyed the wonderful food, good company and cheer.

The donation can was jingling, too and I know the money went to the food pantry. All in memory of your husband Dick, who never wanted anyone to be hungry.

Again, Thank you!

Refueling our economy with clean cars

Editor:

As a Charlevoix High School graduate of 2007 and a recent Michigan State Graduate, I've spent the past decade of my life exploring Michigan's beauty but also our faltering economy and job crisis. This year, I have been working around the country encouraging environmental and social change. But my attention is always brought back to Michigan, where my heart and my home is. Our home is in an economic and environmental crisis that can no longer be ignored.

America's dependence on oil has alarming consequences for our environment, national security, and our economy. Fortunately, we have the technology to make our cars much cleaner and more fuel efficient. Innovations such as high-strength lightweight materials and six- and seven-speed transmissions make conventional internal combustion engine vehicles more efficient, and significantly curb our dependence on oil.

The Obama administration is doing the groundwork to tackle this problem by proposing strong new pollution and fuel efficiency standards for cars and trucks sold in 2017 through 2025. These standards will be the largest step the U.S. has ever taken to get off oil – and tackle global warming.

As the heart of the American auto industry, Michigan needs to take the lead and support clean vehicle standards that will jumpstart our manufacturing economy once again.

From now until January 30th, there is a public comment period being held to hear what people have to say about these standards. I urge Charlevoix to make their voices heard and help Michigan get back on track submit a public comment to a-and-r-Docket@epa.gov (include "Docket ID No. EPA-HQ-OAR-2010-0799" in the subject line) in support of strong clean car standards.

Emily Helfling

Emily Helfling is a 2007 Charlevoix High School graduate. In May she graduated from Michigan State University with bachelor's degree majoring in political science specializing in environmental studies. She has interned at the Sierra Club in Washington DC and is currently in Green Corps' Field School for environmental organizing, where she travels the country working with environmental non profits. Right now, she is working with Environment Michigan on their Clean Cars Campaign.

Charters, traditional public schools are on the same team

The following guest commentary was written by Phoebe Golis, who is the K-2 teacher, curriculum director, Title I coordinator, school improvement coordinator, literacy programs director at Northwest Academy of Charlevoix.

I am writing in response to the column entitled, "Public education and profit don't mix." This column offered a perspective on for-profit management companies, online education, and public school academies that is not an accurate representation of the reality of any of these programs.

Mr. Knutson compares charter schools and management companies to making widgets at the cheapest possible cost, no matter the educational needs of their students. In reality, charter schools are public schools, employing teachers who are committed to educating students. Public school academies are subject to all education laws and policies as are public schools – including teacher certification requirements, curricula mandates and assessment programs.

For-profit management companies are involved in some Michigan charter schools, but not every public school academy is associated with a for-profit management company, and no northern Michigan public school academy is involved with a for-profit management company. Further, those public school academies that are working with a for-profit management company utilize these services for administrative and management needs, not the daily operation of the school.

Online education is a new program offered in Michigan by two Cyber-schools and many public schools – both charter and traditional. In fact, both Northwest Academy and Charlevoix Public Schools are approved for Seat Time Waiver programs through the Michigan Department of Education. In his column Mr. Knutson envisions exclusively for-profit online education programs employing teachers in India making minimum wage and teaching more than 200 students at a

Youth Advisory Committee awards $13,000 in grants

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation Youth Advisory Committee recently awarded $13,000 in grants to among six local nonprofit agencies offering programs that benefit youth organizations.

The Youth Advisory Committee is made up of 16 high school students representing Beaver Island, Boyne City, Boyne Falls, Charlevoix, East Jordan and Northwest Academy. Twice each year these young people are faced with the challenge of determining how distributions from the Youth Fund can best be used to add value to the lives of young people residing in Charlevoix County.

"Our Youth Advisory Committee is very excited to make very important decisions to better help the youth in our area. Money is tight in our economy right now so helping nonprofit organizations is a big job. With the needs growing, so are our responsibilities as YAC members," Kiersten Bielas, a junior at Boyne Falls High School, and YAC member, said.

"Members of the Youth Advisory Committee are very mindful when making decisions and a lot of thought and heart' goes into the discussions that lead to determining the awards to grantees," said Jennifer Booher, the Com-

Credit union approves member bonuses

Bay Winds Federal Credit Union recently announced that a $500,000 bonus dividend was paid to member-owners on Dec. 31, 2011. The Board of Directors approved the dividend payout at the board meeting on Dec. 15.

The active participation of both borrowers and savers contributed to a successful year for Bay Winds, credit union officials said. The bonus dividend was based on dividends earned on qualifying share accounts and/or interest paid on applicable loans.

"Bay Winds has stayed true to its philosophy and motto it pays to belong," said David Leusink, Bay Winds President & CEO. "Bad economy and all, we're proud to be in a position, for the third time in six years, to reward our member-owners with this bonus dividend as an appreciation of their business and loyalty."

Bay Winds Federal Credit Union returns its profits to its member-owners in the form of lower loan rates, higher savings dividends and lower fees. This bonus dividend is a supplement to dividends members earns everyday, organization officials said.

"It's a testament to our continuing commitment to sound financial practices, lending decisions and operating efficiencies while ensuring a safe harbor for our members hard earned money," said Leusink.

Founded in 1957, Bay Winds Federal Credit Union now serves members in Charlevoix, Emmet, Antrim, Cheboygan and Grand Traverse counties. In its 54th year, Bay Winds has more than 24,000 members with assets in excess of $134 million. For more information, please visit www.baywindsfcu.com.

time. In reality, Michigan has begun only two cyber-schools. It is not available to any other schools, and the state is not entertaining any other cyber-school proposals at this time, let alone outsourcing them to third-world countries.

While many in the education community continue to perceive public school academies versus traditional public schools as an either-or, one is good, one is bad choice, I present an alternate view.

While for many students and their families, the traditional public school is the best fit for them, other students and families prefer a different choice. It does not necessarily follow that one school is good and the other bad, rather one approach fits the needs of an individual student and family better than the other. These decisions can be made by families based on the importance they place on sports programs, music programs, class sizes, or any other plethora of interests a family may have.

Online education will be the same situation, it will not take over public school systems, teachers will not be outsourced to India. Rather, some students and families will choose to take advantage of the opportunity for a variety of reasons – religious reasons, families with students who travel for special interests and opportunities, or students who are not comfortable in a traditional setting. And many more students and families will continue to attend school in a traditional setting.

I agree with Mr. Knutson, education is not a business. It is about providing opportunity to every student, in every situation, in any way that fits the needs of that student. So what if that is online? Or in a smaller class? Educators are educators first – whether they work in a traditional public school, public school academy, online, or in a private school. Every educator is dedicated to their students' learning, and it is does not serve the educational needs of our students to insinuate otherwise.

Education should not be viewed in the same way we support sports teams – mine is great, yours is bad. We need to move away from this mentality. Charters and traditional schools are not opposing teams, rather we are working together to educate the leaders of tomorrow. Unfortunately, there are those who wish to maintain an adversarial relationship between public schools. This removes the focus from our children to a puppeteer-driven discussion about the validity of choice in education. As educators in today's climate of educational reform, it is imperative that all teachers support each other in our common goal: the education of our youth.

Cuts, increased taxes and service fees on table for senior programs

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS REVIEW STAFF WRITER

A plan to overhaul senior programs in Charlevoix County will ramp up in coming weeks before a final recommendation to county leaders.

Charlevoix County Commission on Aging director Jack Messer said the agency recently wrapped up a series of meetings about how to retool the county's senior programs to reduce expenses, increase revenues or both. The idea, Messer said, is to develop a financially sustainable model to address the approaching wave of new seniors, while not cutting current senior programs.

"The county was pretty much unified with their opinions," Messer said at the Dec. 28 Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners meeting.

County commissioners heard Messer's report about the four public meetings that took place during December in Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan and on Beaver Island. About 50 people showed up to offer public comments, Messer said.

The general consensus is that the combination of budget cuts, a modest increase in taxes and a new fee-based system for services will best address both the program needs of the next senior generation and the organization's deficit budget, in the red by hundreds of thousands.

"That theme pretty much resonated with everyone," Messer said.

Participants expressed support for an increased senior millage consistent with needs, as well as an income-based fee structure for in-home services,

Although parking meters like these will be returning to Bridge Street in downtown Charlevoix this summer, they won't be coming back to the parking lots on the west side of Bridge Street, following city council action this week.

plans to have discussions with downtown business owners in which he will suggest that employers encourage their workers not to park in the lots behind the downtown stores. He also said plans are in the works to place signs that will direct visitors to the locations of the free parking lots

— Also on Tuesday, the city council approved a request to rezone the property at 106 East Garfield St. from public reserve to professional office. The rezoning request was made by the Charlevoix American Legion, which has owned the property and used the building on it as its post since 1920. In November 2010, Legion officials, citing increased costs and dwindling membership decided to sell the property and have since been sharing facilities with the Charlevoix VFW post just north of the city. The zoning change will allow for a pending sale of the property to a buyer who wishes to turn the building into a dentist's office. According to documents filed with the city, there are no plans to modify the exterior of the building or the parking area. At its December meeting, the city planning commission recommended in favor of the zoning change and the matter passed city council unanimously.

– The council also extended a moratorium on sexually-oriented businesses within the city limits for another year. The city's previous moratorium was set to expire in early February. City planner Mike Spencer explained that regulations on sexually-oriented businesses will be addressed in the city zooing ordinance overhaul that is currently in process, but he said the new zoning ordinance will not be ready before the previous moratorium expires. He told the council he does not expect the full 12 months will be needed to complete the new ordinance.

— Council also set two public hearings on upcoming budget matters, both of them will take place at 7 p.m. on Feb. 20. One hearing is for the fiscal-year-end budget amendments that the council will need to make to balance its books on the 2011-12 budget, the other is for the budget that it will set for 2012-13. The city council also scheduled a work session on its 2012-13 budget for 5:30 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 9, in the city council chambers.

PROJECT COST

to Western Avenue, very near U.S. 31. That section is estimated to cost $3.29 million, and bids will be opened Feb. 3 in Boyne City. The deadline for that work is at September's end.

Charlevoix County Road Commission manager Pat Harmon said he hopes actual project costs come in below the engineer's estimates.

"The estimates are conservative," he said.

Northwest Design Group of Petoskey, completed the engineering and cost estimates for the road commission.

Road commission chairman Doug Way said contractors are "pretty hungry" for work in this economy, so officials hope to receive competitive bids. Additionally, this particular road is in dire need of repairs, he said.

"We want to see it done. It's a very rough, dangerous road," Way said.

In November, county commissioners transferred $1 million from the general fund to the road fund specifically to help pay for the work on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road. That will be combined with nearly $1 million in federal funds, $1.45 million in road commission savings and revenues from next year's county-wide road levy collections, estimated around $1.5 million, Harmon said.

"Everybody tells me it's the worst road in the county," Harmon said. "I'd just as soon get it done, get it behind us and it won't be the worst road in the county anymore."

Long said he is eager for the road overhaul that will remedy the many holes and uneven patches from temporary fixes over the years.

"I think it will be great. It's long overdue and it will be a lot safer, both in the summer and the winter," he said. "I am 150 percent for it."

Road officials previously repaved the 2.8 miles from Sumner Road to Nelson Road at a cost of about $874,000.

SHERI MCWHIRTER/NEWS-REVIEW

This stretch of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road will be overhauled next year through both county and state construction projects.

In 1992 the Charlevoix County Community Foundation established the Youth Advisory Committee, empowering young people in Charlevoix County to make a difference in their communities. The committee was created in response to a statewide challenge by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, who matched funds raised for youth up to a million dollars over five years. In order to meet the requirements of the challenge, a permanently endowed Youth Fund was created to address youth issues on a countywide basis. Since its inception, committee grants to local youth projects have totaled nearly $700,000.

he said.

Several suggestions about a possible increased senior millage came out of the meetings. One option is to raise the levy rate enough to restore dollars lost when property values dropped across the county, while another is to raise the current 0.4-mill rate to the 0.7-mill statewide average, Messer said.

Participants said it's also important to ask only for what is needed so a another millage request doesn't soon follow, and also to ask for what's needed to maintain current services, not restore cuts already made, Messer said.

Commissioners agreed with Messer that the next step should be data analysis, then on to a final recommendation. Messer said he hopes to find a solution that balances actual needs with funding options.

At the same meeting, the commission also voted to assign planning commission member roles, award a nearly $50,000 bid for a county building fire alarm system, buy a $14,300 circuit court recording system update and a $8,500 video equipment upgrade for probate court.

Finally, commissioners voted to re-appoint Ward Cook to another three-year term on the Commission on Aging board. They also appointed Hugh Conklin, of Boyne City, to a three-year term on the same board and Suzanne Carlson, of Charlevoix, to a one-year term.

Choral seeking talent for 'A Little Night Music'

The Northern Michigan Chorale is collaborating with the Little Traverse Civic Theatre for their spring show, A Little Night Music. This musical is being co-directed by Peter D. Sims and Gary Albert and is being performed for the first time to local audiences. All performances will be in the Ross Stoakes Theatre, at the Crooked Tree Arts Center in Petoskey, April 26-29 and May 3-6, 2012.

The music and lyrics for A Little Night Music was written by Stephen Sondheim and tells the story of love at the turn-of-the century (19th to 20th) in Sweden. Presented on Broadway, this is a story that shows love in a warm, humorous, charming and very human way. Probably the best known of Sondheim's music from this show is "Send in the Clowns." The book was written by Hugh D. Wheeler and features a strong cast of vivid, memorable characters that span all age groups.

The cast of characters include: Anne Egerman (a giddy child bride), Count Carl-Magnus Malcolm (a vain, arrogant dragoon), Countess Charlotte Malcom (the count's manic-depressive wife), Desiree Armfeldt (worldly world-weary actress), Fredrik Egerman (middle-aged lawyer), Fredrika Armfeldt (Desiree's clever daughter), Henrik Egerman (Fredrick's gloomy, religious son), Madam Armfeldt (an elderly, brutally honest sage) and Petra (the Egerman's earthy maid).

Tryouts for these leading roles will take place at the Crooked Tree Arts Center from 7-9 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 9 and Tuesday, Jan. 10. Bring a song of your choice to sing on one of these two nights. Recalls will take place from 7-9 p.m. on Thursday, Jan. 12.

Registration for the Northern Michigan Chorale take place starting at 6:15 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 16, at the Petoskey High School choir room. The final registration date is 6:15 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 23. Rehearsals will start at 7 p.m., following registration, and continue until 9 p.m., every Monday night.

Questions specific to tryouts should be directed to Peter D. Sims at (231) 348-5215. People with questions regarding the chorale, should contact Kirk Beckstrom at (231) 590-3952 or Janada Chingwa at (231) 347-1618.

BOYS BASKETBALL

Rayders hand Suttons Bay first loss

Team returns from break strong, Elk Rapids, East Jordan up next

Andrew Plude, Andrew Potter and Sawyer Russell combined to score 44 points Tuesday as Charlevoix handed Suttons Bay its first loss of the season, 64-55, in a non-league boys' basketball game.

The win lifted Charlevoix to 4-2, while Suttons Bay is 4-1. The Rayders defeated Kalkaska, 80-47, in their last start on Dec. 20.

"With the lack of experience we have, it was nice to go into the (Christmas) break on a good note and it's nice to come out of the break with a win," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "It's good for our mentality going into Friday."

The Rayders return to Lake Michigan Conference action on Friday when they go to Elk Rapids, 3-2. Both teams are 1-1 in the league.

Plude finished with a game-high 20 points, Potter added 13 and Russell had 11 to lead the Rayders past Suttons Bay.

Charlevoix jumped to an 18-10 first-quarter lead, was up 31-23 at halftime, and maintained a 49-39 advantage after three quarters.

"I thought we got off to a good start," Wood said. "It was a good pace, but I'm not sure if it was (that we were) coming off the break, but we had a hard time putting the game away.

They (Suttons Bay) kept pushing hard and we had some defensive lapses. I'm just hoping it was us coming off the break and just getting our legs back under us."

Russell finished with eight rebounds, Plude added seven, and Potter dished out six assists.

Greg Banks scored 15 points and Aaron Orban added 13 for Suttons Bay.

Charlevoix won the JV game, 67-31. For the Rayders, Justin Pearl had 15 points, while Zach Hankins added 12, and Shane Sutherland finished with 10.

Lady Rayders fall to St. Ignace

Lauren Goldthorpe scored 17 points and Kelly Wright added 16 for the Saints as St. Ignace defeated the Charlevoix girls varsity basketball team 69-27 in a non-league contest on the Rayders' home court Wednesday.

For Charlevoix, Sydney Carlson, Jenna Way, Kelly Greyerbiehl, and Katie Hybl each scored five and Kelsey Way and Megan Peterson each had six rebounds.

"We played a good, fast tempo, and in-your-face team tonight," Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman said.

St. Igance took a 12-point lead at the end of the first quarter, 16-4, and built the lead to 35-13 by halftime.

With the loss Charlevoix fell to 3-4 overall.

Wednesday's game marked the team's first game since the Christmas break. The Rayders will travel to Elk Rapids for a Lake Michigan Conference game on Friday, Jan. 6.

Myers trading stripes for Spartan green

Rayder soccer standout Ben Myers transferring from Clemson to Michigan State

Steve Foley

FILE PHOTO

Former Charlevoix High School soccer standout Ben Myers will transfer from Clemson University to Michigan State University, where the sophomore midfielder is expected to join the Spartan roster in the fall 2012 season.

Playing Division I college soccer has been a dream come true so far for Charlevoix's Ben Myers.

Unfortunately, the chase of that dream which eventually led him on the campus at Clemson University — some 1,000 miles away from friends and family in Northern Michigan — weighed heavily on the mind of Myers, who left Charlevoix High School a year ago as the school's all-time leading scorer.

After completing his freshman season with the Clemson Tigers in the always tough Atlantic Coast Conference and with a heart-to-heart with coach Mike Noonan , Myers decided he would return home to Michigan and transfer to Michigan State University.

Myers, a 6-foot-1, 183 pound midfielder, will join the Spartans this fall after playing in 14 games for the Tigers last season, of which he started four and scored the game-winning goal for Clemson in a 2-0 win over conference rival South Carolina in early September.

"I'm really excited," said Myers, a two-time Division III All-State first-teamer who scored 87 goals and had 67 assists in his stellar high school career at Charlevoix. "About halfway through my season, I started to get kind of depressed and it really started to drag on with me.

"Playing soccer has always been a dream for me, but I was living so far away from home, I only saw my family once in five months."

After battling through the rigors of the season and being those seemingly endless thousand miles away from home, Myers said he met with Noonan following the season to weigh his options.

"He (Noonan) was very cooperative," Myers said. "I kept getting better through the year and I fought through it throughout the year, but it was very difficult coming from a small town in Northern Michigan. I just chose to come back home."

Myers, who in his high school senior year moved to the Detroit area to play on an elite Vardar Academy team, said he understands he's taking a risk leaving Clemson.

"Everything was perfect there soccer wise," Myers said. "We had a great young team and we were on track to do some great things. I told my coach I knew it was a huge risk, but luckily both Michigan State and Michigan contacted me and talked to me. It was huge that they still wanted me."

Myers, who led the Rayders to a pair of conference championships in his four-year career, said choosing Michigan State was an easy decision. A pair of his former Vardar teammates are on MSU's roster, as are a number of old Charlevoix classmates. Myers' mother is also a MSU alum.

"We have a really bright future," Myers said looking at his new team in East Lansing. "It's a young team, but one filled with a bunch of solid young players. I know (coach) Damon Rensing and he's been talking to me all along the way."

Myers said a year of experience in the ACC should only benefit his this fall in the Big Ten.

"The ACC is known as one of the toughest conferences in all of college soccer," Myers said. "North Carolina won the College Cup and I started and played 90 minutes against Carolina. I definitely got a taste of the best competition in the conference and I moved to Detroit my senior year to get that opportunity. That opened a lot of opportunities for me.

"If it wasn't for me moving to Detroit and sacrificing my senior year, I'd probably be playing Division III somewhere honestly," added Myers. "But I was determined to do something about it."

Myers, who broke his foot prior to his freshman season at Clemson, said he played better than he expected his first full college season.

"I thought I'd be red-shirted, but I ended up starting my second game and scored a goal against South Carolina and played in what was the best soccer atmosphere I've ever played in," Myers said.

Myers will join a Spartan team that completed the 2011 season with a 7-8-4 overall mark, and went 2-2-2 in the Big Ten Conference.

"I'm looking forward to playing closer to home next fall and working hard at the end of August, and just working hard every day," Myers said.

HOOP SHOOT

Elks to host Hoop Shoot Saturday

The Charlevoix Elks Lodge will host the 37th annual Elks "Hoop Shoot" Competition at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 7 at the Charlevoix Middle School gymnasium. The national free throw contest is for children ages 8-13. Last year, more than 3 million youngsters throughout the country participated in the competition.

There are three age categories: 8-9, 10-11, 12-13 (categories are based upon age as of April 1, 2012). Each contestant has 25 shots at the hoop. The boy and girl in each age group with the best score advance through four tiers of competition to qualify for the national finals.

Names of the national winners will be inscribed on the Elks National "Hoop Shoot" plaque, on permanent display in the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass.

Contestants must provide a copy of their birth certificate at the time of registration. The contest is free and trophies will be awarded for first and second place and third place finishers will receive medals.

LOOKING BACK…

In late 1987, pedestrians on the channel bridge did a double take when they looked down the south pier and saw that the lighthouse had taken a decided lean to the north. Investigation revealed that the entire substructure of the pier had become badly deteriorated. So much substructure had washed away that, toward the end of the pier, scuba divers could actually swim from the channel into the waters near the municipal beach by weaving through the gaps between the support rocks, some of which were held in place only by the upturned edges of the boulders or concrete slabs below them. By December the lighthouse had tilted seven degrees. Shortly afterwards, it was announced that the entire pier would have to be removed and replaced. In the spring, the lighthouse was lifted and removed by cables and crane to the area near the fish hatchery, work began in May of 1988 at a cost of $2.5 million, and the lighthouse resumed its original position later that year, now upright.

Novotny nominated for teaching honor

Shelly Novotny teaches because she loves kids. So when she recently learned she was nominated for the Michigan Department of Education's teacher of the year she was full of emotions.

"I have no idea who nominated me. I found out through the mail. But when I found out I was so shocked and surprised," she said.

Novotny, a third-grade teacher at Charlevoix Elementary School was nominated for the award this fall. Part of the requirements of the application required her to write several essays as well as gather letters of recommendation.

"It was quite the lengthy process," Novotny said.

"Shelly is an outstanding teacher. She is caring, compassionate, and makes a connection with all students on different levels," district superintendent Chel Janik said.

Novotny has been teaching for 20 years, with the last 11 in Charlevoix. Before that, she taught in Petoskey schools.

Pot plan panned

For months Charlevoix city officials have been working on amending its zoning ordinances to regulate where medical marijuana caregivers operate.

After many public meetings and discussions, the city of Charlevoix could take action to enact the proposed ordinance amendment following a public hearing set to take place during the city council meeting on Monday, Jan. 16, at city hall.

So far there has been no public input on the proposal.

But that's all likely to change on Monday if Jason Staph's plans come together.

Staph, a state-certified medical marijuana patient and Charlevoix resident is organizing a "rally" of medical marijuana proponents to attend the meeting and speak out against the proposed ordinance amendment.

Staph sat down with the Courier this week to explain why he and others like him are opposed to the city's proposed zoning change.

He said as of Monday, he was expecting anywhere from 50 to 75 people to show up for the meeting, but he's not expecting loudspeakers, signs and chanting at Monday's meeting. Instead he's simply expecting — or hoping — people to show up and voice their concerns about a proposal that Staph and others like him say would infringe upon rights guaranteed under the voter-approved Michigan Medical Marijuana Act.

Staph's first argument that under the act, the proposed zoning amendment is not enforceable, but beyond that he contends the zoning rules are generally too restrictive.

In its current form, the proposed rules would only permit certified medical marijuana caregivers to produce medical marijuana for their patients in residential zones of the city.

Staph said he agrees with that part of the proposal —

Beaver Island property owners William and Christine Albin recently won a more than $1 million settlement in an eminent domain lawsuit filed by Peaine and St. James townships. The 150 acres awarded to the townships will be used for airport purposes on the Lake Michigan island that is accessible year-round only by air. Ferry service runs between St. James Harbor and Charlevoix, save during much of winter.

Island couple wins $1 million in eminent domain court case

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Beaver Island residents William and Christine Albin recently won a more than $1 million judgment for 150 acres taken from them through eminent domain.

Both Peaine and St. James townships filed a civil lawsuit in 2010 to compel the Albins to sell their property on the island for airport purposes. A jury decided in November the Albins are owed $693,000 as just compensation for the land taken in August 2003, according to the written judgment.

Officials previously paid the Albins what they estimated the court would decide just compensation to be: $191,000.

Added to the payout is nearly $293,000 in interest, nearly $265,000 in attorney fees and more than $26,000 in taxable costs. That means the Albins will receive almost another $1,086,000 following the court's decision.

"I don't know about happy, but they are satisfied," said Darius Dynkowski, one of the Albins' Bloomfield Hills-based attorneys. "Clearly, we're pleased. We're glad it's finally over."

The judgment includes an interesting quid pro quo, as well. The Albins waived the township's reimbursement of property taxes from the years during the dispute, while the townships waived the right to an appeal.

Attorney Robert Buchanan, of Grand Rapids, who represented both townships, said the airport needed the land for a runway extension planned in 2001. Some of the disputed land is in what's called the runway protection zone, a federal airport object-clearing policy.

> "I don't know about happy, but they are satisfied,"
> - Darius Dynkowski

"They (the townships) are greatly disappointed with the outcome of the case and the amount they need to pay, as am I," Buchanan said. "It's something that had to be done."

He said the townships hope to borrow against future federal airport entitlements to pay the court-ordered tab.

"We're very hopeful federal airport funds will fund the judgment," Buchanan said.

But that will mean any potentially federally funded improvements or upgrades at the island airport will be delayed by however long it takes to pay the judgment.

Dynkowski said the Albins originally bought the property to build a home, perhaps with a Lake Michigan view. Eventually, they bought a different house on the island.

Much of the dispute revolved around whether the Albins would receive payment for the 20 acres the townships wanted for the airport, or the 150 acres the Albins argued they really lost. The 130-acre difference includes bluffs that make the site unsuitable for construction — and therefore unable to be sold, too, Dynkowski said.

"They were stuck with it, effectively, until the township filed suit," he said.

The Albins could not be reached for comments.

"The Albins are glad this is over and they can move on with their lives on the island," Dynkowski said.

Charlevoix community check-up

Stave Zucker

CHRIS LEESE/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Chief Charles Burleigh, commander of Coast Guard Station Charlevoix, talks about the new rescue boat the station is expecting to receive in 2013 during the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce's second annual State of the Community event at Castle Farms Wednesday.

It may not be a new cutter, but Charlevoix is set to get a new Coast Guard vessel as early as next year.

The news from Coast Guard Station Charlevoix Chief Charles Burleigh, that the station is scheduled to receive a new rescue boat to replace its aging 41-foot utility boat, was just one of many bits of community information, updates and reports doled out (along with some lunch) at the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce's second annual State of the Community event at Castle Farms Wednesday.

In addition to Burleigh, other community leaders who spoke at the event included chamber president Erin Bemis, Charlevoix City Manager Rob Straebel, Northwest Michigan Department of Heath Medical Director Joshua Meyerson, and Charlevoix County Clerk Cheryl Potter-Browe.

Burleigh said the new 45-foot response boat-medium, will replace the 1970s-era 41-foot utility boat, which is currently one of two rescue and patrol boats assigned to the station. He said the new vessel will be powered by water jets instead of propellers and its larger size will allow for more crew comfort during long patrols. He also highlighted a new system that is still in the process of coming online at the station — a radio system dubbed "Rescue 21." He said the new system not only has a wider broadcast and reception reach, but it also can record radio traffic and triangulate radio signals allowing rescuers to get a fix on where a distress call is originating.

Burleigh said typically by this time of the year, the station has switched over to ice rescue operations and training, but the unusually warm winter to-date has prevented many of those activities.

In his report Burleigh said in 2011 station crews were involved with 62 search and rescue cases, logged 1,050 underway hours, conducted 195 vessel boardings, made two "boating under the influence" arrests and made four "vessel terminations" for unsafe or hazardous conditions.

As in past years, station crews also participated in several events including Cherry Festival, Boyne Thunder, several lake swims, and provided security for several fireworks shows, including Venetian Festival.

Looking forward, besides anticipating the arrival of their new rescue boat, station crews expect to be spending more time working with commercial vessels and are continuing their emphasis on a program called Operation Paddle Smart. Burleigh explained the program simply involves owners of non-motorized craft, such as row boats, canoes and kayaks to place a sticker on the vessel with their contact information, making it easier for crews to reunite owners with their property should it drift away from them.

For more information on this or other U.S. Coast Guard programs, contact Station Charlevoix at (231) 547-2565.

Chamber check-in Chamber president Erin Bemis highlighted several events from 2011 in her report.

Bemis said the chamber's three main goals for the year were to spend more time on member retention and less on recruitment; review programming offered and increasing communication with and education of its members and the community.

Bemis pointed to several new events that were launched in 2011 that were not only successful, but will be continued and/or expanded this year. The state of the community address itself was one such event that began in 2011.

Another event that she said was very successful and is expected to double in size this year is the Business Expo and Job Fair, slated this year for March 23 and 24 at Castle Farms.

In 2011 the chamber, working with the other chambers of commerce in the county established the Leadership Charlevoix County program, which seeks to connect today's community leaders with young professionals in the community to mentor and groom them for stepping into leadership roles in the future.

Bemis said plans call for that program to grow as well in the form of a youth leadership program that will take many of the same principles into area high schools.

To read all of the agency reports online, visit charlevoixcourier.com

Bemis said the chamber continued its efforts to make inroads with leaders in Lansing through various avenues, including participation in a regional chamber organization.

Also high on the chamber's list of notable 2011 milestones was being named Michigan's mid-sized Chamber of the Year at the annual Michigan Association of Chamber Professionals Leadership Conference for the second year in a row.

Looking forward, Bemis said the chamber's plans and goals include continuing to grow the member-to-member discount program, launching a mystery shopper program, introducing a "speed networking" event, continuing to work together with the downtown development authority on economic development, re-establishing an industrial development committee, and continuing other educational programs.

City holds steady

Charlevoix City Manager Rob Straebel filled in for mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson at the lectern Wednesday because Carlson was unable to get away from his teaching duties at Charlevoix High School.

Straebel said that city officials are encouraged by some numbers that have improved in the city and the area over the past year. Among the numbers he cited were the first anticipated drop in the jobless rate in five years; property values that actually ticked up a bit in the city last year after seeing a nearly 8 percent drop in 2009-10. He said the fact that property values have held even in the face of the city's declining population is a true testament to the "quality of life and great amenities we have."

Among the milestones from the past year Straebel highlighted were strides made on agreements and grants for the Lake to Lake Trail, passing a new recreational master plan, work on a possible project with the school district to sell excess capacity on the entities' shared fiber-optic network, taking over operational responsibility for the Charlevoix Municipal Airport, and the marina posting its best year to date since its overhaul. He also pointed to several grants that the city was able to obtain, including $975,000 for airport equipment from the Federal Aviation Administration and $90,000 for energy efficiency upgrades. Capital improvement projects for the year included a new water main on Bridge Street, street and utility work on Meech Street and repairs at the Charlevoix Golf Club clubhouse.

Looking forward, he said city leaders who are in the midst of working out the budget for the 2012-13 fiscal year will continue to take a very conservative approach to spending. Capital improvement projects on the horizon include street and utility work on Clinton Street and improvements to the now-dirt White parking lot off Clinton Street. He said the city continues to move forward with its plans to use mostly Federal Aviation Administration grant money to build a new terminal at the airport either this year or next.

County updates

Charlevoix County Clerk Cherie Browe said one of the biggest challenges for county officials early in 2011 was re-apportioning the county commissioner districts. Browe said the changes from the reapportionment, mean that for the first time since 1980 none of cities and townships (except Evangeline Township) are split between two commissioner districts. The new districts also mean that come November, two current commissioners will now be from the same district and another district will have no incumbent.

Browe said another big effort made at the county this year was toward energy efficiency. Many of those efforts have paid off with significant cost savings, she said.

She said conservative spending allowed for a $1 million budget surplus to be used for the county's road fund, to be reimbursed by the county-wide road millage.

Browe said an effort to pay off the county's debt on the Grandview Bond — likely this year — will save about $700,000 in 2012 alone.

She said the county was also able to save about $500,000 with recent changes it made to the health care plan it offers its employees.

She noted the county's land bank was able to buy and sell several properties.

Two other developments Browe highlighted included working with Boyne City officials to procure grant money for much of the first phase of a non-motorized trail along Boyne City-Charlevoix Road and a recent move to work with the nonprofit organization Merit to set up the county building as an anchor point for fiber optic internet connections.

Browe concluded saying the county's goals for 2012 are "to make sure we are financially responsible to the taxpayers and provide the best service we can."

Health checkup

Dr. Joshua Meyerson from the health department said in a recent study comparing overall health among Michigan counties, Charlevoix County scored in the top 25 percent in all five categories.

But, he said, that information must be taken with a grain of salt. (Just a grain, mind you.)

"Michigan overall isn't a very healthy state."

Meyerson said one of the agency's biggest challenges for the year was replacing long-time health officer Gerry Chase.

He pointed to other priorities for the agency including helping to improve access to quality clinical health care, controlling the spread of communicable diseases, providing care and support to pregnant women, new mothers and families with young children. He said health department officials are also focusing their efforts on improving "care transition" between home and hospital or care facilities.

He said staff also continues their efforts to reduce health risk behaviors, such as obesity, smoking and inactivity, a new early childhood behavioral health initiative and supporting the placement of nurses in area schools.

In addition to the comments offered by the above five speakers, those who attended Wednesday's event received a 39-page booklet containing reports from 35 different community organizations.

Try turning your challenges into 'teachable moments'

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

"When a situation or student begins to frustrate you, look at it as a teachable moment."

That's a quote someone said more than once at professional development meetings most educators attend. No situation or student is out to get you, what's really happening and what's been presented is a teachable moment. Now that I take time in my day to reflect, I realize how true that statement really is. Life presents us with many moments that make us wonder, "What was that person thinking?" or "I would do that differently?" Truth is, every person and every situation we are presented with on a daily basis is there to teach us something. For me, it's usually learning to be patient, hearing someone out and taking the time to listen to the whole scenario.

Situations such as long lines at the grocery store or the post office have taught me about patience. It's also educated me about food choices, the latest new thing on a magazine cover and the best way to mail small items. While waiting at a red light rather than thinking, "I should have slipped through the yellow," or "Now I'll be late," I stop and reflect on my day or make a list of what I want to complete or, better yet, take a moment to myself and relax. When we look at situations as a learning curve rather than the negative, we are apt to feel less stressed.

When someone or something is frustrating, it's helpful to go right to telling yourself, "What are you or what is this situation trying to teach me?" With this in mind, it gives a different spin to your thinking and you'll find yourself more relaxed and better able to deal with what you've been given. Once this lesson is realized, the problem seems to be less of a problem.

Life shouldn't be lived from one crisis to the next, because life is meant to be savored and not looked at as a series of emergencies. Every staff member I've ever met in a hospital emergency room is calm and, in part, that's because they are not immediately feeling the problem. I think that's the way we should be, too: Not looking at major problems as emergencies that need immediate fixing, but rather put ourselves a step away by taking a breath, listening and then deciding whether it's really a problem just for you or is it problematic for everyone around you. Once you've decided this try to look at all points of view as if you were clueless (that part is easy for me), then you can learn even more.

Once you do this, you'll realize the situation may seem less irritating and you'll get clarity on what you may want or need to do.

If, out of frustration, you are quick to point out someone's thought as incorrect or that their point of view is wrong, you may want to hold that thought. You'll rarely hear, "Thank you for letting me know I was wrong" or "Gee, that was nice of you." Instead, turn it into a teachable moment and keep your thoughts to yourself and let them be heard or offer a different point of view while still accepting theirs. The result is less defensiveness, more appreciation and the added plus that all egos remain intact.

So, if you're quick to react or make retorts, rather than getting stumped or getting even, get it together. Each day will present you with new challenges and teachable moments and that, my friend, is the way we learn about ourselves and how we best help others.

LETTERS to the editor

Thank a school board member this month

Editor:

Last January, I wrote a letter stating that school board of education members have the most important volunteer jobs in the state of Michigan while facing some of the toughest challenges. This statement is just as factual in 2012 as it was in 2011 and probably more after all of the changes in the educational laws approved last year by our legislature and signed into law by the Governor. Just like in many communities, the Charlevoix school board is represented by seven people that have demonstrated extraordinary dedication to our children and their academic learning.

The role of the school board is to promote the district's vision, mission and goals: develop policies to achieve them; encourage continuous improvement in student learning; ensure schools are accountable to the community; and advocate at the local, state, and federal levels in support of public education.

Our local school board is responsible for the learning of approximately 1,100 students. They oversee an annual budget of more than $10 million and provide employment for more than 100 people who work in our district. Most critically, school board members make decisions which affect our children for the rest of their lives.

In recognition of their dedicated service, January is designated School Board Recognition Month in Michigan. Sometime during this month, please take time to thank the members of our school board for their efforts on behalf of our community and its children.

The individuals serving as members of the Charlevoix School Board for 2012 are: John McLean, Valerie Snyder, Kevin Pearsall, Mike Pearsall, Glen Catt, Nancy Allison and Dick Joseph. We all should be grateful for each person's dedication and their many hours of service to our schools.

Sincerely,
Chet Janik
Superintendent,
Charlevoix Public Schools.

Toys for Tots organizers say 'Thanks'

Editor:

Thank you for all the wonderful volunteers, businesses, churches, schools, community agencies and "hospital heros" who helped make the 2011 Toys for Tots drive an overwhelming success.

We collected and distributed more than 2,039 toys to 225 families with 462 children.

This distribution was possible only through the dedication of the many volunteers who contributed countless hours for the Charlevoix Christmas Project.

Thanks again to the Bethany Lutheran Church who again hosted the collection and distribution of toys, clothes, food and fun to our community.

A personal thanks to Bev Boss, Arlene and Ken Staley, Geo Wahl, Charlie Butcher, Gary Miller, Tina Foltz, Jim Jefferies, Donna and Dave Heeres, Lonnie Mahoney, Will Hassfold, Steve Zucker, Sheilah and Dick Bogart, and to the many school teachers, students, drivers and church groups who helped make Christmas a little brighter for our community.

We also wish to thank all of the businesses, organizations that served as drop-off locations for this year's campaign, including:

LOOKING BACK…

Charlevoix's first reliable water system, from an artesian well, was installed in 1892 in a small brick building just to the east of Ward Bros. on the south shore of Round Lake. By 1905 the town had grown so much that a new system would have be be installed to meet the increased demand. So in 1906 a water plant was built south of the Lake Michigan municipal beach to bring in lake water, which was then pumped into a huge water tower that presided over the bluff above the channel next to what became the Sandcastle Condominium on Park Avenue. It stood there for the next 89 years, a landmark for mariners and landlubbers alike. Those who drove into town on U.S. 31 south could see it from miles away. But after almost nine decades, it had deteriorated and was beginning to fall apart. A new tower had been installed by the golf course on Division Street. Preservationists wanted to make it into an observation tower, but the restoration, maintenance, and insurance expenses would have been astronomical. So the tower's thin legs were partially torched through, cables attached, and over it came in a few seconds in May of 1995 to bite the dust with a groundshaking thud and leave a big hole in the sky.

Hospital welcomes first baby of 2012

Rachel Brougham
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Alisha and Dan Hissong of Boyne City expected a New Year's Eve baby. Instead, their daughter, Elliana Penelope, turned out to be the first baby born at Charlevoix Area Hospital in 2012.

Elliana was born at 7:16 p.m., Jan. 3. At birth, she weighed 7 pounds, 4 ounces and was 20 inches long.

Alisha was in Petoskey on Tuesday afternoon when she began having contractions.

"It all happened much faster than I expected," she said.

"I felt fine, then about 3:30 p.m. or so things really picked up. I was in Petoskey and the funny thing is, I stopped at the Grain Train on the way home because we needed flour."

When Alisha arrived home, contractions had worsened. She made some phone calls, and she and Dan left for the hospital.

"We got to the hospital at 6:45 p.m. and she was born at 7:16 p.m., so yeah, it was really close."

The Hissongs have been married since 2003, and this is their second child. Their oldest daughter, Ava, is 2.

Alisha and Elliana returned home Thursday.

"It just feels good to be home and to be able to get to know her," Alisha said.

Elliana's grandparents are Robin and Jim Berry and Dave and Kerry Peck, all of Boyne City, Lyle Hissong of Oscoda and Lauri and Mark Lindsay of Rockford. Her great-grandparents are Antoinette Gunderson and Don Peck, and Bob and Ruth Nichols, all of Boyne City and Stanley Hissong of Flint.

In honor of Elliana being the first baby to be born in Charlevoix County in 2012, the hospital presented the family with a gift basket.

Program offers opportunity for old medicine drop-off

NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Since 2009, a nonprofit has partnered with pharmacies across the state of Michigan to provide drop-off points for outdated and unused medications — and there are four such drop off points in Northern Michigan.

The Yellow Jug Old Drugs program, through the Great Lakes Clean Water Organization, collects drugs at more than 200 pharmacies in Michigan.

One such drop-off point is Central Drug Store in Charlevoix. Anyone interested in disposing of medications can bring medicines to the pharmacy.

"We take anything except controlled substances," said John Ochs, co-owner of the pharmacy. "What I like patients to do is I get the jug out, and they pour the medicine into it. That way, it keeps somebody from seeing what medication a person is taking."

He can accept prescriptions, over-the-counter medications, liquid medications, creams and ointments.

"Each pharmacy is provided a list of what they can accept," said Chris Angel, co-founder and current volunteer president of the clean water organization and the Yellow Jugs Old Drugs program.

What makes his organization different from other drug collection programs is that patients can drop off medicine at participating pharmacies any time the pharmacy is open and regardless of whether the person is a customer of the pharmacy.

"For years, the recommended way of disposing of medicine was flushing it down the toilet," said Angel. "But of course, we're seeing a lot of negative effects coming from that."

Participating pharmacies in the area include Central Drug Store in Charlevoix, Prescription Services Pharmacy in Petoskey, Glen's Pharmacy in Bellaire and Central Lake Pharmacy in Central Lake.

Every four months, volunteers with Great Lakes Clean Water Organization drive to each pharmacy to pick up the collected medicine. The medicine is then destroyed in a high-temperature incinerator, the recommended procedure for disposing of drugs, said Angel.

Since its inception, the program has collected more than 30,000 pounds of unwanted medicine, and volunteers expect to collect another 6,000 pounds by the end of January.

Gregory avoids further jail time

Woman's mental status figured heavily in manslaughter case

Steve Zucker

Gregory

A Charlevoix-area woman who killed her ailing 94-year-old mother last year rather than see her admitted to a nursing home will not likely spend any more time behind bars.

On Friday, Jan. 6, Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard M. Pajtas sentenced Sandra Gregory, 75, to serve one year in jail with credit for 103 days served and the balance to be served on an electronic tether. Gregory pleaded no contest last month to a charge of manslaughter in connection the death of her mother Amelia Patricia Gregory, on March 27.

The plea was part of a plea agreement with the Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney's office in exchange for which the original charge of open murder — which is punishable by up to life in prison — was dismissed.

Emergency crews were called to the Gregory residence south of Charlevoix around 8 p.m. on March 27 to a report of a deceased elderly woman in the residence.

According to court documents, Gregory told police that earlier in the day her mother had told her she would rather be with her dead husband than be admitted to a nursing home and that sometime after that conversation she attempted to smother her mother with a pillow and then hit her on the head with a lamp.

Early on in the case Gregory's defense attorney Kraag Lieberman asserted an insanity defense for Gregory. The defense also conceded early on that Gregory was responsible for her mother's death.

Also playing into Jarema's decision were differing opinions from two psychiatrists on whether Gregory was "criminally insane" at the time of the crime.

At the sentencing hearing Lieberman said doctors have diagnosed Gregory with vascular dementia and major depressive disorder, and noted that the combination of these and some physical conditions will likely mean she'll need care herself going forward.

County prosecutor John Jarema told Judge Pajtas that of all the cases he's handled in 15 years working as prosecutor or an assistant prosecutor, Gregory's case has been one of the most difficult.

Jarema said his main duty as prosecutor is to see that "justice is served," which he said why he offered the plea agreement in Gregory's case.

Jarema said many people have called, written, or stopped by his office to offer comments supportive of Gregory. He said by all accounts, Gregory was a loving person who had been her mother's primary caregiver since 1985. But in the time leading up to her death, Amelia had suffered a mini-stroke, and was having trouble seeing. He said Gregory, was having some health issues of her own, making caring for her mother increasingly difficult and she had just been told by a doctor that her mother would need to be placed in a nursing home.

Jarema told the court that, to a degree, he thinks the community at-large may have failed Gregory, because she may not have known about the senior services available that could have helped lighten her caregiving load.

"What bothers me is that she thought this was her only choice," Jarema said. "I don't think the defendant knew about the services available."

When her opportunity to speak came Friday, Gregory said, "I'm sorry for the way it happened, but I did love my mom."

Although the manslaughter charge to which Gregory pleaded no contest carries a maximum penalty of up to 15 years in prison, probation department's scoring of for the state's sentencing guidelines placed her minimum sentence range at 12 to 24 months.

At that range, the judge had the option of sending Gregory to state prison, or handing down a county jail sentence. Both Lieberman and Jarema lobbied for the judge not to send Gregory to prison.

Before handing down the sentence Friday, Judge Pajtas noted that he does not view Gregory as a danger to society and said making her spend more time in jail would not serve any purpose.

Lieberman had also requested a downward departure from the 12 month minimum sentencing range. But Judge Pajtas declined, saying the court rules for such an action require him to do so base on circumstances that are "objective and verifiable" and "outside of the mind."

The guideline departure ultimately only would have reduced the amount of time that Gregory will have to be on the electronic tether.

Gregory was released on bond in July and has been living with her sister in Greenville since as a condition of that bond. Part of her sentence requires that she continue to live with her sister or court approved home or care facility.

Other elements of the sentence included a 24 month probation period, a requirement to comply with any and all mental health treatment and order to pay $540 in fines and costs.

At the conclusion of the hearing Gregory shared tearful hugs with several family members who were in the courtroom.

What Does Investment Landscape Look Like in 2012?

As an investor, you know that 2011 was a somewhat "choppy" year, with the financial markets going through many ups and downs. So what can you expect in 2012?

As baseball Hall of Famer Yogi Berra is quoted as saying: "It's hard to make predictions — especially about the future." And these words are certainly applicable for anyone who would like an accurate forecast of the investment climate.

Yet we do know of some factors that may affect your portfolio in the months ahead. Here are a few of them:

- Strong business fundamentals — This past year, all the noise about the debt ceiling debate, the size of the U.S. deficit and the European financial situation tended to drown out some fairly good news: U.S. businesses' balance sheets were strong for the most part, borrowing costs remained low, and corporate profits were good — and corporate profitability remains a key driver of stock prices. Heading into 2012, these fundamentals continue to look positive, which may bode well for investors.
- Europe's debt crisis — Greece's economic problems made a lot of news in 2011, but they weren't the end of the story in Europe, as major financial difficulties also face Italy, Spain, Portugal and Ireland. It's by no means clear how these problems will be resolved, so don't be surprised to see them lead to intermittent, if short-lived, shocks to the markets.
- Election-year patterns — As you're well aware, we're voting for president in 2012. But you might be surprised to learn that the S&P 500 index has shown negative returns in only three of the last 21 presidential election years. Coincidence? No one can say for sure — and at this point, no one can say if this pattern of positive returns will continue during this election year. Still, it's an interesting phenomenon. So there you have it: the good, the bad and the quirky. Take them all together, and you still may not be able to foresee what will happen with the markets this year, but you'll have a lot to think about.

But instead of trying to predict what will happen in 2012, you may be better off following these tried-and-true investment strategies:

Diversify your holdings. By spreading your money among a wide range of investments, you can reduce the effects of volatility on your portfolio. Keep in mind, though, that diversification, by itself, can't guarantee profits or protect against loss.

Don't ignore your risk tolerance. If you worry excessively about market fluctuations, you may have too much risk in your portfolio, which means you may need to make some changes.

Always look at the "big picture." Financial markets will always fluctuate. But if you can keep your focus on your long-term objectives, and make decisions accordingly, you can avoid overreacting to short-term events.

Like other years, 2012 will bring with it periods of both turbulence and smooth sailing. But by making the right investment moves, you can still chart a course that can allow you to move ever closer to your future goals.

tween first and second grade, though.

While switching grades requires a lot of work, Novotny does not mind the change of pace.

"I'm not one of those teachers that likes to teach the same grade year after year. I like the challenge of working with different grades. I get bored if I teach the same grade too many times in a row," she said.

And after 20 years, Novotny still believes she made the right career choice.

"I love teaching. After all these years I still wake up every day and can't wait to go to work and see the kids. I love the kids. I do it for them," she said.

Novotny went to Central Michigan University for her undergraduate degree and then on to Michigan State University for her master's degree. She said she went into teaching because she was inspired by her fifth-grade teacher who took a special interest in her.

"I was a struggling student and she made a huge impact on me. And having those experiences, I feel like I can relate better to my students now," she added.

And according to Janik, Novotny not only relates well with her students but she works well with parents too. He believes this is one of the reasons Novotny was nominated for teacher of the year in the first place.

"In all my time with the district, I've never had a teacher nominated, but she deserves it," he said.

Although winning the award will be an honor, Novotny said there are more benefits to winning other than simply the award itself.

"You get to choose a platform and speak at state board meetings," she said.

If chosen, Novotny said the two things she would like to focus on with the state include childhood obesity and creating volunteer in the classroom programs.

"I believe childhood obesity is a big problem. I want to see healthier lunch food options and even more gym opportunities for students," she said.

If Novotny had it her way, Charlevoix would participate in farm to school programs which brings in produce from local farmers.

"I think part of the reason we don't do it is because it is really expensive," she noted.

As for the part of her platform on volunteers, Novotny thinks this would help many districts make up for the decreasing staff.

"I said when I actually retire I'm going to volunteer. It is sad, as a teacher, to see so many of the enrichment programs we worked so hard to create get cut because of the budget, but if we had more volunteers we may be able to still offer some of that," she said.

A winner for teacher of the year will not be announced until early spring, but Novotny is still happy she was even nominated.

"You do not always feel like you have a voice at the state level as a teacher. But winning would let me (have that voice)," Novotny said.

"And, who knows where that could lead," she added.

MJ PLAN

which is consistent with a Michigan Court of Appeals ruling and his belief that the act was not intended to authorize commercial medical marijuana operations.

Under the act, there are two types of people who may be certified to grow, prepare or possess limited quantities of the marijuana. Patients are permitted to grow their own and certified caregivers are allowed to grow, prepare and possess medical marijuana for up to five patients (and themselves, if they are also a certified patient.)

The proposed rules would not affect patients, only caregivers.

But beyond restricting caregiver operations to residential areas, Staph says the ordinance goes too far.

He said the many buffer zones included around churches, parks, schools, beaches, day care facilities and other similar locations, make the ordinance far to restrictive.

"You'd have to hit the property lottery jackpot," Staph said of a care provider being able to find a parcel of property that is available within the residential zones not affected by a buffer zone restriction. A requirement that places a buffer zone between care provider homes, would further restrict available properties as soon as one or two were registered with the city.

Jason Steph

Staph said patients choose to get their medical marijuana from a care provider instead of growing themselves for many reasons. Besides a patient's physical limitations, other reasons could include factors such as, a patient who lives in an apartment, or some other location not suitable for growing the plants. He said a person may lack the skill to successfully grow the plants — especially to produce a medical grade of marijuana. He also said that successful cultivation of marijuana is often a very costly endeavor requiring special lights and other equipment to control ventilation, temperature and humidity.

Staph also noted that the ordinance could have the opposite effect than its proponents desire. He said if there are few (or no) places where caregivers are allowed to produce marijuana, it will force more patients to grow their own, which is not regulated under the ordinance. The net effect, he said, would be more, but smaller grow operations in the city.

City planner Michael Spencer, said until Staph recently came to talk with him about his concerns, the city had not received any public input at any of the many public meetings or in any other form.

Staph said the reason no one has come forward at meetings to this point is two-fold:

He said most medical marijuana patients and caregivers are very careful about who knows that they have the drug. He said many fear not only possible break-ins or robberies by those seeking the drug for illicit use, but also being targeted by police — the same reason many are hesitant to speak out in public about the ordinance.

Staph said although he disagrees with much of the proposed ordinance, he also shares the same concerns as many do about safety and security surrounding medical marijuana growing operations. He said requirements — or at least guidelines about proper equipment usage and electrical wiring are very important.

Staph said he'd like to see the city to simply abandon the proposed rules altogether. Second to that option, he'd like to see the city eliminate the buffer zone and registration requirements and simply allow caregiver operations only in residential zones.

"(Passing the proposed rules) is going to make (the city council) look like fools. And that's not what the city council is or their goal. They've amped this thing up because they don't understand."

They are worried about a problem that isn't a problem. (People who grow medical marijuana) are already here and it isn't a problem."

Spencer said at Monday's meeting the city council could table the ordinance for further study, make minor revisions and vote on it, or send it back to the planning commission if it deems major revisions are needed or it could abandon the measure altogether. In September, the council added another six months to its existing moratorium on medical marijuana caregiver operations in the city.

Rayders dominate EJ, fall to Elks

The Charlevoix Rayder boys varsity basketball team bounced back from a tough loss to Elk Rapids on Friday, Jan. 6 with a convincing win over East Jordan on Tuesday.

Elk's Rapids' three-headed scoring monster was too much for Charlevoix to overcome when it traveled to Elk Rapids on Friday, Jan. 6.

Luke Morrison had a game-high 23 points, Phil Hayes added 21, and Austin McMullin had 16 as the Elks improved to 4-2 overall, 2-1 league in handing the Rayders a 67-61 loss.

Charlie Hamilton scored a career-high 19 points, while Andrew Plude added 15, and Andrew Potter had 13 to lead the Rayders, who fell to 4-3, 1-2 following the game.

Charlevoix trailed 33-25 at halftime and 49-44 entering the fourth quarter. The Rayders managed to tie the game at one point in the final stanza.

"I'm not quite sure why we started the way we did," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "We were a little passive and didn't have the intensity we needed to have, but the pace really picked up after that.

"It was tied in the fourth quarter, but (Elk Rapids) just executed better down the stretch and they had a couple of baskets off steals.

"We scratched and clawed and were able to bring things back, but it's hard to execute like that playing on the road."

But the Rayders turned things around on Tuesday, jumping out to an early lead over East Jordan that they never relinquished in the 53-39 victory.

Charlie Hamilton hit three early 3-pointers and Andrew Potter finished with 12 points in the a Lake Michigan Conference boys' basketball game.

"We started fast tonight with Hamilton hitting the three 3-pointers to start the game," said Charlevoix coach Adam Wood, whose team improved to 5-3 overall, 2-2 league. "Against a well-coached team like East Jordan, that was a plus as we were able to play our game."

The Rayders, who got 12 rebounds from Coby Herriman, led at the quarter breaks, 17-9, 33-23 and 41-29.

"We played from behind to start the game," East Jordan coach Darrin Weber said. "But we played hard and broke the their pressure defense."

For East Jordan, 1-6, 0-4, Dom Brogan scored 14 points and grabbed seven rebounds, while John Richards added 11 points.

Charlevoix won the JV game, 59-28. For Charlevoix, Zach Hankins scored 17 points and Shane Sutherland added 10.

The Rayders are idle on Friday, but will travel to Harbor Springs on Friday, Jan. 20, to take on the Rams.

Lady Rayders fall to EJ, Elk Rapids

The Charlevoix Rayder girls varsity basketball team is looking to find their stride after dropping a pair of Lake Michigan Conference games in the past week — one by a close margin.

On Friday, Jan. 6, Elk Rapids' Megan Gregorski scored 21 points and Alex Dart added 13 as the Elk Rapids took a tight game from Charlevoix 53-50, improving to 5-2 overall, 3-0 league.

Jenna Way had 14 points and eight rebounds to lead the Rayders, 3-5, 1-2, while Madeline Boss had 10 points, and Kelsey Way added nine.

The game was tied 26 at halftime and Charlevoix led, 38-37, entering the fourth quarter. The Elks outscored the Rayders, 16-12, in the final eight minutes.

"It was pretty back-and-fourth," Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman said. "We had our press on, but they made a couple of layups and we put them at the free throw line. ... We just had some defensive breakdowns and gave up some layups, but I thought we played hard and we're looking to continue to improve game-by-game."

On Tuesday, the Red Devils' Valerie Peters had a career-high 31 points Tuesday as East Jordan held off Charlevoix, 58-47.

Peters, a junior guard, made 13 of her 19 field goal attempts and also finished with five steals and five rebounds as East Jordan improved to 6-2 overall, 3-1 league.

Twenty of Peters' points came in the first half as the Red Devils took a 27-23 lead at the break.

The Rayders drew within striking distance midway through the fourth quarter, but could not sustain the momentum.

Grace Howes added 14 points and five rebounds for the Red Devils, who won their fourth straight game. Also for East Jordan, Jordyn Bacchus had seven rebounds and three assists, Emily Crick finished with five boards and three steals, and Paige Roberts added four rebounds.

"Tonight the girls played well," East Jordan coach Steve Hines said. "We had to regroup in the fourth (quater) after Charlevoix cut our lead to one. We started playing better defense and rebounding."

For Charlevoix, 3-6, 1-3, Kelsey Way scored 15 points and grabbed 11 rebounds, while Megan Peters had 11 points and 14 boards.

"We were just outhustled and outsmarted on defense," Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman said. "We had some lapses and they put it to us."

The Lady Radyers are idle on Friday, but will resume play when they travel to Petoskey on Tuesday, Jan, 17.

GIRLS JV BASKETBALL

Rayder JV girls win two of last three

The Charlevoix Rayder girls junior varsity basketball team has won two of its last three games, and head coach Todd Klinger said the team continues to improve with each game.

The team's most recent win came over East Jordan on Tuesday as the Lady Radyers downed the Red Devils 41-35.

Leading the Rayders in scoring against the Red Devils were Kelsey Pischner with 10, Jennaca Holecheck with 8, and Ellie Way added 7.

Klinger pointed to Katie Hinkley who he said made some key defensive plays utilizing her speed.

"With about 1:30 to go in the game , we had a 1-point lead and she stole the ball and made the layup. This was a big spark for us as we scored another basket to take a 5-point lead," Klinger said.

"This was a tough game for us because the girls had to overcome some adversity and frustration. The basket seem to have lid on it for a while, we only scored three points in third quarter. As they grow as a team, they need to learn to forget things that happened earlier in the game and just keep playing hard and good things will happen."

With the win the JV squad's record improved to 5-4.

On Friday, Jan. 6 the Rayders defeated Elk Rapids, 62-50

Leading scorers for Charlevoix in that game were Jennaca Holecheck and Maggie Hamilton who tossed in 18 each, Ellie Way with 10, and Kourtney Putman added 7.

The whole team contributed to this win. It seemed every player who came in played well and made good things happen. Nicole Peterson gave us a real lift when we had some of our post players get in foul trouble, she held her own against a much taller opponent.

Klinger said the whole team contributed to the win over the Elks, noting that he's seeing the players come together as a team.

On Jan. 4, the JV team dropped a 43-38 decision to St. Ignace.

Holecheck again led the Rayders in scoring with 16 points. Kelsey Pischner and Ellie Way added 6 points each.

Klinger also pointed to the strong play of Jennifer Archey who he said came off the bench and "played very aggressive on offense and defense."

"It was a game that we stayed close all game but could not get the lead," Klinger said. We had it down to two points with about a minute to go but didn't capitalize on some turnovers to get the lead. Overall, the girls played very respectfully against a team that is part of the top program in the north."

The team's next game will be on Tuesday, Jan. 17, when they travel to Petoskey.

EAST JORDAN

Lack of snow changes Sno-Blast schedule

Alice Spence
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Despite its slogan of "Snow or no, it's a go" East Jordan had to make some changes to its Sno-Blast festival this weekend.

The festival is Friday through Sunday, Jan. 13-15) in East Jordan. While the festival will still take place, the lack of snow has put a damper on things. All snowmobile races are canceled for Saturday, Jan. 14, at the Sno-Mobilers Club. However, all other events throughout the weekend are scheduled to go on as planned.

"We still expect a decent turnout, for Friday at the least. We have been working very hard on the parade and other events," Shannon Fender, office manager and events coordinator at the East Jordan chamber said.

Fender encouraged the public to come out and enjoy the festivities.

"Even though there is no snow, there are still lots of fun family events planed for the rest of the weekend," she said.

Friday events include a Rotary chili super 4:30-7 p.m. at the senior center. Cost is $8 for adults, $7 for seniors and $5 for children. At 5 p.m., the Friday Night on Main takes place and features a bean pot at the Jordan Inn, hayrides, Twister Joe and more. A grand parade will take place at 6 p.m. down Main Street. The Belle of the Blizzard and Winter Knight will be crowned at this time at the community center. The evening wraps up with an adult skate 6-10 p.m. for those 18 and up at the Harvest Barn Church on M-66. Cost for the skate is $7 each.

On Saturday, many events take place at the East Jordan Sno-Mobilers Club. Here, concessions will begin at 8 a.m. An antique, vintage and classic sled show will take place 9 a.m.-4 p.m. There will also be a frozen pancake toss at 11 a.m. Tosses are 25 cents each or five for $1. An entry fee of $3 will allow the public to participate in all club events.

Other events on Saturday include rollerskating for all ages noon-3 p.m. at the Harvest Barn Church. There is a fee of $5 per person. At 2 p.m. there is a softball game at 2 p.m. at Murphy Field. Later, at 6 p.m., the Martha Wagbo Farm and Education Center hosts a wild game potluck dinner. A free viewing of the film "The Complete Angler" will follow.

Saturday events wrap up with a variety show titled "East Jordan's Got Talent" at 7 p.m. at the auditorium in the high school.

Sunday events include a sno-lovers pancake breakfast 7 a.m.-noon at the Sno-Mobilers Club with a cost of $6 for adults, $3 for kids 5-10 and free for those 4 or younger. In the afternoon the Jordan Valley District Library features a free family showing of the movie "Dolphin Tale" at 1:30 p.m. Dining specials and indoor sidewalk sales will also be featured in East Jordan this weekend. For more information, event registration information and a complete schedule visit www.ejchamber.org or call (231) 536-7351.

No snow? No problem. It'll still be a blast!

EAST JORDAN

Lack of snow changes Sno-Blast schedule

Alice Spence
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Despite its slogan of "Snow or no, it's a go" East Jordan had to make some changes to its Sno-Blast festival this weekend.

The festival is Friday through Sunday, Jan. 13-15, in East Jordan. While the festival will still take place, the lack of snow has put a damper on things. All snowmobile races are canceled for Saturday, Jan. 14, at the Sno-Mobilers Club. However, all other events throughout the weekend are scheduled to go on as planned.

"We still expect a decent turnout, for Friday at the least. We have been working very hard on the parade and other events," Shannon Fender, office manager and events coordinator of the East Jordan chamber said.

Fender encouraged the public to come out and enjoy the festivities.

"Even though there is no snow, there are still lots of fun family events planed for the rest of the weekend," she said.

Friday events include a Rotary chili super 4:30-7 p.m. at the senior center. Cost is $8 for adults, $7 for seniors and $5 for children. At 5 p.m., the Friday Night on Main takes place and features a bean pot at the Jordan Inn, hayrides, Twister Joe and more. A grand parade will take place at 6 p.m. down Main Street. The Belle of the Blizzard and Winter Knight will be crowned at this time at the community center. The evening wraps up with an adult skate 6-10 p.m. for those 18 and up at the Harvest Barn Church on M-66. Cost for the skate is $7 each.

On Saturday, many events take place at the East Jordan Sno-Mobilers Club. Here, concessions will begin at 8 a.m. An antique, vintage and classic sled show will take place 9 a.m.-4 p.m. There will also be a frozen pancake toss at 11 a.m. Tosses are 25 cents each or five for $1. An entry fee of $3 will allow the public to participate in all club events.

Other events on Saturday include rollerskating for all ages noon-3 p.m. at the Harvest Barn Church. There is a fee of $5 per person. At 2 p.m. there is a softball game at 2 p.m. at Murphy Field. Later, at 6 p.m., the Martha Wagbo Farm and Education Center hosts a wild game potluck dinner. A free viewing of the film "The Complete Angler" will follow.

Saturday events wrap up with a variety show titled "East Jordan's Got Talent" at 7 p.m. at the auditorium in the high school.

Sunday events include a sno-lovers pancake breakfast 7 a.m.-noon at the Sno-Mobilers Club with a cost of $6 for adults, $3 for kids 5-10 and free for those 4 or younger. In the afternoon the Jordan Valley District Library features a free family showing of the movie "Dolphin Tale" at 1:30 p.m. Dining specials and indoor sidewalk sales will also be featured in East Jordan this weekend. For more information, event registration information and a complete schedule visit www.ejchamber.org or call (231) 536-7351.

No snow? No problem. It'll still be a blast!

In a few months, downstate residents may hear a radio announcer using words like these to entice them to come north to spend some of their vacation time (and money) in Charlevoix thanks to an advertising partnership between the Charlevoix Convention and Visitor's Bureau and the state's successful Pure Michigan tourism campaign.

Bureau officials announced earlier this week that the organization will be spending $20,000 for a radio advertising campaign.

"This is a big step with such a modest budget, but the opportunity is so important that (the bureau's board) feels the necessity to become a Pure Michigan partner," program director Amanda Wilkin said in a press release about the campaign.

Marijuana rules still on hold

City council seeks revisions, delays action on medical marijuana ordinance

The Charlevoix City Council on Monday decided to postpone a decision on enacting an amendment to the city's zoning ordinance that would regulate medical marijuana production in the city.

For many months city officials have been working on the ordinance, which, in the form it was presented for possible adoption at Monday's regular semi-monthly meeting, would limit the properties where people authorized as caregivers under the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act may grow and provide marijuana to their certified patients.

The ordinance would restrict caregiver grow operations to only residential areas and outside of buffer zones of varying sizes around parks, beaches, schools, churches, day care facilities and other medical marijuana caregiver operation locations.

The ordinance would have no effect on the rights of certified medical marijuana patients to grow their own plants in their homes.

Slaph

During a public hearing near the beginning of Monday's meeting, a number of people, many of them who identified themselves as certified medical marijuana patients, spoke out against the proposed ordinance — many saying it is too

Man says dog saved him in house fire

Steve Zucker
CHARLEVOIX COURIER EDITOR

STEVE ZUCKER/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Charlevoix Township firefighters work to put out a fire that broke out in a home on Maple Grove Road in Hayes Township on Friday, Jan. 13.

A Hayes Township man whose home was destroyed by fire Friday may have his dog to thank for saving his life.

Charlevoix Township firefighters were called to the Randy Wilkinson residence at 10528 Maple Grove Road at about 2:20 p.m. when a neighbor called 9-1-1 reporting smoke coming from the home.

Charlevoix Township Fire Chief Curt Thompson said heavy smoke was visible coming from the back of the home when firefighters arrived and eventually flames broke through the roof of the tri-level home.

Speaking with the Courier Saturday, Thompson said, according to information he has gathered so far, Wilkinson was in the house Friday afternoon when his dog came to him and alerted him to a problem in the laundry area of the home's lower level. Thompson said Wilkinson reported that smoke was filling the lower level and a pile of clothes in the laundry area was smoldering. Wilkinson then retrieved a hose from the garage in an attempt to put the fire out, but the effort failed because the hose was frozen.

Thompson said Wilkinson reported by the time he decided to abandon his effort to put the fire out, the lower level was so full of smoke that he might not have found his way out if his dog had not shown him the way.

Wilkinson was not injured in the incident, but another dog and two cats died as a result of the fire, Thompson said.

The fire chief said Friday's weather conditions hampered the response to the fire. He said firefighters faced snow covered and slippery roads just to get to the scene of the fire and a steep, snow-covered driveway at the home. He said the department's tanker trucks had difficulty getting up the driveway until a Charlevoix County Road Commission truck sanded the driveway. He said the roughly 18-degree temperatures did not cause freeze-up problems, but the stiff northerly wind helped fan the flames.

He said firefighters initially made an attempt to enter the house to extinguish the fire but because of the fire's location in the lower level and the thick smoke, they had could not find the base of the fire.

Charlevoix Township firefighters called on the City of Charlevoix Fire Department to assist with two tanker trucks in shuttling water to fight the fire from LexaLite on U.S. 31. Later a Boyne City Fire Department tanker was also called to assist.

Fire crews had the bulk of the fire knocked down by about 4 p.m., but some firefighters remained on the scene until about 8:30 p.m. putting out hot spots in the rubble.

Thompson said the home is a complete loss, but firefighters were able to save a few items from the house including a gun safe and several long guns in Wilkinson's collection.

He said he believes the home was insured and that Wilkinson is receiving assistance from family members.

Thompson said the cause of the fire remains undetermined, but, given the area where it appears to have started, it could have been the result of a problem with a clothes dryer or some other equipment in the laundry area. He said he plans to do some further investigation in the coming days, but nothing so far causes fire officials to be suspicious that the fire was intentionally set.

Thompson expressed his thanks to the assisting agencies, in particular staff at LexaLite, for their assistance with supplying water to fight the fire.

Another fire reported, not found

Shortly before 6 p.m. Friday, while some Charlevoix Township fire crews were still on the scene of the fire on Maple Grove Road and others were working on cleaning up and putting equipment away, dispatchers at 9-1-1 contacted Thompson saying they'd received several calls from people on the south side of Lake Charlevoix and other locations reporting that they could see what appeared to be a house on fire near the north lakeshore in the area of Quarterline or Brown roads.

Thompson said firefighters spent about an hour searching the area roughly from Oyster Bay to Maple Grove — including private roads — but found no fire.

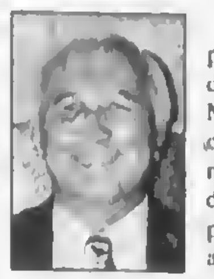
Revised athletic code adopted

Alica Spence
COURIER STAFF WRITER



Janik

McLean

The Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education elected its officers and approved a new athletic code at its first regular monthly meeting of the year Monday.

Board member John McLean was reelected as president, Kevin Pearsall was elected as vice president and Valerie Snyder was reelected as secretary/treasurer. All three will serve in these positions for one year.

In other news, district superintendent Chet Janik said the board also approved a revised athletic code that has been in discussion since August of 2011.

"The old code was in place for 10 years and the board decided it was time to review it," Janik said noting that some special circumstances with a few students drew the board's attention to the old code in the first place.

Board president John McLean called the new code a definite improvement, and said he thought the old policy was extremely harsh.

Some of the most significant changes in the revised athletic code include the penalties associated with code violations. In this section, the board created four steps in the penalty process in place of the three that the old code had. The steps include a first, second, third and fourth offense. The penalties increase in severity with each step.

Steps one and two include suspension from 30 and 60 percent of competition dates respectively. Students will have the option of completing a substance abuse or another appropriate assessment on the second step as well. Successful completion of the assessment would reduce the competition suspension down to 40 percent of games.

On the third offense students will be suspended for one calendar year of interscholastic competition.

However, the student can petition the board of education for reinstatement to extra-curricular activities after 180 days.

The fourth offense includes a student being suspended from athletics for the remainder of their high school career. If a student reaches this level of offense, he or she will have the option to petition the board of education after one calendar year of served consequences.

"This new (code) provides more flexibility. It's for the kids who made mistakes but have learned from those and have made a complete turnaround," Janik said.

"It gives them a chance to come back," he added.

The new athletic code is effective immediately. Coaches and athletes will be informed of the changes as well, Janik also mentioned the board is in the process of going through all its policies and will be updating them as needed.

ZBA OKs Third Day shelter as 'church-related'

Board's finding clears the way for Joppa House women's shelter

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

STEVE ZUCKER/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

The Rev. Ginger Stevens from Third Day Fellowship and Outreach (left) speaks to the City of Charlevoix Zoning Board of Appeals during a hearing regarding a shelter for homeless women and children Stevens and her church plans to open at the corner of State Street and Garfield Avenue.

Shortly after 8 p.m. Wednesday, a moist-eyed Ginger Stevens stood outside the Charlevoix City Council chambers, held hands with a small circle of supporters, including her husband, Greg, and the group joined in a quiet prayer of thanksgiving.

The impromptu prayer came on the heels of a Charlevoix Zoning Board of Appeals vote that cleared away the bulk of the red tape standing in the way of a plan by Stevens and the church she pastors to establish a shelter for homeless women and children.

Ginger Stevens

Greg Stevens

Stevens' fledgling church, Third Day Fellowship and Outreach, which operates a "storefront church" and food pantry at 1206 Bridge St., has plans to create the Joppa House shelter for up to 14 women and children on a lot at the southwest corner of Garfield Avenue and State Street.

Stevens has previously said her ministry's work with the impoverished in the community has shown her the need for such a shelter in the community. She said many of the women she works with who are facing homelessness simply lack the life skills necessary to keep a roof over their heads. She said teaching those life skills — finding and keeping a job, maintaining a household and a budget, just to name a few, will be among the main goals of the Joppa House.

The pieces to the project have been falling into place for about the past six months.

A July 4 fire gutted the three-story house that had been on the lot. After the structure was razed, the owner of the lot donated it to Third Day as a site for the shelter. Then the Diocese of Gaylord agreed to donate a house on the St. Mary's Catholic Church property that was previously used as a convent to Third Day to be moved to the property and used for the shelter. Stevens, her husband and others set to work making plans, seeking grants and donations of money and services.

But one big hurdle stood in their way. The residential zoning district the property is in doesn't allow for a transitional homes. In fact such uses are not contemplated anywhere in the city's current zoning ordinance.

However, the zoning ordinance does allow churches and "church related structures" in residential zones.

So, the Third Day asked the city's zoning board of appeals for a finding that the shelter — because of its proposed programing and affiliation with the church — qualifies as a "church-related structure."

The ruling in Third Day's favor which followed a two-hour public hearing and board debate, was anything but a slam-dunk.

In fact, for a time it appeared that the measure might fail which would have delayed the project at least several months while organizers sought a zoning ordinance amendment.

The two most critical elements of the board's findings were approved by 3-1 votes. Three votes — or a majority of the board's full five-person membership were needed for the measure to pass. Present for Wednesday's meeting were Larry Sullivan, Mary Eveleigh, Richard Clein and Patricia Miller.

While all members of the board who were present expressed support for the project and its goals, some had concerns about the precedent their finding would be setting.

Much of the debate among the board centered around two issues: Whether a 50-foot setback requirement should apply to the building, and the implications of the shelter's proposed day care function.

Part of Third Day's plans for Joppa House is to offer day care for perhaps as many as 12 children. Stevens said the main purpose of the day care is for the mothers who live at the house to have care for their children while they are out seeking and in the early stages of holding down employment. However, Stevens said the shelter would make any open spaces in the day care available to the community at large.

The sheriff reminds people to never give any personal or financial information out over the telephone.

One injured in Bay Shore crash

A Petoskey resident was injured in a one-vehicle traffic crash at the Bay Shore Market on Sunday, Jan. 15.

Charlevoix County Sheriff Don Schneider said deputies and Petoskey Department of Public Safety officers were called to the market after Adele Forhridge, 53, of Petoskey crashed the vehicle she was driving into a beam that supports the awning over the fuel pumps. Police said Forhridge had been traveling east on U.S. 31 when she lost control and struck the beam. She was transported to Northern Michigan Hospital by Allied EMS where she was treated for a suspected injury to her left leg.

Kelly to discuss drug use trends at presentation

Kelly

Nationwide trends show that overall, underage drinking is on a small decline and teen smoking is at its lowest point in the history of the National Institute of Health survey. But, nationally, marijuana use has increased and the decline of the use of illicit drugs has leveled off.

Although national trends do create a story, how does that story play in Charlevoix County? Scott Kelley, executive director, B.A.S.E.S. Teen Center will review drug use trends in Charlevoix County in a presentation slated for 6:30 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 24, at the Charlevoix Public Library. He will present updated information and will share how the trends impact our area. Kelly will also talk about the response that is needed at all levels, personal, family, school and community responses, to generate the most positive effects. This program is geared towards parents, grandparents, and interested community members.

Kelly, is a native of Charlevoix and graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1982. He attended Ferris State University where he also played baseball for four years. Two days after his first year of college, Scott voluntarily checked himself into an alcoholism treatment program at age 18. When he finished college at Ferris three years later, he earned a bachelor's degree in social work, graduated with honors, and was named Male Athlete of the Year in 1986 and Conference Baseball Player of the Year. He has worked as a substance abuse counselor in a long-term residential program, a prevention specialist and a student assistance coordinator.

In organizing B.A.S.E.S., Kelly combined his passions of substance abuse counseling and baseball to come up with the name in hopes of filling the gaps in services for young people. He completed his master's degree in counseling at Central Michigan University in 1997. He is a certified relapse prevention specialist, a certified advanced addictions counselor and has been clean and sober since 1984. Scott and his wife, Celia, live in Charlevoix. They have three children and one grandchild.

OPINIONS yours & ours

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

He who has the most money talks the loudest

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

The impact of the U.S. Supreme Court decision in the Citizens United case about money being equal to speech, and thus making possible unlimited contributions in support of political candidates is finally clear to everyone. All that talk and writing about Super Pacs and wealthy donors is finally clarified by the arrival of a check for $5 MILLION DOLLARS at Newt Gingrich's SuperPac called "Winning Our Future." A long-time friend and supporter of Mr. Gingrich, Sheldon Adelson, wrote the check.

Only the amount and the timing single out Newt Gingrich as a recipient of such large donations. Without some change in current law, huge contributions will become the standard fare of this, and any future national elections. All candidate PACs can expect to receive such monetary gifts in the future. Democrats and Republicans will equally benefit from such largesse, and the competition to attract the favor of extremely wealthy donors will be intense.

There was a time in American history when only owners of property could vote in elections, and we seem to be leaning that way again. Currently Mr. Adelson and I each have one vote, but Mr. Adelson is clearly in a position to influence many more votes than I can.

I am sure that the current record of a single five million dollar contribution will be overshadowed by larger and larger contributions in support of both parties and many candidates over the next few months. We can be completely certain that the contributors of five or six or $10 million to campaign PACs will have some expectation of easy access should their preferred candidate win an election. Protestations that such amounts of money cannot influence a candidate's decisions about policy are genuinely hollow statements that no one really believes.

What to do? Short of street protests by millions of people there seem few choices. Might there be some way to assure that candidates do not know where the contributions to their supporting PACs are coming from? It would be difficult to maintain such a level of secrecy, but we do have whole government agencies devoted to keeping secrets. A candidate cannot support a contributor or carry out their wishes if he/she does not know who they are.

We read about how important it is for the public to know who is contributing to political candidates and how much they contribute. It is far more important that the candidates NOT know where the money is coming from. This approach might have a secondary salutary effect in that it could dry up large contributions almost completely. How many people would give a small fortune to a candidate who could not know where it came from?

A government agency for the collection and anonymous distribution of campaign contributions might work. The agency could receive contributions of any size and forward them to the appropriate PAC. But, there I go again, supposing that government can be the solution of a problem , rather than itself being the problem. Can the government be more powerful than the combined wealth of those wishing to control the political process? Maybe not, but it seems likely that our future as a democratic nation depends on the power to place some controls on political campaign contributions. $5 MILLION DOLLARS!! How many people are there who can write such a check? How loud should their voices be?

Health department urges residents to test for radon

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan offers radon testing kits.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan is encouraging people to take simple and affordable steps to test their homes for harmful levels of radon gas as part of National Radon Action Month.

Radon is an invisible, odorless, tasteless radioactive gas that comes from the natural breakdown of uranium in soil, rock and water. While it causes no immediate symptoms, it is the number one cause of lung cancer among non-smokers and kills more than 21,000 each year in the United States.

"Radon is a dangerous health threat to our families and communities that can be easily avoided through simple testing," said Scott Kendzierski, director of environmental health services. "This month, I urge everyone to test their homes."

Nearly one of every 15 homes in the U.S. is estimated to have elevated radon levels. Simple steps to prevent this health hazard can be taken, including having your home tested for radon. Do-it-yourself kits are available at the Health Department of Northwest Michigan offices in Bellaire, Charlevoix, Petoskey and Gaylord for $15. Bring your property's tax identification number.

Also, the department can help you make a plan to reduce your radon levels.

Radon can enter a home through cracks in the foundation or other openings, such as holes or pipes. Although radon can enter a home through the water supply, entry through the soil is a much larger risk. Radon in a home's water system is more likely when the home has a ground water source – such as a private well or public water supply system that uses ground water.

In addition to testing for radon, there now are safer and healthier radon-resistant construction techniques that home buyers can discuss with builders to prevent this health hazard.

For information, contact Scott Johnston of Health Department of Northwest Michigan at (989) 732-6863.

LOOKING BACK…

In 2007, the city began a long overdue renovation of East Park and its waterfront that doubled the capacity of the dock facilities and connected the two sections of the park into one uninterrupted expanse from Clinton to Antrim Streets. After nine years of hearings and debate, a design was finally approved that included this dancing waters fountain for children of all ages to run around and splash in, here shown being tested during construction. The fountain has proved to be one of the most magnetic places in the park. So impressed was the American Planning Association with what Charlevoix had achieved, in October of 2009 it proclaimed East Park, on the same list as Lincoln Park in Chicago and the squares of Savannah, Georgia, to be one of the 10 best public spaces in the United States.

This image is one of 850 in the Charlevoix Historical Society's most recent DVD titled "Charlevoix, Michigan — A Pictorial Journey through 16 Decades." The disc is available at the Society's Harsha House Museum, 103 State St. by the Congregational Church. It is also available at Castle Farms, Central Drug Store, Round Lake Books, and Ell-Air Gallery. Call (231) 547-0373 for January and February museum store hours and for society membership information.

$63,000 went to organizations in Northern Michigan, deadline approaches for 2012 grant cycle

Great Lakes Energy, with the help of its members, continued its tradition of looking out for charitable and community organizations during 2011 by awarding $176,081 in People Fund grants. The funds went to more than 80 charitable and community organizations throughout Great Lakes Energy's 26-county service area, which stretches from Kalamazoo to the Mackinac Straits. Of that total, more than $63,000 was awarded to 31 organizations in northwestern Michigan.

The Great Lakes Energy People Fund is supported solely by Great Lakes Energy members who allow their electric cooperative to round up their bill each month to the next dollar.

Members of the electric cooperative who are not participating may enroll in the People Fund online or by contacting Great Lakes Energy's office.

"The contributions are small but when added together, we are able to help many," Great Lakes Energy president and CEO Steve Boeckman said. "Giving back to the community is one of the cooperative principles and we couldn't do it without our members' help."

The full list of grant recipients can be found in the 2011 People Fund Annual Report included in the January issue of Michigan Country Lines magazine recently mailed to Great Lakes Energy members. Others may obtain the report by contacting Great Lakes Energy at (888) 485-2537 or by visiting gtlakes.com and downloading the report from Your Community/People Fund/Annual Report.

The Great Lakes Energy People Fund invites applications for 2012 grants from local non-profit organizations. Deadline for applications for the 2012 grant cycles are Feb. 1, June 1 and Oct. 1. Request an application by calling (888) 485-2537 ext. 1313, or download the application on gtlakes.com.

Foundations seek grant requests

Two Northern Michigan community foundations are inviting nonprofit organizations, educational institutions, and municipalities to submit grant requests to put local charitable dollars to work in Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

Grant applications to support arts and culture, education, the environment, community and economic development, health and human services, recreation and youth are available by calling the respective community foundation offices. All applicants must call to discuss their proposals in advance. Eligible nonprofit organizations must serve residents of Charlevoix County or Emmet County and work to enrich or improve life for local residents. The deadline for submission is 4 p.m. Thursday, March 1. Applications will be reviewed by community members and youth advisory committee members and recommendations will be forwarded to the respective boards of trustees.

The community foundations accept resources from donors and then use a portion of the income earned from the investment of these gifts to help foster positive change in our area. In this way, donors' contributions meet community needs, now and in the future.

For more information, contact the Charlevoix County Community Foundation at (231) 536-2440 or www.c3f.org and the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation at (231) 348-5820 or www.phsacf.org.

County board debates benefits

Morgan Sherburne
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Concerned Charlevoix County employees and retirees filled the commissioners meeting room in Charlevoix to hear more discussion of their retirement policies and benefits.

Previously, at the Jan. 11 Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners meeting, commissioners broached the topic of what the allowed retirement age for county workers should be, and what kind of insurance retirees will receive once they leave.

At Wednesday's board of commissioners personnel committee meeting, it was resolved that Charlevoix County retirees who hired in before Jan. 1, 1993, are recommended to be moved to the same insurance plan that active employees were moved to, with no other changes.

This means that county workers can still retire without penalty at 55 years old with 20 years of service to the county. But instead of their former insurance plans, they would have the same insurance plan that current employees of Charlevoix County use.

This change would affect the 12 currently retired employees who were hired before Jan. 1, 1993, and were grandfathered in to the receive post-retirement medical coverage. Those hired after are responsible for providing for their own health insurance after retirement.

"Moving that class of retirees to the (health savings account) program in that class of retirees under 65 is going to save the county $40,000 (per year), on those 12 employees," said vice-chair Chris Christensen of Boyne City.

After the retirees reach 65 years of age, Medicare will cover the primary portion of the retirees' health benefits. The taxpayer-funded portion of the retirees' health care will drop to $6,000 annually.

"Some retirees wondered if they were going to have to pay part of their benefits," said Cheryl Potter Browe, county clerk and financial officer, but she explained that Wednesday's meeting only discussed moving retirees from benefit plan to benefit plan.

Previously, commissioners had discussed a co-pay that would be applied to retirees' insurance, but only if the retirees had fewer than 25 years of service at the time of their retirement, said Christensen.

Rather than make a decision on the co-pay question, the board of commissioners is putting the question to a yet-to-be-contracted independent labor attorney.

In preparation for creating the ad, the Travel Michigan crew will be coming to Charlevoix for a familiarization tour Tuesday-Thursday, Jan. 24-26. Wilkin said the crew will be doing things that most visitors to Charlevoix like to do: shop, eat, learn the culture and history, and enjoy the great outdoors.

Speaking to the Courier on Wednesday, Wilkin said plans call for the group to visit the library, Castle Farms, the Harsha House Museum, the Earl Young homes and many other area landmarks and attractions.

She said one challenge the group will face is getting a feel for Charlevoix in the summertime in the middle of the winter.

"But I'm going to force them to go to Michigan Beach, even in the snow," Wilkin said.

The visit will include a brainstorming session with the bureau's board and other city leaders such as the mayor, city manager and downtown development authority director.

Wilkin said partnering with the Pure Michigan program offers many benefits — not the least of which is a $20,000 match for the local investment being made. She said other benefits include making use of the group's marketing expertise, vast market research information and the increased exposure on the Michigan.org website.

She said one of the main goals of the campaign will be to draw people to come visit who have never been here before.

"Charlevoix has always had the same or similar groups of people coming here year after year. With this campaign we hope to bring some new people to visit the community," Wilkin said.

Wilkin said the ads will air in many places in Michigan, two places they won't be heard are in Northern Michigan or in the Detroit area.

She said while the Detroit area market is very appealing, it would cost an additional $25,000. The local area stations were ruled out because although visits to the community from "day trippers" are always welcome, this campaign will be targeted toward enticing overnight guests.

Wilkin said when the end of the year rolls around the bureau will evaluate the effectiveness of the campaign and may consider expanding its reach in future years.

The Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau is funded through a 2 percent surcharge that is added to area room rental rates. Wilkin said although the Pure Michigan campaign will account for about 20 percent of the organization's budget, little of the existing advertising efforts need to be scaled back because of the Pure Michigan campaign. She said that's in part because last year saw improved room occupancy and the agency has been able to save some money on its existing marketing efforts through "building better relationships and getting better pricing," Wilkin said.

"We're really excited about this program," she added.

Wilkin said the bureau is interested in partnering with other area organizations and businesses who would be interested in helping to support the Pure Michigan campaign. To learn more about the program, discuss partnerships or to suggest a stop on next week's Travel Michigan tour, contact Wilkin at info@charlevoixlodging.com or (231) 547-2101.

This was stumbling block, especially for board member Clem.

"I have no problem with a home for women being an exception (for the zoning rules). Where I have a problem is when we start allowing people who aren't part of the shelter to use the day care."

Board member Sullivan, noting that "church" can be very broadly defined, was concerned that the finding could open the door to churches "coming out of the woodwork" seeking to open their own shelters.

City planner Mike Spencer noted that the proposed (and ultimately approved) factual finding is specific about the fact that Third Day is a registered ecclesiastical organization led by an accredited pastor (Stevens) and that portions of the planned program included requirements for participation in Bible study and church services.

Further debate ensued about whether the building should be subject to a 50-foot setback prompted by a partial loop in the ordinance.

The section that allows "church related structures" in residential zones also includes the text "... provided that they meet the side-yard requirements of (section 2)."

Section 2 in the ordinance's listing of the allowed uses in residential zones reads, "Public schools, colleges, public buildings, public utility buildings, when owned and operated by a governmental agency: 50-foot side and rear yards are required if property abuts any residential zone."

Sullivan said the language seems clear to him that a "church related structure" had to comply with the setback rule.

Spencer, said his reading of the section was that the setback rule only applied to the types of buildings listed in the first part of section.

"I have real reservations about saying it's a church related use and then not requiring the 50-foot setback," Clem added.

Clem ultimately cast the dissenting vote on the finding that the building is a "church related structure."

The first vote on the factual findings in support of the exemption from the 50-foot setback failed when Sullivan voted no and Clem abstained.

Following the vote attorney Dan Barron, who has been assisting Third Day in several of its procedural matters, spoke up saying to require the same setback for the shelter as for a college or school is "absurd" and doing so would essentially derail the project.

A second vote on revised language prompted Clem to vote yes along with Eveleigh and Miller while Sullivan maintained his no vote.

More than once during the meeting city planner Spencer noted his personal frustration with the ordinance and cited it as an example of matters that will be cleared up when a major overhaul of the city's zoning ordinance is completed in the coming months.

A third and final vote that the plan was not subject to a development plan review by the planning commission and city council was unanimous.

Following the meeting Greg Stevens said the only major step that remains before the site can be prepared and the building moved is a determination on where an egress point from the basement must be. He expects word on that element sometime in the next few weeks.

Ginger Stevens said with the zoning matters out of the way, plans for the shelter to be open by late spring or early summer appear to be on track.

Several people, many of them pastors, at other area churches had written to the city in support of the project. However the city did receive one letter from a resident on State Street concerned about the lot size being big enough for a day care. Also at Wednesday's meeting, Jim Zeitler, who lives nearby on Garfield Avenue, told the board he has many concerns about the added traffic on Garfield that might result from the shelter.

Others, such as Charlevoix resident and registered medical marijuana patient Jason Staph contend the ordinance is not enforceable because it is trumped by the Medical Marijuana Act's wording that reads, in part, that a caregiver complying with the act shall not be subject to any criminal or civil penalty.

However city attorney Jim Young disagreed with the notion that the act prevents cities from regulating medical marijuana property uses through its zoning.

"If a statute is intending to take away the rights of a smaller unit of government, it (the restriction of the right) either has to be so pervasive that (the intent) is obvious, or the statute by its terms should clearly state the restriction," Young said.

Although the act does not discuss limiting municipalities' rights to regulate medical marijuana with zoning, Young conceded, "There is wording (in the act) that one could make that argument, but that argument won't likely prevail (in court.)"

Staph, who served as the primary spokesperson for the roughly 20 people who attended the meeting in opposition to the ordinance, told the council that grow operations already exist in the community and aren't causing a problem.

"How are these grows affecting the community? Why are we spending time and money to regulate something that isn't a problem?" Staph asked.

Medical marijuana just isn't the big bad wolf we think it is," Staph added later in the meeting.

The council, at least to some degree, appeared to agree, with a contention that the buffer zones in the proposed ordinance are too restrictive as several members expressed interest in perhaps shrinking some of them.

Several opponents to the ordinance pointed out that the church, school and park buffers already significantly restrict the available properties, but when a day care or a marijuana care provider location is established, it will effectively shrink the available properties to nearly nothing.

Of particular interest was discussion about what, if any, buffer zones there should be between care provider locations and around day care facilities. Currently the draft ordinance proposes 500 feet for both.

City planner Mike Spencer explained the rationale behind some of the buffer zones. He said the 1,000 feet around schools, for instance, was intended to be consistent with the state's "drug free school zones." He said the 500-foot zone between providers was to avoid creating "clusters" of grow operations in one area of the city, mainly for safety reasons.

"It's a small town. People talk. If word gets out what's going on in those houses, it increases the risk of break-ins."

Council member Jill Picha questioned why day care centers were included in the ordinance's buffer zones at all.

Council member Lyle Gennett said, "If we are going do to anything, it needs to be within reason. This is something that's out there and its new ... we have to come up with something, but we have to be fair to everyone."

Council member Shane Cole said he thinks the city needs some kind of policy to regulate medical marijuana, but agreed that the ordinance in its current form was too restrictive.

After wrestling with different options for buffer zone sizes, the council voted unanimously (with council member Dennis Kusina absent) to postpone its decision on the matter and directed city planning director Mike Spencer to do some further research and come back to the council at its next regular meeting on Feb. 6 with options for the council to consider. The plan is to reintroduce the revised ordinance at the Feb. 6 meeting and then have another public hearing on it either on Feb. 20 or March 5.

Stingrays compete at Tropical Challenge meet

Waiting for their heats to take place at the Jenison High School Tropical Challenge swim meet are (from left) Alex Gooch, and Ali Schwein, along with coach Jory Jonas and Ian Clapp.

The Charlevoix Stingrays, sponsored by the Charlevoix Area Community Pool, sent six swimmers to the three-day Tropical Challenge swim meet, last weekend. The meet, which took place at Jenison High School near Grand Rapids, hosted more than 25 teams from as far away as Madison, Wis. and Joliet, Ill.

It was the Stingrays' first meet as an official United States Swimming Association (USA) team. USA swimming is the national group that oversees competitive swimming in the United States, coach Betsy Granstra said. In past years, the Stingrays have joined the Midland Barracudas or have swum unattached at USA meets.

Swimmers compete by age group, 8 and under, 10 and under, 11-12, 13-14 and 15 and over. Several hundred swimmers competed over the weekend.

In Ali Schwein's 11 and over 50 yard freestyle, which included three age groups, there were 250 entries. Other local teams participating included the Harbor Springs Hammerheads and the Traverse City Breakers. No Stingray swimmers competed in the Friday night events which included the long distance events.

The Stingrays sent four 10 and under swimmers who competed in timed finals on Saturday and Sunday.

Those swimmers included Ian Clapp, Sophia Thompson, Audrey Thompson and Jada McPherson.

Ali Schwein and Alex Gooch represented the Stingrays in the 11 and older category. Swimmers in this group had to qualify in the top 24 each morning for the chance to compete each night in the finals. In the Saturday and Sunday night finals, Alex Gooch, 17, finished second in the 50 yard breaststroke in 31.45, third in the 50 yard butterfly with a time of 28.14, 6th in the 100 yard breaststroke in 1.12.20, 8th in the 200 yard breaststroke in 2.42.74, 11th in the 50 yard freestyle at 25.65.

Ali Schwein's (age 14) best finishes came in the 50 yard backstroke in a time of 36.63 (39th), the 100 yard breaststroke at 1.19.48 (51st) and in the 50 yard freestyle at 30.85 (61st).

For the 10 and under group, Ian Clapp's (age 7) highlights included a 20th place finish in the 25 yard freestyle (21.21) and a 23rd finish in the 25 yard backstroke. Jada McPherson's (age 9) best was a 34th in the 100 yard breaststroke (1.48.76) and a 74th place finish in the 50 yard backstroke (50.91). Audrey Thompson's (age 9) best showings came in the 50 yard breaststroke, 53rd (50.70) and a 72nd place finish in the 50 yard freestyle (39.2). Her big sister, Sophia Thompson, 10, rounded out the younger age group by placing 13th in the 50 yard breaststroke (42.62), 21st in the 100 yard breaststroke (1.40.34) and 24th in the 50 yard freestyle (33.18).

The Stingray's next two meets are on Saturday Jan. 21 in Sault Saint Marie and Jan. 28 in Harbor Springs. For more information about the Stingrays, call the Charlevoix Area Community Pool at (231) 547-0982.

BASKETBALL PREVIEW

Rayders using time off to tune up

Both the Charlevoix Rayder girls and boys basketball programs had a mid-season lull in their respective schedules this past week. For the boys it was planned for the girls it was the work of Mother Nature.

The boys, who were last in action when they defeated East Jordan on the Red Devils' home court on Jan. 10 were scheduled for a nine-day break and are slated to resume action against Grayling on Friday. The Rayders then will face Grayling on Tuesday and Traverse City St. Francis on Friday, Jan. 27. The girls teams had been slated to travel to Petoskey on Tuesday, Jan. 17, but the non-conference games against the Northmen were postponed indefinitely because of snowy weather.

Rayder boys varsity head coach Adam Wood said he and his team have used the time get some rest and to tune up for what they are expecting to be a stretch of games ahead.

"Being in the midst of a nine day break in the middle of the year, we are finding lots of time to shore up some of the details," Wood said. "We have spent a good deal of time focusing on fundamentals and achieving a stronger focus on our goals."

Wood said he's also given his team a few days off from practice to rest up for the tough heart of the season on the horizon.

"We are about to get into the heart of the schedule and will not have a break the rest of the season, so this is an important time. Basketball season is the longest season of all high school sports, so there is a balance between rest and activity. The boys have been great and have really come to practice hard everyday. We are just excited about the opportunity to improve and get back on the court."

The Lady Rayders will also be resuming play in Harbor Springs Friday.

Girls varsity head basketball coach Leslie Hoffman couldn't be reached for an update on her team's status before the Courier's press time Thursday morning. The Lady Rayders, who are 3-6 overall and 1-3 in the Lake Michigan Conference, are looking to rebound from two conference losses earlier this month.

13-year-old offers comfort to hospital patients

COURTESY PHOTO

Erin Wachler, 13, and Charlevoix Area Hospital staff member Treasure Eggers show off some of the 60 plus bears Wachler donated to the hospital. The stuffed toys, known as Comfort Bears, will be given to children and special needs patients undergoing surgery so they feel more comfortable.

COURIER STAFF WRITER

Sometimes a birthday is not all about the party.

For 13-year-old Erin Wachler, reaching out to help others was also a priority.

Erin was celebrating her Bat Mitzvah, a Jewish coming-of-age ceremony. Part of the preparation for the event required her to do a good deed. And so, Erin decided she wanted to help make people feel better.

The Petoskey St. Francis student used about $300 of her own money to purchase teddy bears. She then donated those bears to the Charlevoix Area Hospital to be handed out to children or special needs patients who have to undergo surgery. "I wanted to get the bears so people could be comforted. They are comfort bears and will make people feel happy or less scared," Erin said.

"I know if I had to have surgery, then a bear would make me feel better about it," she added.

In total, Erin donated 60 bears to the hospital. Her uncle, Gary Wachler, runs a program downstate called Comfort Bears for Kids. He donated an additional 30

See comfortbearsforkids.org to purchase a bear or donate funds.

Research Erin did determined about 45-60 children have surgery at the Charlevoix hospital each year.

"So, she provided at least the first-years-worth of bears to the hospital" Erin's father Glenn Wachler said.

Glenn and his wife Ellen, are both pleased with their daughters efforts.

"We are very proud of her. She's growing up to be an outstanding daughter and citizen," Glenn said.

Their only hope is that she continues to grow and remain a giving person. "It is not difficult to bring a smile to someone's face and the bears are just one example of that. We hope (Erin) gets a taste of that generous lifestyle and continues in it," Glenn added.

And, Erin has every intention of keeping the program going.

Buzz building in community over Pure Michigan campaign

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

It may still be cold outside, but it's as warm as a summer afternoon at Michigan Beach in the hearts of many Charlevoix-area community leaders who have spent a great deal of time in recent days thinking about how to market the community to other parts of the state — and perhaps beyond.

On Wednesday, a five-member team from the state's Pure Michigan program paid a visit to Charlevoix to soak up as much of "The Beautiful" as possible in a little more than a day — in the middle of the winter. The visit was the first step in a cooperative advertising campaign announced last week between the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau and Pure Michigan. The lynch-pin of the campaign will be a 60-second radio advertisement in which none other than Michigan's own TV and movie star Tim Allen will beckon listeners to come visit Charlevoix. The ad will play for several weeks in the late spring and early summer in major downstate markets (except the Detroit area).

The group's whirlwind tour of everything from the public library, Castle Farms, Earl Young Homes and much more culminated in a brainstorming session with about 15 community leaders in the Charlevoix City Council chambers.

And here's what the team wanted to know: What do you love about Charlevoix? Why should people come

Appeals court:

More money owed in Merriman murder case

A 2007 murder case that was likely one of the most expensive to prosecute in the history of Charlevoix County will now likely end up costing the county a little more.

In a 2-1 decision, released last week, a Michigan Court of Appeals panel ruled that Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas abused his discretion in failing to pay Petoskey-based attorney Dan Hartman for 710 hours of work in an extraordinary case.

Charles Merriman

Hartman defended Charles Merriman, now 62, an East Jordan area man who jurors convicted of second-degree murder after a 16-day trial in 2008.

The victim in the case was Bill Merriman, the defendant's brother, though authorities never discovered a body.

But they certainly tried.

Among the costs incurred by the county in investigating the case was $50,000 for a 21-day search a landfill for evidence in of the homicide. Although Bill Merriman's body did not turn up in the search, authorities did find couch cushions stained with his blood.

Charles Merriman remains held by the Michigan Department of Corrections at Alger Correctional Facility in the Upper Peninsula. His earliest possible release date for his minimum 20 to 40-year prison sentence is in September 2027.

Pajtas previously ruled that Hartman agreed to take Merriman's case for free. Pajtas declined to comment today, Monday, on the pending case, other than to say the appeals court's dissenting opinion accurately detailed his own decision.

Judge William Whitbeck wrote the dissenting opinion, while judges Jane Markey and Kirsten Frank Kelly remanded the case back to Charlevoix County.

Whitbeck argued Pajtas did not err in his decision because Hartman did not seek to change his status from pro bono to paid attorney until after the case ended.

Court documents show Hartman initially joined the case as a pro bono lawyer to assist court-appointed attorney Michael Atchison, of Petoskey. Hartman eventually became lead defense counsel, though he did not request payment until after the trial concluded, records show.

Citing the unusual and unexpected length and complexity of the case, Hartman and Atchison requested to be paid for 903 hours above the typical 270 hours required of most public defender cases at a rate of $75 per hour for a total of $67,725 ($53,000 for Hartman and $14,200 for Atchison) in additional attorney fees.

Without a hearing, Judge Pajtas awarded only $5,000 to Atchison and $641 in additional costs.

The court of appeals first sent the matter back to the circuit court for an evidentiary hearing on the matter. That hearing took place on July 13, 2010.

But Judge Pajtas still was not swayed an did not allow for further payments, finding that Hartman had entered the case as a pro bono attorney, that he had a history of getting involved in high-profile cases and benefitted from the exposure those cases garnered him in the media, and that he did not seek approval for compensation in advance.

"So, to this Court, the issue is not reasonable compensation for assigned counsel, it is whether or not counsel can bind the court and the county after the fact, and that's a precedent I don't think would be prudent to set," Judge Pajtas is quoted in the opinion as having sald at the time of his ruling.

However the majority wrote in its opinion, "The mere fact that Hartman initially entered the case on a pro bono basis is not the end of the analysis; it is simply one factor to be considered and weighed by the trial court. Moreover, such a finding implies that any fee under the initial consortium agreement is finite when, in fact, the agreement specifically allows a trial court to exercise discretion in awarding additional fees. Under the agreement, an appointed attorney could petition the trial court for additional compensation on a case that was "extraordinary in nature, severity, complexity or duration."

Hartman declined to comment on the appellate decision, other than to say his Detroit-based attorney Frank Eaman took on the case as part of a political effort to bridge the disparity between public prosecution and public defense spending in Michigan.

The court of appeals sent the case back to Judge Pajtas with instructions to determine an "appropriate award."

Snow shoveling safely

Dr. Aaron Wilkin

Wilkin

Winter has finally arrived in Northern Michigan, and with its arrival comes the snow and winter sports that we all love. Although a fresh snowfall can be beautiful and picturesque, the shoveling that usually accompanies the snow can be very stressful on your body. The physical demands of bending, lifting, and twisting, combined with cold weather conditions can take a serious toll on your musculoskeletal system.

Anyone who has ever shoveled snow knows what a good workout it can be. Think about all the muscles that you use while shoveling: your arms, shoulders, back, abdominal muscles, and legs. It could be a great strength workout considering that the average shovelful of snow can weigh between 5 and 10 pounds, and the average driveway or walk consists of hundreds of scoops of snow. It could also be a good cardiovascular workout for your heart since it often takes a half hour of more to complete your shoveling. Just like a trip to the gym or any other workout, you need to perform the workout correctly or it could result in an injury. The main difference with a shoveling injury is that the cold temperature is also a factor. The cold air can numb the sensation of pain and fatigue, and tighten your muscles. Unfortunately, pain is a sign that the injury has already occurred or that you are mechanically doing something incorrectly while shoveling.

There is a right way and a wrong way to shovel; paying attention to your technique can make a big difference in avoiding discomfort and injury. As with any project the prep work is just as important as the actual projects. Below are a few tips on how to safely prepare for shoveling.

Here are some tips to help make snow shoveling easier on your body.

— Layer your clothing – Layered clothing will keep your muscles warm and flexible, and if you get too warm you can always remove one layer. Make sure to wear gloves that cover your wrist (if you wrists get cold then your fingers, hands and arms will get cold as well).

— Do a warm-up first – A tight stiff body is asking for injury. A few minutes of stretching can save you from a lot of pain later. When shoveling, don't forget to breathe, holding your breath makes you tight and stiff.

— Wear the right shoes – Choose shoes with plenty of cushioning in the soles to absorb the impact of walking on hard frozen ground. Also, choose shoes that have a good tread and grip on the soles.

— Timing is everything – If a large snowfall is expected don't wait until it is done snowing, plan to shovel smaller amounts more frequently. If at all possible wait until the afternoon to shovel. Many disc injuries occur in the morning when there is increased fluid pressure in the disc because your body has been at rest all night.

— Drink lots of water – Drinking water frequently throughout the day helps to keep your body and muscles hydrated, making them less susceptible to injury. Dehydration is as much of a problem in the winter as it is in the summer. The ideal amount of water to consume daily is half your body weight in ounces.

— Use the correct shovel – Your shovel should be about chest height on you, allowing you to keep your back straight while shoveling. A shovel that is too short forces you to bend more to lift the load, while a shovel that is too long will make the weight heavier at the end. You also want to try to keep one hand close to the base of the shovel to balance weight and lessen strain on your back.

— Use proper posture – When you shovel, bend your knees and keep your back straight while lifting with your legs. Push the snow straight ahead and walk it towards the snow bank, don't try to throw it. Try to shovel forward to avoid twisting of the torso, which reduces strain on your back. The American Chiropractic Association recommends using the "scissors stance," in which you work with your right foot forward for a few minutes then switch to the left foot forward, keeping your body in better balance.

— Take your time – Working too hard and too fast is an easy way to strain muscles. It is recommended that you shovel for a maximum of 15 minutes at a time and then take a one to two minute break.

— See your chiropractor – Chiropractic care will keep your back flexible and minimize the chance for injury. If you do overdo it, your chiropractor can help correct the problem and prevent future injury.

County retiree health coverage changed

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Charlevoix County leaders changed the county's retiree health insurance policy to match employees.

County commissioners voted Wednesday to approve a new health care plan for retirees, one that mirrors the one held by full-time employees, with no other changes. The decision didn't come without disagreement, but the measure passed with a 5-1 vote.

Drebenstedt

Commissioner Bob Drebenstedt cast the sole dissenting vote. He said that's because he doesn't want retirees to lose benefits promised to them and multiple retirees questioned whether the change will be good for them.

"I didn't know if we were going to lose out insurance or what they were doing," said Kathy Sulak, a retired county worker.

Sulak attended the meeting to hear the discussion.

"I worked for the county for almost 36 years and when I retired, they said 'You are fine, so enjoy your life.' I would have worked longer, if I'd had to," Sulak said.

The policy now is that Charlevoix County retirees hired before 1993 will continue to receive medical coverage. The county stopped offering that post-retirement perk to its employees since then.

The only change is that retirees will no longer have a Blue Cross PPO policy, but a Simply Blue Health Savings Account, just like active employees. Employees hired before 1993 who are 55 years old and worked at least 20 years for the county may still retire without penalty and receive the promised post-retirement health insurance.

See charlevoixcourier.com for more.

The change also will impact the 12 currently retired employees hired prior to 1993 who are grand-fathered in for the medical coverage.

"They've always had what we active employees have. They will still have what the active employees have. They won't lose a thing," said Cheryl Potter Browe, county clerk.

Browe

The change initially came up when commissioners looked to find ways to reduce the county's unfunded multi-million-dollar financial liability created by retiree benefits.

Drebenstedt said the issue became confusing and retirees and near-retirement county workers didn't have time to understand the proposed policy changes, so they felt unsure about the county's direction.

Feeding our furry friends

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

He popped his head out the car window and barked wildly at every squirrel we passed while his ears flapped hello to pedestrians on the sidewalk. Just hours before he sat hunched on a cement floor, eyes the color of chocolate that spoke to me immediately. His cage was located down a long hallway and my pace was difficult as I witnessed so many dogs wall to wall, barking or howling seeking some small bit of attention. This "boy" was no longer on the streets of Detroit or confined to the metal and cement that had become his life for two weeks. He arrived to his new home both curious and afraid, trusting no one. We looked him over and felt his name "Charles" did not suit him. When mom turned to me and said, "Well what would you like to name him?" I thought a minute and then remembered the name of my favorite pizza parlor around the corner from our home. The name "Monte" stayed with him for the remainder of his life.

I was thinking of Monte and the menagerie of pets we had owned, most having lived a full life dying from old age. The reason for my rambling on about four-legged friends comes from my concern over the number of animals today that are diagnosed with cancer. After sharing my concerns with siblings and close friends I soon realized that pets in this generation have a shorter life span and usually due to cancer. A good friend reminded me that this early loss of animals is like a canary in a mine: so many deaths due to cancer is a wake-up call.

Growing up in a household with medical parents, and a dad in particular who loved reading medical books, notes and studying what he could under a microscope, it was natural for me to start doing a little of research on my own.

After reading blogs from U.S. to Europe and asking the same questions, the same answers repeated themselves. It's not only environmental pesticides but what the animals are eating. In the 1940s and even into the 50s we were giving our pets human food. Our dog ate table scraps and our cats ate tuna fish. Marketing spilled over into television and, of course, Americans like things that are easy. So, dog and cat food came on the scene fast and furious and in a variety of forms. Some of the foods we think are safe are not. Some companies have added chemicals to prevent rodents from entering into the feed, and some pet foods carry very little nutritional value. Good marketing has duped many of us. My blogging with friends across the pond educated me about the value of venison for dogs. Health food friends shared their insight on the benefits of brown rice. More than once a doctor blogged on about the value of a 1,000 mg. of flax seed oil pill or fish oil and yogurt to make the cell walls pliable so the immune system can attack cancer. Those familiar with Chinese medicine said a vitamin supplement mixed into food has great nutritional value. For their teeth a dog bone made with peanut butter and whole wheat are a safer bet.

If you would like a healthier choice instead of a processed dog food, be advised about what their food groups look like. Your animal will need protein; scrambled eggs, beef, chicken, lamb, venison or rabbit. Vegetables, such as cooked carrots, green beans, peas, and sweet potatoes. Also carbs, we use brown rice, and a good dose of omega 3 and six found in fish oil, sunflower oil and vitamin supplements. We use a supplement high in omegas and vitamins that includes calcium, plus, when mixed with water it looks and tastes like liver gravy. As with any change to your routine, do not begin a homemade diet for your pet without your vet's knowledge. Start any new diet gradually because a drastic change can cause digestive problems, which may mean diarrhea. Homemade dog food is soft which means more plaque on teeth. So, brushing your dog's teeth is a good idea or provide a healthy chew product.

Feeding homemade can relieve allergy symptoms, improve their skin and coat and, in our personal case, slow the growth of cancer. Pets provide us with love and comfort in good times and in bad. Why not give them the best care as their time with us is brief? The most important ingredient of all that I have not yet mentioned is a good dose of love. It's nice to know you have the ability to add quality to your "friend's" life so companions like "Monte" will be around a long time.

Blood drive organizers say 'Thanks'

Editor:

We want to thank Louise Hilligan for her effortless time as the previous volunteer chairperson as well as our condolences in the recent death of her husband. We especially want to thank our blood donors. Thanks again to Charlevoix Community Reformed Church for our location and the dozens of volunteers who give their time and effort for such a worthy cause. A special thanks of appreciation to the Lions Club and Rotary Club for our new banners and the Lions Club for setting up and the Kiwanis Club for take-down for our blood drives. We also appreciate the local businesses for their generous support. Our community could not accomplish this task without the help of ALL these wonderful people. Thanks!

The next blood drive will take place from noon-6 p.m. on Thursday, March 8, at Community Reformed Church.

Myrna Boss, volunteer chairperson

Food pantry support appreciated

The requests of food and household supplies from the Charlevoix Community Food Pantry have never been greater during its 28-year history than during the recent holiday season.

Without the many generous donations of both food and money by so many understanding residents of the Charlevoix area, it would be impossible to fulfill our mission and provide so much for the needs of our less fortunate neighbors.

The food pantry board wishes to acknowledge and publicly thank all those in the community who have given and continue to support our efforts. Some gifts in particular we wish to acknowledge, such as the 4,200 cans of food collected by the Charlevoix Middle School students, and the cash gifts from the Boilermakers Union, the Knights of Columbus, the Sports Medicine Center, the employees of St. Mary's Cement, the parishioners at St. Mary Church, the Charlevoix Street Legends, the Charlevoix Club, the Episcopal Church and the Rainbow Shop.

The pantry board feels truly blessed and is grateful for all the past and continuing generous support by so many part- and full-time residents in this community.

Scout encourages others to join up, give support

The follwoing guest commentary was written by by Daniel Symons, a 6th grade student at Northwest Academy in Charelvoix

My opinion, as a Boy Scout myself, is that all boys should join Boy Scouts because a lot of good things can come out of it. They can earn scholarships for college, make new friends, and learn to work with one another. They also learn how to help their community, and achieve new things.

Boy scouts earn scholarships by selling popcorn. If they sell $2,500-worth of popcorn they earn a scholarship fund for college. A percent of your total sales goes into the scholarship. Then each year after you have earned your scholarship a percent from your sales also goes into your scholarship fund. Therefore the more popcorn you sell, the more money you can earn for college. During the month of October I work hard selling popcorn. Selling popcorn has earned me a great start in my scholarship fund.

Another reason boys should join Boy Scouts is they can help their community. They clean up highways. They also are taught to leave no trace behind. In order to leave no trace behind, the boys always clean up from their events. This helps the community to stay clean. In order to become an Eagle Scout you have to do a service project. The service project that you choose to do is supposed to benefit your community as a whole. One of my fellow scouts made a basketball hoop in Charlevoix to help our community. I was part of this and it was a great experience.

Boy Scouts can make new friends by working on merit badges. You can also make new friends by going to scout camps and events. When you go to a Boy Scout event you learn to work with one another. When you work together you can earn prizes and money for your scout account. Your scout account can help pay for your experiences in boy scouts.

Boy Scouts achieve new things every day. Today there are over 6 million active boy scouts in the U.S. Over 70 million American boys have been Boy Scouts, including the members of Congress, astronauts, and presidents. The Boy Scouts also have different ranks: Tenderfoot, Second Class, First class, Star, Life, and Eagle Scout. To become an Eagle Scout you have to get certain merit badges. There are required ones and non-required merit badges. You must earn both types of merit badges to become an Eagle Scout.

These are my reasons why all boys should join Boy Scouts. They can earn scholarships for college, make new friends and learn how to work with one another. They also learn how to help their community and achieve new things. There are two ways of becoming a Boy Scout. You can just sign up for Boy Scouts or Cub Scouts, if you are under eleven years old. When you go through Cub Scouts first, you must earn your Arrow of Light and crossover into Boy Scouts. I earned the Arrow of Light in Cub Scouts and now I am a Boy Scout. For information on how your son can join Cub Scouts or Boy Scouts call Roger Neisburg at (231) 547-5111. So, have your future Boy Scout join today.

BASES director: Pot, prescription drug abuse rising

Dan Reynolds
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

CHARLEVOIX – Local prescription drug and marijuana abuse are on the rise, plus there are new threats in the form of readily-available products, according to D. Scott Kelly, executive director of Bay Area Substance Education Services (BASES), Inc. in Charlevoix.

"Nationally, more high school seniors have tried marijuana than cigarettes," reported Kelly, who presented his findings at a special program, entitled "Drug Use Trends in Charlevoix County," at the Charlevoix Public Library on Tuesday. He added that marijuana use is trending upward among younger students, while overall perceptions of risk are decreasing — due, in part, to newly-enacted medical marijuana legislation. Michigan is one of 16 states with a medical marijuana program, which was approved by state voters in 2008.

Kelly also discussed threats emerging from increased abuse of prescription drugs, as well as synthetic cannabinoids, which are commonly transacted under names such as K2 and Spice. He cited the instant availability of online information and resources as a contributing factor.

See charlevoixcourier.com to read a PDF of handouts from event

"We had a kid come in, saying he could buy some 'stuff' online for $50, and then 'flip' it for $700," Kelly recalled. "Synthetics create all kinds of legal, political and health issues."

The program, which drew about 40 people, was intended to help local adults understand national and local trends related to drug use and abuse, while also educating them about the effectiveness of treatment, and about addiction as a brain illness.

Kelly is the executive director and co-founder of BASES. After suffering from alcohol addiction while in college, he voluntarily entered an alcoholism treatment program, and has remained sober since 1984. He has a bachelor's degree in social work and a master's degree in counseling, and is certified as a relapse prevention specialist and advanced addictions counselor.

BASES is a private, nonprofit, licensed provider of substance abuse treatment services. Founded in 1993, the organization also operates the Charlevoix Teen Center, providing teens with after-school social and recreational opportunities as an alternative to substance abuse and violence. Jonathan Bernard Ricks, 1950-2012

Jonathan Bernard Ricks (Jon Ricks) passed away Sunday Jan. 1, 2012 in his home in Helena, Mont. after an extended illness. He was born in Detroit, raised in Birmingham, Mich. and spent his summers at the family cottage in Spring Lake, Mich. He graduated from Michigan State University with a bachelor of arts in marketing, and spent the next 30 years as a corporate trust officer. He retired at 52 and moved to Helena, Mont., in 2003 where he devoted his remaining years to pursuing his passions of fly fishing, hunting and horseback riding.

Jonathan is survived by his wife Natalie Gonzales; his sons Jonathan (Tiffany) Ricks Jr. of Traverse City; Lee (Tricia) Ricks of Helena, Mont.; his stepdaughter Megan (Josh) Merritt of Pensacola, Fla.; his older brother Jeffrey (Patricia) Ricks of Charlevoix; his younger sister Michal (Richard) Wheeler of Grand Haven; one nephew, six nieces, six great nephews and three great nieces.

He was preceded in death by his father Bernard Elijah Ricks in 2002, his mother Ruth Margaret (Guenther) Ricks in 2010, and his brother William (Bill) Ricks in 2006.

A memorial service is took place on Sunday, Jan. 15, 2012 at the Hannaford Street Bible Church, in Helena, Mont. A second memorial will be take place from 2-4 p.m. on Feb. 12 at the Traverse City Yacht Club in Traverse City.

Library offers weekly travel series in February

The Charlevoix Public Library is hosting its annual travel series at 6:30 p.m. each Tuesday in February. The library also recently updated its travel collection

On Feb. 7, the library will be venturing to Bulgaria with Evelyn and Del Weliver, retired directors of the libraries at Interlochen Center for the Arts. The Welivers will take participants on a journey through the ancient culture and lands of Bulgaria. Stories and photos will be shared of Thracian kings and gold artifacts, of monasteries, mountains, roses and the Black Sea. The Welivers will also share their images of seven UNESCO World Heritage Sites.

On Feb. 14, Ethel Larsen, a third generation Finnish American, will share her images and stories from her 12-day trip around Finland, from Helsinki in the south to the northern fells, and from the Swedish influenced western coast to the picturesque Lake District in the east.

Then Feb. 21, brings patrons to the pilgrimage sites of Europe. Larry Cummings, professor of history and geography at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey, will tour through some of the most visited pilgrimage sites in Europe. Pilgrimage sites are the places of birth or death of certain saints or religious leaders, or places that display historical or religious artifacts. Cummings will include sites in France, Italy, Spain, Austria and Switzerland.

The last in the series on Feb. 28 will take viewers into the heart of the tundra. Biologists Jim and Kathy Bricker narrate a video presentation of "Caribou Summer," a movie of their summer-long hiking trip to Nunavut, Canada. After many trips canoeing in the Arctic Circle, they opted to try camping on the 18-mile long Kathewachaga Lake. Surrounded by thousands of square miles of uninhabited tundra, their daily hikes afforded time with the area's landscape, plants and wildlife.

For more information about any of these programs, contact the library at (231) 237-7340 or www.charlevoixlibrary.org.

Road commission:

Worst road in county will soon be best road

BOYNE CITY — Charlevoix County Road Commission members reorganized their three-member board this week and looked to the year ahead.

Doug Way of the Charlevoix area, will serve for another one-year term as chairman, while Russell MaGee, of Boyne Falls, will be the vice-chairman. Keith Ogden, of East Jordan, will be the member at-large.

Way

Harmon

Road commissioners unanimously approved the roles at their Monday morning meeting in Boyne City, said Pat Harmon, road commission manager.

Way said this year will be exciting for those eager for major improvements on the highway that connects Boyne City and Charlevoix. Both state and local road officials will choose contractors for the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road overhaul next month, he said.

"It's tremendously needed. The worst road in the county will soon be the best road in the county. That's what we're focused on," Way said.

Road commissioners are appointed to six-year terms by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners. MaGee's term is up at this year's end, while Ogden's is up in December 2014 and Way's in December 2016.

Visit www.charlevoixcounty.org/ccrc.asp for more online information about the road agency.

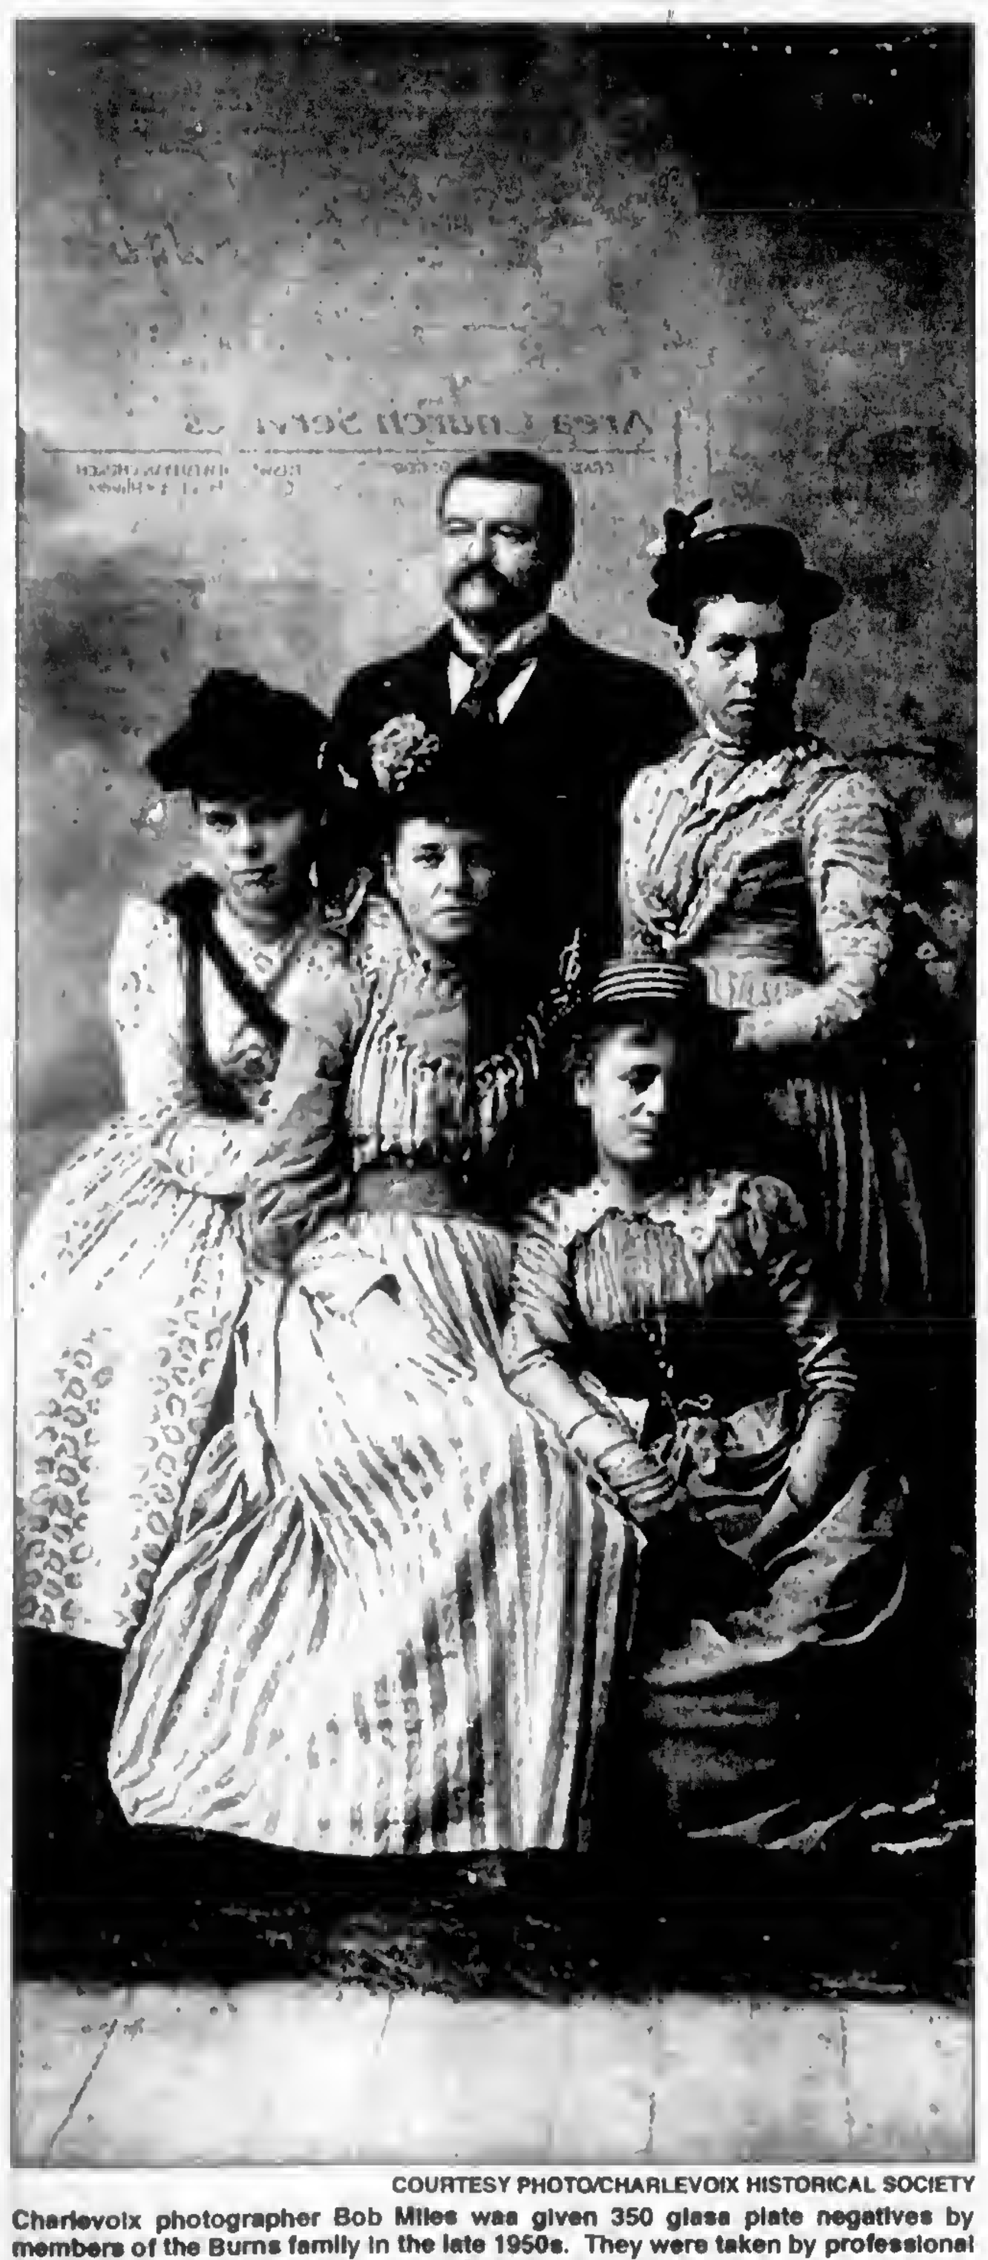
LOOKING BACK…



COURTESY PHOTO/CHARLEVOIX HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Charlevoix photographer Bob Miles was given 350 glass plate negatives by members of the Burns family in the late 1950s. They were taken by professional photographer Ernest Peaslee here in Charlevoix in the very early part of the 20th century. Miles was able to identify most of their subjects, but a few dozen individual and group portraits still remain a mystery. The name "Ferguson" is scratched at the top of this image. Can anyone identify any of the four ladies and the man? If so, please call the Charlevoix Historical Society office at (231) 547-0373 from 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday. For more information on the society visit www.chxhistory.com.

Diocese of Gaylord

Diocese of Gaylord Catholic Schools MISSION STATEMENT

The Catholic Schools of the Diocese of Gaylord will work together to provide a faith-centered Catholic Education rooted in the Gospel Message and evidenced in Worship of God, and Works of service to others.

The mission and intent of Catholic schools in the Diocese of Gaylord is to provide a distinctly Catholic education and an environment with the highest standards of academic excellence for all who participate in the life of our school communities. As we look to the future of our Catholic schools, we must remember the words of Jesus as He sent His disciples into the world to "go and teach" and to "make disciples of all nations...teaching them to observe all I have commanded you."

St. Mary School PHILOSOPHY

St. Mary Catholic School is a Faith Community — students, parents, staff, parishioners and friends. Teachers, in partnership with parents, are dedicated to providing the spiritual and academic development of each child.

Each person is a child of God, a unique and gifted individual. The curriculum is designed to nurture creativity, academic excellence, and spiritual, physical and emotional growth.

We instill responsibility, respect and compassion for all people. We are committed to making our students aware of social issues while providing the foundation and experiences necessary to be living examples of the Gospel

St. Mary School MISSION STATEMENT

The St. Mary Catholic School community empowers students to grow spiritually, academically, artistically, and physically so they may experience, understand and live their responsibilities to God, family, community and self.

ST. MARY SCHOOL
EDUCATING FOR ETERNITY

Catholic Schools Week ~ January 29-February 5
Theme: Faith. Academics. Service.

The 2012 theme focuses on three priorities that Catholic schools establish that make them stand out from other educational institutions. Children are taught faith – not just the basics of Christianity, but how to have a relationship with God. Academics, which in Catholic schools are held to very high standards, help each child reach his or her potential. Service, the giving of one's time and effort to help others, is taught both as an expression of faith and good citizenship.

While it might seem like an impossible task to cram all of that into 60 seconds, Pure Michigan representative Ken Yarsevich explained, the ad doesn't have to be heavy on a lot of specifics.

A mood, a feeling, an emotion, an experience — that's what the Pure Michigan ads try to instill in their audiences.

The ads, Yarsevich explained, are intended to drive people to the Michigan.org website, which will then take visitors the Charlevoix webpage, which is where the details will be found.

Yarsevich said about $2,000 of the program's $40,000 budget will be spent on production of the ad, with most of the rest going to buying radio airtime. The Charlevoix Convention and Visitor's Bureau will spend $20,000 on the campaign. That amount will be matched by the Pure Michigan program.

While the group assembled to provide their input to the Pure Michigan team Wednesday mentioned all the places and events that have become synonymous with Charlevoix, an over-arching theme became apparent that it's the people of the community who are the glue that holds all of the area's attractions together.

And the excitement about the advertising campaign that was almost palpable around the table Wednesday appears to be growing.

Even before this ad campaign gets off the ground, bureau board members present Wednesday seemed interested in suggestions by Yarsevich that Charlevoix might do well to partner with other area communities (such as Harbor Springs, which is also set to begin a similar Pure Michigan campaign of its own).

Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau director Amanda Wilkin said she was pleased with Wednesday's tours and workshop. She said the Pure Michigan crew was impressed by what they saw in the community and said they should have plenty to work with while creating the radio ad and website.

"I think that there is a buzz going in the community about the program and what we are going to get out of it," Wilkin said.

She noted that a few other organizations have already dipped their toes in to the Pure Michigan pool along with the bureau, noting that Castle Farms, the Beaver Island Boat Company and the Beaver Island Chamber of Commerce have all chipped in some money toward the campaign.

Earlier in the week, news of the Pure Michigan campaign also got wheels turning in the minds of the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority Board.

Although the board heard from authority director Keith Carey that most of its limited budget for the 2012-13 fiscal year is already spoken for to maintain programs such as the summer concert series, the movies in the park, the Up North Fourth and Flurry Fest, board members were brainstorming about where they might find funds in the future to also jump on board the Pure Michigan bandwagon.

Wilkin said the Pure Michigan team is expecting to have a draft of the radio ad ready for review sometime in mid-February. Anyone who is interested in participating in the Pure Michigan campaign with the bureau may contact Wilkin at (231) 547-2101.

DONATION

"I want to make sure people see how kids love bears. I know (the bears) will make them (patients) feel safer," she said.

"The bears are not expensive. They are only $5 each. Anyone can donate money or purchase bears themselves," he said.

Now that the bears have been bought and donated and the birthday party is over, Erin is keeping busy in school. She mentioned dreams of becoming Miss America someday, or maybe even an actress.

Although her dreams are big, she still believes in helping out whenever she can.

"If someone was thinking of doing something to help others I would say that you should do it because it is not that hard. I would even help them too and save money," she said.

And it's that kind of attitude her parents want to see.

"I do hope she sees the benefits in her work because ultimately, being giver is a great way to live," Glenn said.

Charlevoix Area Hospital representative Angela Gee said the bears work a great tool for hospital staff not only to comfort children who might be scared or not feeling well, but also to help distract them from some of the potenitally scary things that take place before surgery, such as starting and IV.

Erin and her family plan on helping the Charlevoix hospital organize and host fundraisers if needed to keep the comfort bear program going. Anyone who would like to donate money or purchase comfort bears can do so at www.comforthearsforkids.org.

Charlevoix's Katie Hybi (30) and Kelsey Way (32) fight for a rebound with Harbor Springs' Stephanie Sylvain (5) during the Rayders' game against the Rams on Friday, Jan. 20.

GIRLS VARSITY BASKETBALL

Halftime hurdles

Rayders struggle to convert first half leads into victories

The Charlevoix Rayder girls varsity basketball team has started off strong in its last two games, but both times were unable to hang on the leads they took into the locker room at halftime.

On Friday, Jan. 20 the Rayders traveled to Harbor Springs where the Rams made 21 of 25 free throw attempts in a second half surge that led to a 62-46 Lake Michigan Conference victory over Charlevoix.

Harbor's Elena Ongaro scored a game-high 18 points and Jenna Lechowicz added 15 points and six rebounds as Harbor won its third straight game, improving to 7-3 overall, 2-3 league.

Megan Peters scored 16 points and Madeline Boss added 10 for the Rayders, who fell to 3-7 overall and 1-4 in the Lake Michigan Conference.

Charlevoix led, 30-25, at halftime, but the Rams exploded for a 22-8 advantage in the third quarter to take a 47-38 lead into the final stanza.

"We started out a little flat," Harbor coach Jennifer Foley said. "But we came out of the gates in the third quarter and turned up our defensive pressure which led to some easy buckets."

Maggie Walker added nine points, seven rebounds and six steals for the Rams, while Katie Barkley finished with nine points and four steals.

"We attacked the basket better in the second half and we got to the free throw line 25 times," Foley said. "It doesn't hurt when you make 21 of them."

On Tuesday, the Rayders led Grayling by as much as 15 in the first half, before being outscored by the Vikings 34-19 in the second half en-route to handing Charelvoix 61-49 defeat.

"They made some good adjustments to our trap to start the second half," Rayder head coach Leslie Hoffman said. "We struggled on defense, and gave them some open 3-pointers that they made."

The loss dropped Charlevoix to 3-8 overall, 1-5 league and lifted Grayling is 6-6, 2-4.

Sydney Carlson scored 15 points and dished out six assists, while Kelsey Way added 13 points and 12 rebounds for the Rayders, who led 17-6 after one quarter and 30-27 at halftime.

The Lady Radyers will be back in action on Friday when they host Traverse City St. Francis. They then have an open date on Tuesday and then will host Boyne City on Friday, Feb. 3.

The Charlevoix Rayder girls junior varsity basketball team notched a decisive 54-30 win over conference rival Grayling on Tuesday.

The Rayders jumped out to 10-4 lead by the end of the first quarter an never looked back. By half-time they had opened up a 17-point 29-12 lead.

Leading the Rayders in scoring were Olivia Storm with 11, Ellie Way and Jennaca Holecheck with 7 each, while Maggie Hamilton and Kelsey Pischner added 6 apiece.

With the win the Rayders' record improved to 6-4.

Head JV coach Todd Klinger praised the floor game of Storm.

"She was able to score as well make plays defensively with her hustle and tenacity," Klinger said. "She is a player that only knows one speed and that is full throttle. This was here first game back since a shoulder injury before Christmas and she did not miss a beat."

"Ellie Way did a great controlling the tempo of the game from the point guard position and Kourtney Putman and Kelsey Pischner helped control the boards for us most of the game," he added.

Klinger also praised the play of Jennifer Archery, Kaitlin Hinckley, Nicole Peterson, and Samantha Meads.

"The girls coming off of the bench have continued to make big plays for us," he said. "We turned a six point lead at the end of the first quarter into a 17 point halftime lead."

The Rayders JV girls were next scheduled to travel to Traverse City St. Francis on Thursday and then will make up a previously weather-postponed game at Petoskey on Wednesday, Feb. 1.

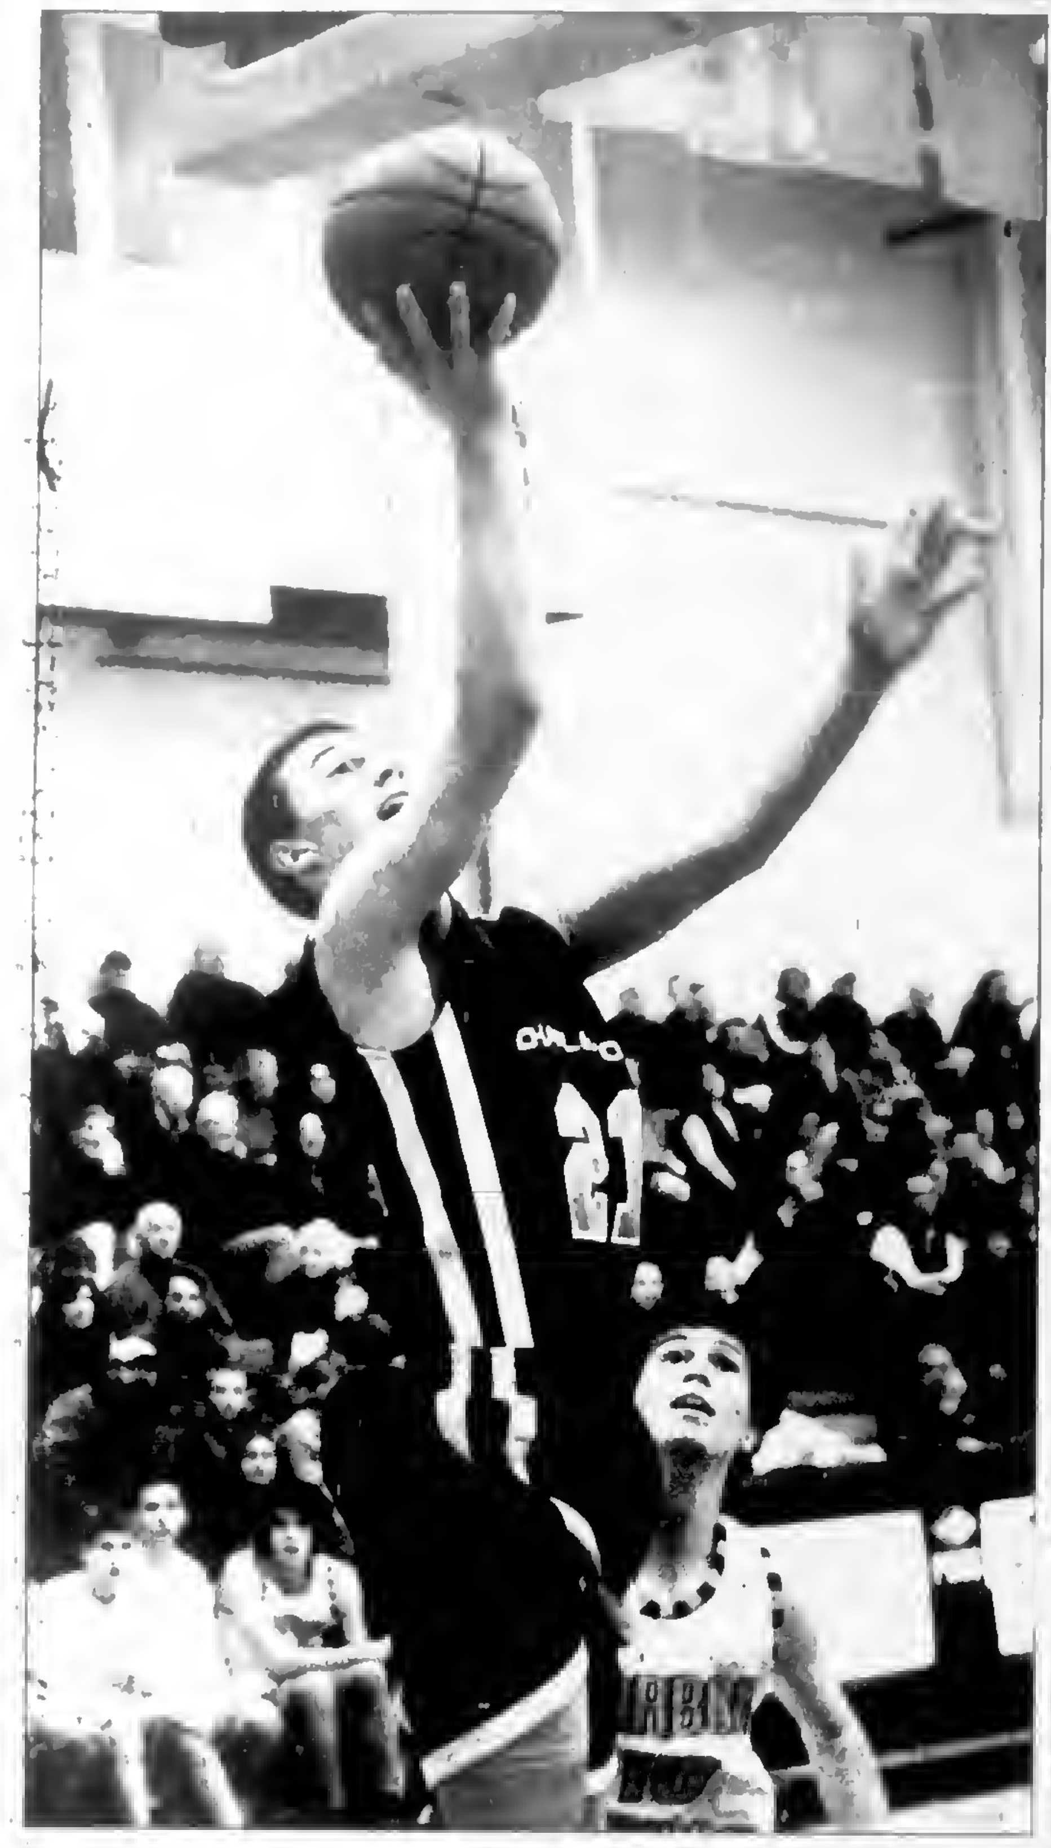
BOYS VARSITY BASKETBALL



SCOTT RICHARDS/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Charlevoix's Andrew Plude (21) goes up for a layup past Harbor Springs' Peter Lauer in the varsity Rayders' game against the Rams on Friday, Jan. 20.

Rayders win big, then just miss

After handily defeating one conference foe last Friday, the Charlevoix Rayder boys varsity basketball team couldn't quite sustain late game comeback in another Lake Michigan Conference contest Tuesday.

On Friday, Jan. 20, the Rayders traveled to Harbor Springs where Andrew Plude scored a career-high 26 points and Charlie Hamilton added 14 Friday as Charlevoix used a big second half in downing the Rams 75-40.

With the win Charlevoix improved to 6-3 overall, 3-2 league, and had won four of its last five starts.

Plude hit two 3-pointers and scored nine points in the third quarter, during which the Rayders outscored the Rams, 23-9, to turn the game into a rout.

The Rayders, who led 33-23 at halftime, made eight of their 10 3-point attempts in the second half, and finished 10-for-21 from behind the arc on the night.

"Potter works hard every day in practice," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "He has great focus in what he wants to do and I'm not surprised (by his 26-point effort). I think he's worked very hard toward getting to this point ... He took it to the hole well tonight."

Charlevoix point guard Andrew Potter finished with eight assists, and the Rayders did a good job of rebounding Harbor misses and getting out on the fast break, Wood said.

"Andrew Potter took on a more distributor role tonight," he said. "I think him looking up the floor and pushing it up to (Plude) really benefited us."

Wood said Josh Hogan and Sawyer Russell were also keys to the Rayders' ability to run as both did an admirable job on the boards.

"Josh Hogan and Sawyer Russell both did a tremendous job, not only contesting shots, but getting rebounds and getting it out and getting us running," he said. "We're still not rebounding as well as we'd like, but we're making strides in the right direction."

Peter Lauer scored 10 points and Scott Morse added nine for Harbor, 4-6, 2-3, while Neal Zoerhof finished with 11 rebounds.

On Tuesday, the Rayders faced a tough Grayling team, and mounted a late-game comeback, but fell just short 70-60 to the Vikings.

Grayling's Zane Tobin hit four 3-pointers to lead the Vikings with 32 points in their win over the Rayders. The win lifted Grayling to 7-3 overall, 4-2 league. The Rayders slipped to 6-4, 3-3.

Andrew Potter had 25 points, seven assists, six rebounds and four steals to lead the Rayders, while Will Jeakle added 18 points, and Andrew Plude finished with 11.

Tobin scored 12 of his point in the third quarter, after which the Vikings led, 58-52.

"I was proud of the boys tonight," Charlevoix coach Wood said. "We played a tough team, full of seniors, at their place, and we never gave up.

"We made some costly mistakes in the final minutes of the game, but, we learned that it is crucial to value the ball in critical situations."

In a mock version of the United Nations, Charlevoix students will represent different countries and issues at a competition this March.

High school teacher Annemarie Conway is leading a group of about 13 students in a Model United Nations club. Some students are using the club for class credit while others are not. Conway noted this is Charlevoix's first year participating in the program. She also mentioned it was slow getting the club started but things are going better now and the group has received a lot of community support for which they are thankful.

Essentially what the students are doing is representing different countries around the world on different issues. They will argue those issues on behalf of their countries at a competition downstate this March.

Senior Taylor Ackerman is representing Brazil on some Middle East issues. And since she has been to a Model United Nations conference before, she is also the go-to person for other students who need help.

"It is hard, and it is a lot of work. But the group we have is really dedicated and works hard," she said.

Students began doing lots of research about their countries. They are also assigned a committee to serve on. These committees represent different issues such as women's rights, health care, etc. Once on a committee, students must write position papers about where their country

As Hayes Township officials prepare to host the first of two public hearings on a proposed application for a state grant to purchase a former summer camp on Lake Charlevoix and turn it into a township park, a small, but recently-vocal group is going public with their objections to the plan.

A group calling itself the Committee to Protect Hayes Township recently placed full page advertisements in the Petoskey News-Review and on the newspaper's website listing their objections to the plan and imploring residents to attend a public hearing set for 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Feb. 8, at the Hayes Township Hall to voice their own opposition to the plan.

Early in 2011 members of the Schulman family, which has owned Camp Sea Gull – an all-girls summer camp off Boyne City-Charlevoix Road on the north shore of Lake Charlevoix — for some 55 years, announced they were closing the camp and putting the property up for sale.

The 23-acre parcel, with its 1,450 feet of Lake Charlevoix shoreline is currently listed for $6.5 million.

Hayes Township officials, who have been looking for a location for a park on the water for some time, began talks with the property owners about the possibility of the township purchasing the camp property. Since then, township officials have been laying the groundwork to seek the grant to assist in the purchase. The township has hosted public informational meetings, met with county officials and sought help in the

Local hotel burns down

Fire officials: Fire appears to have been accidental

Sparks fly into the air as an excavator moves around the charred remains of the Charlevoix Hotel so firefighters can finish extinguishing a fire that destroyed the building early Saturday.

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Hotel is no more.

The old hotel, located at 206 Antrim St. in Charlevoix, burned down Saturday, Jan. 28.

Firefighters from the Charlevoix Fire Department were dispatched to the scene at 3:48 a.m. A short time later firefighters from Charlevoix Township and East Jordan fire departments were called for mutual aid.

"At that point, we had everybody out," said shift commander Joe Schwartzfisher with the City of Charlevoix Fire Department. "There was minor smoke inhalation, but no one was seriously hurt other than that."

Firefighters arrived to see flames visible from the outside of the building and were told that people were still in the building, said Charlevoix Fire Chief Paul Ivan in a press release.

The firefighters used a ladder to rescue one resident from a second-story window on the south side of the building. Everyone else was able to evacuate the building on his or her own or were not home at the time of the fire, he said.

Victims were treated by emergency medical services at the scene, said Ivan. No one was transported by ambulance or sought treatment at the hospital.

Ivan said, in all, seven people were living in the building at the time of the fire. Two were not home at the time of the fire, but one resident had his two children with him.

The Charlevoix Police Department as well as the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office helped with traffic control and Swanson K & D Excavation offered an excavator to push in the structure so that firefighters could get to the heart of the fire.

The fire began in a bathroom of the building, said Schwartzfisher.

"The excavator caved in the house a little bit so we could gain access to the hot spots," said Schwartzfisher. "The house is going to have to be bulldozed and taken away. It's been totaled."

Firefighters were on scene until 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Ivan said based on the information he's collected so far — including interviews with the occupants — there is nothing to suggest that there was anything suspicious about the fire's origin.

Ivan spent time at the site Wednesday sifting through the rubble in the area where the fire started and said he found no additional evidence to suggest anything suspicious.

It was the second time in the past month that firefighters were called to the former hotel.

Around 3 p.m. on Dec. 31 firefighters responded to a fire in the kitchen in the same building. Damage from that fire was limited to some a small area of the kitchen. He said there was no connection between the two fires, noting that the Dec. 31 fire was caused by something being left on the stove.

In recent years, the Charlevoix Hotel has rented most of its rooms on a long term (not nightly) basis, said Ivan.

Ivan said the owner, John Connolly, who lives in the Flint area, reported to him that he has not had insurance on the building since 1995. Connolly inherited the property from his parents when they died.

"I've been in Charlevoix 31 years and the hotel hadn't changed in that whole time," said Ivan.

When the excavators demolished the hotel so that firefighters could finish putting the fire out, said Ivan, they found that the structure was rotten.

The blocks that built the hotel — and part of the Olson's Food Store next door to the hotel — were made from sand dug from the hill behind the hotel by a cement-maker named Did Hammond, said Dale Boss.

Boss, a Charlevoix resident, began delivering milk as a milkman's helper in 1942 when he was 11 years old. He began operating his own truck at 14, and worked as a door-to-door milkman for years after.

"That hotel is about 100 years old," he said. "It hasn't been used strictly as a hotel for a long, long time."

The hotel began serving as housing about 40 years ago, Boss said.

David Miles, co-director of the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum said the information he has on the hotel's history is limited.

"We don't know when it became a hotel. The 1927 tax records show it as belonging to Cora Nohle, who had her fingers in several hotel pies, and was called the Hotel Nohle. In 1940, Charles and Elizabeth Reinhart bought it and changed the name to Charlevoix Hotel. It was open year around. We don't know when it ceased operation as a hotel, but for several years now has operated as a rooming house with kitchen facilities."

Ivan said the American Red Cross assisted the residents of the hotel who were left homeless by the fire. He said the Red Cross found accommodations for four residents and the rest were able to find housing with friends or family in the area. He said any possessions any of the occupants had in the building at the time of the fire were destroyed.

The Red Cross is accepting financial donations. Donations addressed to "Charlevoix Fire" can be sent or dropped off at Northern Lower Michigan Chapter of the American Red Cross at 2350 Mitchell Park Drive in Petoskey.

Ivan said he expects that by the end of the week he will give Connolly the OK to start cleaning up the site, which he will encourage him to do quickly given the safety hazard the damaged structure poses.

BEAVER ISLAND

Broder book to benefit island health center

Broder

The Beaver Island Rural Health Center Board recently approved a unique offer and fund raising proposal from the family of the late David S. Broder.

The Washington Post reporter and columnist died last year, ending a career covering national politics that spanned more than 50 years. He was often referred to as the "Dean of the Washington Press Corps." Married to Ann Collar Broder, and son-in-law of Beaver Island historian Helen Hoffman Collar, Broder honeymooned on the Emerald Isle in 1951 and wrote about it often in his nationally syndicated columns that were carried in over 300 papers. Some of these columns, written from the Island, are the basis for the project to benefit the Health Center and the community it serves.

Ann and David's sons, George, Josh, Matt and Mike, have researched and compiled the Beaver Island columns — about three dozen in total. They are going to publish the collection in book form, and deliver copies to the Health Center by Memorial Day this year. Ranging from the early 1970s to this past decade, the columns provide snapshots and insights to Island moments as they simultaneously reference national issues of the day (at that particular time). The health center, with support from other civic leaders and marketing by the Beaver Island Chamber of Commerce, will manage the retail distribution and sale of the book.

The Broder family is underwriting the entire cost of the project, so 100 percent of all revenues collected from book sales will support the health center.

"This is a terrific gift from the Broder family, and great opportunity for the health center to improve its financial standing. As a facility that serves Islanders and visitors of all ages, 12 months a year, we are constantly under pressure to find new sources of money," said health center board chairman Denny Cook. "We are honored and pleased to be the beneficiary of this truly one-of-a-kind fund raising project. We will do all we can to encourage Islanders, summer residents, their friends and their guests to acquire copies to read and enjoy for years to come," Cook added.

The exact number of copies to be produced, and the cost, is still being considered by the Broders. These decisions will be made soon, with input from the health center, civic leaders and the chamber of commerce.

"This book is a tribute to our father, who embraced Beaver Island as our entire family has for five generations, since 1915. He admired and delighted in the people, the characters, and the community over his long adult life - its quirky independence, Irish heritage, self-reliance and patriotism," said ~~oldest~~ son George Broder. "This effort is a demonstration of his and our family's love of Beaver Island that we hope delivers for readers the same type of smiles, laughs and joy we experience when reading these gems."

For more information on how to support and participate in this project, contact Donna Kuhic at the Beaver Island Rural Health Center, (231) 448-2275 or via email at donna@birhc.org.

'Mostly Michigan' exhibit at library

Mostly Michigan presents vintage black and white photographs by D. James Galbraith that capture the everyday lives of people in Michigan during the 1970's and 80's.

Galbraith (1930-2002) had an extensive career as a United States Air Force photographer and continued as a photojournalist for many newspapers in Lower Michigan. The photographs and oral histories of Jim and Susan Galbraith earned their published work, "Hartland: Change in the heart of America," a Pulitzer Prize nomination for documentary literature in 1985. Some photographs from this collection will be on display in the community room foyer at the Charlevoix Public Library through April. Unsafe ice conditions

Charlevoix County Sheriff Don Schneider is cautioning area citizens of the unsafe ice on all area lakes this winter.

"Most of the smaller lakes are just starting to become completely iced over, but by no means are they safe to go out on due to our on and off warmer winter this year," Schneider said in a news release. "Please take every precaution before going onto the ice.

The sheriff recommends anyone going out onto ice should do the following:

— wear a personal floatation device

— carry a flashlight or some other type of signalling device,

— always notify family or friends of the time you are going out onto ice, the time you will return and the exact location of where you could be located in the event of an emergency.

Sheriff warns of phone scam

Charlevoix County Sheriff Don Schneider is warning area residents that in recent days his office has been receiving reports from citizens who have been receiving calls from people claiming they are asking for donations to help support the local VFW post.

Schneider said Henry Ether of the Smelt City Post No. 3675 in Boyne City reports that there are no programs currently where the VFW would solicit funds. Schneider said Ether also checked with East Jordan, Charlevoix and Petoskey posts and they do not have any contribution solicitation programs either.

Homophone humor: Write about the right rite

Roger Knutson

Successful communication often involves choosing just the right word. English, as a language, presents some unusual problems in that task. Homophones are words that sound alike, but are spelled differently and have different meanings. I suspect the commonness of homophones in English is the product of the extensive borrowing into English from many other languages. You might say that English is made richer by borrowing. Something like the current American government.

The homophone problem is rendered more difficult as our common language becomes more and more verbal rather than written. The transfer from verbal back to written language produces phrases like "reeking havoc," which I recently read in a local newspaper. Reeking havoc sounds even more troublesome than the correct homophone, "wreaking havoc."

Sometimes homophonic confusion can produce unexpected humor. Bury and berry provide such opportunities. In English we can bare an arm or bear a burden, and we might miss something by a hare's hair. A swayed jacket might be a completely new fashion statement. And the confusion of muscle, mussel and muzzle, (which might signify both the open end of a gun barrel or a face mask for a dog) holds promise of fun as well as confusion.

The rain of a king might signify his own sort of weather. The rein of a king might apply if he were to handle horses or oxen, and even the king's reign could be appropriate.

The problem of choosing the exactly correct word has led me to consider the situation where an author might design a ceremony to be used in choosing the perfect word. We could say that the wordwright would write a right word rite.

Try speaking that last sentence to someone and ask them what it means.

We need written words.

'Squared' exhibit set to open in East Jordan

The Jordan River Arts Council's first exhibit of the 2012 year, "Squared and Squared Again," opens at 1 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 12, with a reception for artists, family and friends.

For the exhibit, more than 30 artists have met the challenge to create works of art using the square, any size. Some artists have created two works, some related and some not. The artists have chosen a wide range of media, both two- and three-dimensional, and a wide variety of subjects.

One interesting entry is a piece by Mary Guntzviller of Bellaire, entitled, "E=mc2," a mixed media work using clear plastic, with many small units and a large unit all in one. Another entry is a work by Kathie Briggs of Charlevoix, "Squared in Japanese," a fiber work of two squares in one. John Stevens has submitted a neon sculpture, "Boxed In." Three squares, neon in red, yellow and blue and a figure within.

During the opening, guests will be invited to create an inch square piece using collage materials similar to the squares as done in the "Love of Letters" show. Guests may take them home or leave them for display. Refreshments served by the arts council board. The exhibit runs through March 16.

During exhibits, the Jordan River Art Center, located at 301 Main St., East Jordan has modified hours. The center will be open Tuesday through Sunday, closed Mondays and holidays. Other times can be arranged by calling Nancy Carey at (231) 536-7812 or ncarey@charter.net or Jane Diller at (231) 582-6399 or jjdesign@twin valley.net.

CHARLEVOIX — There is a new home owner on Charlevoix's West Lincoln Street.

Jayne Kagabitang bought a house this month for the first time in her life. She and her teenage son will soon move in, following a group effort to put a roof over their heads — a roof they own for themselves.

"I really can't believe this is finally, finally happening," Kagabitang said Jan. 13, as she signed her mortgage agreement.

The two-story home became Kagabitang's after a fleet of public and nonprofit advocates helped her navigate the complicated and often red tape-filled housing assistance programs offered through state and federal resources. They all agreed Jayne's is a success story, despite a low-income disadvantage.

"It's a tremendous sense of satisfaction because you can see what can be accomplished if they are willing to put forth the effort," said John Laney, Kagabitang's real estate agent from Prudential Preferred Properties Network in Charlevoix.

The home purchase became a reality through Kagabitang's participation in programs by the Michigan State Housing Development Authority, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Rural Development program and those run by the Northwest Michigan Community Action Agency. She enrolled in financial and home management classes, she saved $1,000 over several years and participated in credit counseling.

"It's called layering and it's interesting how it all came together," said Keith Greenwald, a budget and housing counselor with the nonprofit community action agency based in Petoskey. "We show them how to prepare themselves for home ownership. It might take two or three years, but it's possible for many people."

> "You get a sense of pride completing the programs."
> — JAYNE KAGABITANG, NEW HOMEOWNER

Kagabitang said she now feels pride after completing the various programs and buying a home for herself and her son, John, 13.

"It's given him a sense of self-worth, too. Many of his friends' parents own homes," she said. "This is an investment in my son's future."

Kagabitang qualified for home purchase assistance through the state housing authority. She had to live in Section 8 rental housing, be elderly, disabled or a low-income worker, have a good credit rating with no debt and complete home-buyer education classes.

The process includes many hoops, but pays off in the end, said Dawn Hengesbach, Kagabitang's state housing authority resource specialist.

"It's extremely beneficial. It's asset-building. Some of these folks have never owned a home. We help get them there," Hengesbach said.

The state agency and the Petoskey-based nonprofit action agency combined resources to cover Kagabitang's closing costs and the federal rural development program backed her mortgage, allowing a lower-than-normal fixed interest rate. She applied for a federal direct rural housing loan designed for low-income citizens, said Valerie Brickner-Stewart, a specialist with the U.S. agency.

Her office processed 80 home purchases through the rural development program last year, a decrease from the 150 completed in 2010, she said.

"Without this program, many low and very low-income families could never buy their own home. They could rent, but not own," Brickner-Stewart said. "There are a lot of people who don't know we exist."

That's why Kagabitang decided to tell her story to the community — she wants others to follow in her footsteps toward home ownership.

"If I can do it, others can, too," she said while she stood smiling in her new kitchen. "You get a sense of pride completing the programs. It was a lot of work, but it was worth it."

Details about the various public housing programs available for low-income, elderly or disabled citizens vary depending on individual situations. The best way to learn whether someone qualifies for such housing assistance is to contact the agencies that operate the programs.

County considers senior services tax hike proposal

Jack Messer (laft) and Richard Fish, both with the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging, discuss the agency's funding woea Wednesdey at the county commissioners' meeting.

CHARLEVOIX

Charlevoix County voters may be asked later this year if they will pay more in property tax millage to help support senior programs in the county.

Jack Messer, executive director for the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging, said the agency is prepared to make a final recommendation to county commissioners on how to wrestle a years-long deficit spending practice. He attended Wednesday's county board meeting to discuss the agency's proposed three-legged approach.

"We believe the projections I gave you are the best we can do," Messer told commissioners.

The plan involves an increased senior millage, cost-cutting measures and a new income-based fee structure for certain agency services.

Messer said Charlevoix County's current 0.4-mill senior levy should be raised to about the 0.7-mill statewide average. County commissioners must decide whether to put the question before voters.

One mill equals $1 in tax for every $1,000 of a property's taxable value. Therefore if the millage rate were increased from the current 0.4 mills to the state average 0.7 mills, a person who owns a property with a taxable value of $100,000 would pay $70 annually instead of $40 to help pay for senior services in the county.

Additionally, multiple vacant jobs at the agency remained unfilled. They will become occupied only when and if returning "snowbirds" create an increased demand, Messer said.

Finally, an income-based fee structure may be considered by officials.

The problem's ultimate crux is how the agency annually spends more than it receives through taxes, grants and donations, often by well more than $300,000. Each year officials chose to cover that shortfall with the public agency's fund balance, an account that may diminish from its current $1.2 million to nothing within three years if major budget practices aren't pursued.

Commissioner Bob Drebenstedt asked about senior center attendance trends across the county and how that relates to the estimated annual 4-percent growth in senior programming needs. Messer said senior center attendance is on the decline, but in-home service requests are skyrocketing.

Commissioner Chris Christensen asked whether Messer could be prepared by the next board meeting to have the agency's final recommendation ready for commissioners to discuss and consider. Messer said that is his intention.

The agency's advisory board worked on the recent senior program survey designed to gauge public input on how best to retool the Commission on Aging and its programs. It led to the three-pronged solution proposal.

Richard Fish is the current advisory board chairman and he attended Wednesday's meeting to answer questions with Messer. Fish said the "incredible" focus group experience showed virtually unanimous support across the county for the agency's three-way approach to rein in the budget without taking an ax to critical programs.

"We are the safety net for these senior citizens," Fish said.

Multiple meetings held at senior centers and libraries detailed the problem and sought public input for potential solutions. Officials held such sessions in Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan and on Beaver Island.

The next Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners' meeting is set for 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday, Feb. 8, in the commissioners' meeting room, 203 Antrim St., Charlevoix. Decisions about the county's senior programs could be made at that time, officials said.

Thompson is also encouraging any performing arts program alumni, to take a trophy or award from the era in which they participated.

"We are in the process of cleaning out our props and costume rooms and have come across many bins filled with awards from forensics/debate competitions and drama competitions. We are currently displaying many of the awards, but for the ones that we cannot display, we would rather that they be a treasured heirloom in someone's home, rather than see them get damaged or collect dust in our storage areas," Thompson said. Project Connect seeks volunteers

Volunteers are needed to help with this year's Project Connect, which will take place 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 21, at the Emmet County Fairgrounds.

Project Connect provides a number of resources, including organizations and charities, under one roof to provide materials and services to those in need. To learn more, or to register to be a volunteer, call (231) 487-1006 or visit www.charemunitedway.org/volunteer and click on "project connect."

Hospice earns designation for veterans services

Hospice of Northwest Michigan has received "We Honor Veterans" level two status from the national campaign designed to empower hospice professionals to meet the unique needs of dying veterans.

Hospice of Northwest Michigan is the only hospice organization in Northern Michigan participating in the We Honor Veterans program.

We Honor Veterans helps hospice organizations build professional and organizational capacity to provide quality care for veterans; develop or strengthen partnerships with the Veterans Administration and other veteran organizations; and increase access to hospice and palliative care for veterans in the community.

To achieve the level two designation, Hospice of Northwest Michigan conducted several educational and staff development programs, and integrated veteran-friendly activities in policies and procedures. Building relationships with organizations that serve veterans is another key requirement.

"We are truly honored to earn this distinction," said Cheri Hoffman, executive director of Hospice of Northwest Michigan, which is affiliated with the Health Department of Northwest Michigan. "Achieving this level has involved a lot of learning on the part of our staff. We appreciate their dedication to our veteran population."

Hoffman said the organization is already at work to achieve level three designation, which involves more staff and community education and partnerships. According to the We Honor Veterans organization, one in four people dying in the U.S. each day is a veteran.

"By recognizing the unique needs of veterans who are facing a life-limiting illness, we are able to accompany and guide these men and women toward a more peaceful ending," said Tina Lamont, director of home care and hospice for the Health Department of Northwest Michigan. "For veterans who experienced combat service or other trauma, this can be particularly important as experiences from the past may resurface at the end of life."

More than 1,000 hospice organizations across the country have joined We Honor Veterans and are increasing their skills and capacity for serving veterans. Activities range from utilizing a military history checklist at admission, recognition events such as pinning ceremonies and certificate presentations, to outreach to other community organizations. Additionally, We Honor Veterans is helping hospices work more effectively with VA medical facilities in their communities.

"All hospices are serving veterans but often aren't aware of that person's service in the armed forces. Through We Honor Veterans we are taking a giant step forward in helping hospice and palliative care professionals and volunteers understand and serve veterans at the end of life," said J. Donald Schumacher, National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization president. "It is time that we step up and acquire the necessary skills and fulfill our mission to serve these men and women with the dignity they deserve."

For additional information about We Honor Veterans, call (231) 547-6092 or (800) 551-4140. You can also visit www.wehonorveterans.org.

Commissioners move to save taxpayers millions

Earlier tax over-collection means Grandvue bond will be paid off early

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix County taxpayers may soon wiggle out from under $4 million in looming tax bills.

County commissioners unanimously agreed Wednesday, Jan. 25 to begin the process to pay off the bond that voters approved for the Grandvue Medical Care Facility. The move will save about $350,000 in future interest payments and will keep about $4 million in uncollected taxes in citizen pockets.

"It's an opportunity to work for the taxpayers and save them money," said Chris Christensen, commissioner from Boyne City. "I'm pleased because we're doing the right thing."

Christensen learned while he researched the county's 2010 audit that the Grandvue bond could be paid off early after rising property values in the mid-2000s bumped up the tax revenue stream from that millage. Officials never adjusted the levy rate as property values fluctuated, but instead kept collecting 0.54 mills.

That means the county collected far more than needed to make the annual bond payments. County coffers have enough money from the tax to pay off the remaining principal balance in May 2012, the earliest possible debt retirement date for the Grandvue expansion bond.

The tax will then stop its appearance on local tax bills, too.

"To save that kind of money is awesome," said Rich Gillespie, commissioner from Beaver Island.

This move also allows the county to avoid collecting more taxes than are needed and then sorting out how to refund the money to taxpayers.

Christensen described it as the county's "unintentional over-collection we happen to catch at the right time." Had it carried on beyond the total payoff amount, it might have become a paperwork nightmare to refund those tax dollars, he said.

In September, following Christensen's discovery, commissioners voted to reduce the Grandvue bond millage rate from the long-running 0.54 mills to 0.175 mills in order to collect just what is needed for remaining payments.

Now county financial advisors will draw up the final documents to close out the bond, though it will require additional commissioner approval to complete.

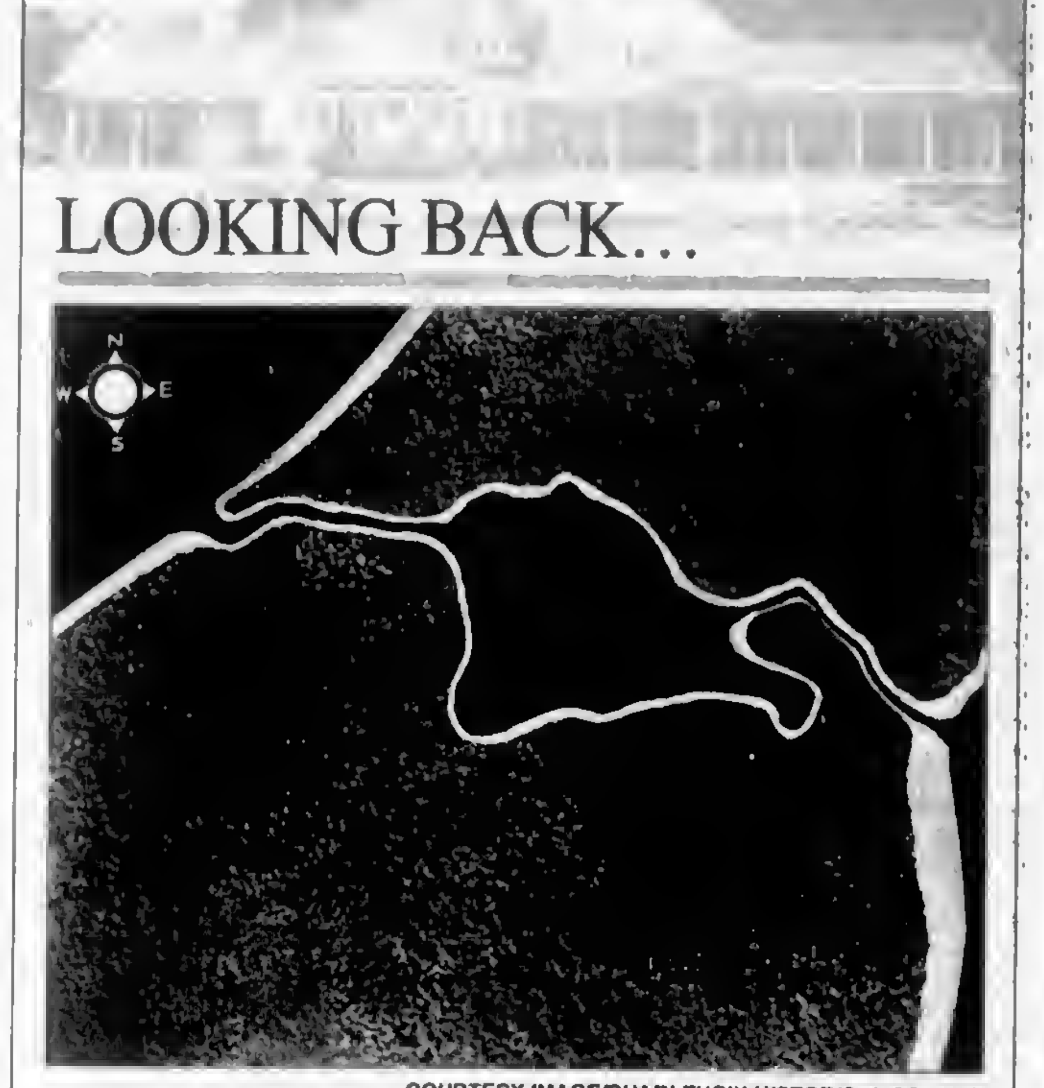
LOOKING BACK...



COURTESY IMAGE/CHARLEVOIX HISTORICAL SOCIETY

This image, which was created by photographer Bob Miles, who retouched an aerial photo, shows what he thought the area would have looked like before before Charlevoix was settled. Round was not visible from either Lake Michigan or Lake Charlevoix. At the time, Lake Charlevoix was two feet higher than Round Lake, which was in turn two feet higher than Lake Michigan. Two shallow waterways, both named Pine River, connected Round Lake to the others. The upper channel of Pine River, right, began on the Lake Charlevoix shore and looped around a peninsula that hindered access from one lake to the other. It emptied into Round Lake, as it does today, near the present site of the Chicago Club boathouse. On the west side of the peninsula, the hooklike indentation is today the Belvedere Club boathouse "bayou." The lower channel curved westward to follow the base of the southern bluff and emptied into Lake Michigan about 450 feet south of the present piers. All this changed in 1869 when both channels were cut and the flows of water reconfigured to open the settlement and Charlevoix County to the world.

This image is one of 850 on the Charlevoix Historical Society's most recent DVD titled "Charlevoix, Michigan — A Pictorial Journey through 16 Decades." The DVD is available at the Society's Harsha House Museum, 103 State St. by the Congregational Church. It is also available at the Central Drug Store, Round Lake Books, Castle Farms, and Ell-Air Gallery. Call (231) 547-0373 for museum store hours in February and mailing and Society membership information.

stands on a particular issue. Staying in character in these papers and not implementing their own views has been a struggle for some such as senior Sarah MacKenzie who represents Peru and serves on the human rights committee.

"I'm trying to stay in their mind set. Peru doesn't necessary go along with what I think on issues," she said.

"One example was racism. They deny they have a problem, but they really do. I had to write around my own feelings there," Sarah added.

Position papers were due this week for students. They will now move on to working on resolution papers, then comes the competition. Many are looking forward to that.

"I'm looking forward to other countries' ideas (on issues). I've been stuck in the Peru mind set, so it will be interesting to see what other people think," Sarah said.

Other students are anxious to argue their own positions.

Senior Kendra Whittemore is on a Brazilian economic committee. She said she knows her role well, and believes she will do a good job arguing her position.

Fellow team member and senior Margy Bolt is also excited about representing Brazil and sharing all she has learned.

"They have a female president. Also they are really reaching out there to help people with issues like AIDS," Margy said, adding she would like to someday see the United States' efforts in fighting the disease match those of Brazil.

Along with being excited for the competition, the students and their teacher are in agreement that the lessons learned being a part of this club will benefit the students in their lives after high school.

"I won't just have the ignorance of (only knowing about) small town issues. I'll have knowledge that reaches beyond the states," Margy said.

Taylor added that with the club, "You learn a lot. You can also relate to the news more and become more open minded. You also become a better debater and it (participating in the club) better prepares you for college."

And, the students' teacher echoed those statements.

"Anything experiential is beneficial for the kids. They are learning hands on," Conway said, adding, "Its merit is obvious."

application process from the Little Traverse Conservancy, had the property appraised and now has prepared a draft application to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources Trust Fund for a grant to help pay for up to 75 percent of the park's purchase.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources Trust Fund was established by state law in 1976. The money in the fund is from the sale of mineral rights on state property and the money may be used only to buy or develop land for recreation or protection.

While the grant is the biggest piece of the township's park puzzle, it's not the only one.

First the 75 percent funding would be based on the value that trust fund officials place on the property upon two appraisals they would commission. That means the township not only has to fund the 25 percent, but also any amount the purchase prices might be over the state's appraised value.

That's just one of the reasons the Committee to Protect Hayes Township, led by part-time township resident Mark Dorn, says the whole park idea is a bad one. Dorn, who owns a home on Lake Charlevoix in Hayes Township, said there are about 30 other people in the group — most of them Hayes Township residents, and some, but not all, lakefront property owners.

Dorn said one of the group's main objections to the park plan is the fact that there is another much bigger park – Young State Park – about seven miles down the road from the Camp Sea Gull site that already provides all of the same amenities that the township seeks in its proposed park.

He said another objection centers around their view that the township board has no clear mandate from the residents of the township that they even want such a park.

Speaking to the Courier Wednesday, Hayes Township Clerk Marlene Golovich said township boards have been looking for park property on the lake for many years, but renewed their efforts following a survey of township residents in 2008 which drew about 300 responses, that showed strong support for township officials pursuing parks.

The township's current park amenities are sparse. Golovich said an agreement with property owners at the end of Eastern Avenue on the extreme western edge of the township allows for swimming only and provides no bathroom facilities. Another small park that overlooks Lake Michigan is on a rocky bluff in Bay Shore.

But Dorn counters that the 2008 survey questions were too few and too general and in no way contemplated the type of proposal being considered by township officials now.

Vagueness in the township's plans for the park are also among concerns Dorn said he and the group have. He's also concerned about the scope of the development township officials have planned for the park.

"We don't need a Disneyland park in the middle of a residential area," Dorn said.

At earlier meetings township officials have said they envision typical lakefront park uses such as swimming, sunbathing, a boat launch and picnicking. Golovich said officials would look into possible uses for the camp buildings that are already on the site. Another use for the site that has been discussed include possible trailhead parking for a proposed non-motorized path along Boyne City-Charlevoix Road.

"We're not really proposing any uses that are really any different than how it's being used now," Golovich said.

Dorn said the township's lack of more specific plans for the property — including comprehensive site surveys, and construction and operational cost analyses amount to a lack of due diligence on the part of the township board.

Yet Dorn's group also contends that the township has already "wasted" too much money on the proposal.

Golovich said to date, the township has spent about $7,000 — $2,000 on an appraisal and about $5,000 on some preliminary engineering work to create some conceptional plans that will be presented along with the draft application at the public hearing. But, she said, the board doesn't want to spend a great deal of money on developing specific plans until has the grant in hand.

She said the board has set aside $500,000 toward the effort and is actively seeking grants and contributions to cover the 25 percent match and any additional costs.

Golovich said just acquiring the property is the first major hurdle. Once that is accomplished, she said it could take many years before funding is available to develop the park's amenities.

Dorn said he and his group are not opposed to parks, but said there are many other more pressing things on which the township should be focusing its efforts —and money.

In their ads, the committee also claims that the park will drive up taxes in the township.

Golovich said no plan has been proffered to support the park with a millage, but she acknowledged that taking the Camp Sea-Gull property off the tax rolls would cost the township (and other taxing entities) some tax revenue.

Currently the property's taxable value is about $900,000, which means the township would lose about $900 per year on its 1-mill levy. However, the property's taxable value would likely go up significantly if it were sold to a private buyer — especially if that buyer builds private homes, as Dorn said his group would like to see happen.

Golovich said prior to the committee's ad campaign she had only heard very limited opposition to the plan. Since the ads have appeared, she said she's had many people contact her in support of the plan.

Golovich said, contrary to what Dorn and his group contend, the board does want to hear input from township residents on the park plan.

"I want to stress, we don't just want to hear from the people who want this park," Golovich said. "If the majority of the people out there are against it, we won't pursue it. But I don't think that's what we are going to hear."

The second public hearing on the proposed grant application is set for 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 7, also at the Hayes Township Hall, located at 09195 Old U.S. 31 North.

Charlevoix's Charlie Hamilton (3) drives past Traverse City St. Francis' Nicholas Clear during the Rayders' game against the Gladiators on Friday, Jan. 27.

Rayders run tough with ranked teams

The Charlevoix Rayder boys varsity basketball team played tough against two top-ranked basketball team in the past week, first falling just short of knocking off conference foe Traverse City St. Francis on Friday, Jan. 27 then handing a previously undefeated Cedarville team their first loss of the season.

On Friday, Jan. 27, Byron Bullough scored 25 points and Sean Sheldon added 17 as Lake Michigan Conference-leading St. Francis held off the valiant Rayders for a 77-70 league win.

St. Francis, was then ranked seventh in the Associated Press Class C state poll, improved to 9-1 overall, 6-0 league with the win.

Charlie Hamilton scored 22 points, Andrew Potter had 19, and Andrew Plude added 18 for the Rayders, whose record fell to 6-5 in the league and 3-4 overall following the loss.

The Rayders led the game 41-34 at halftime.

"We had a good start tonight," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "We shot well in an up-and-down-the-floor half."

The Rayders trailed, 58-55, after three quarters, and managed to tie the game several times early in the fourth before St. Francis pulled away down the stretch.

"They are a big, strong, physical team, they wore us down," Wood said. "But the boys kept working hard, even when we were down by nine in the fourth."

But the Rayders bounced back on Tuesday.

Andrew Plude scored a career-high 30 points Tuesday as Charlevoix knocked off Cedarville, 80-57, in a non-league boys basketball game.

It was the first loss of the season for the Trojans, 10-1, who are ranked third in the Associated Press Class D state poll.

Sawyer Russell added 14 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for the Rayders, 7-5, while Andrew Potter added 12 points and eight assists.

James Duncan scored 18 points to lead Cedarville.

The Rayders built a 26-13 lead after one quarter, but the Trojans drew within seven, 34-27, at halftime.

"The second quarter was rough for us," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "We made some turnovers and did not shoot the ball well, but we bounced back in the third and showed more energy."

The Rayders came out blazing in the second half, outscoring the Trojans 24-13 in the third quarter and posted a 46-30 scoring advantage over the final two quarters to win going away.

Charlevoix won Tuesday's JV game, 46-45. Nick Plude 14 and Justin Pearl scored 14 points apiece for the Rayders, 6-5. The JV Rayders were leading by one point when, with 1.6 seconds left in the fourth quarter, Cedarville inbounded the ball from about half court and a shot from the top of the key bounced off the front of the rim.

The Rayder varsity will host Boyne City on Friday to take on the perennial rival Ramblers and then will host Kalkaska on Tuesday.

GIRLS VARSITY B-BALL

Turnovers costly in Rayder losses

Turnovers and missing some inside shots in the third quarter played a key part in the Charlevoix varsity girls basketball team's loss to a still-undefeated Traverse City St. Francis team on Friday, Jan. 27.

Liza Erickson scored 14 points and Cassie Williams added 13 as the Gladiators remained unbeaten and atop the Lake Michigan Conference with the 48-35 win over the Rayders.

For Charlevoix, Kelsey Way scored eight points and grabbed 15 rebounds, while Megan Peters added seven points.

St. Francis improved to 10-1 overall, 7-0 league. The Rayders fell to 3-9 overall and 1-6 in the league.

St. Francis led, 23-15, at halftime. The Gladiators outscored Charlevoix, 15-9, in the third quarter to pull away.

"We played a good first half, made our shots, and played solid defense," Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman. "The second half, they forced some early turnovers in the third."

"Kelsey Way has been a go to leader for us lately. She works hard in the paint boxing out and getting gritty on the boards. She plays tough no matter what," Hoffman said. "We've been battling some injuries at the point position which we hope to fully recover from this week. This has resulted in our crew playing in new positions and adjusting to different rotations.

"Overall I thought we played tough and proved ourselves regardless of the record we hold. It's another instance of any night in this conference can be anyone's game. I thought we held our own against a top team in our conference and played tough. That is our mission to move forward one game at a time, and get better each outing," she added.

On Wednesday, the Rayders traveled to Petoskey to make up a game that was postponed because of bad weather in mid-January.

Unfortunately, the better weather didn't stop the Rayders' skid as they fell 45-27 in a non-league loss to the Northmen.

The win was the sixth straight for Petoskey and lifted the Northmen to 7-8 after a 1-8 start. Charlevoix slipped to 3-10.

The game was tied, 11-11, after one quarter before the Northmen exploded for a 17-1 scoring advantage in the second for a 28-12 halftime lead.

Charlevoix scored the first four points of the third quarter to cut its deficit to 12, 28-16, but got no closer the rest of the way.

Megan Peters scored 7 points and Kelsey Way grabbed 7 rebounds to lead the Rayders.

"After a decent first quarter we tried to force too much in the second, and made some turnovers that Petoskey was able to turn into easy baskets," Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman said.

The Lady Radyers, who did not play on Tuesday, will host Boyne City Friday and then travel to Kalkaska on Tuesday, Feb. 7.

GIRLS JV B-BALL

JV wins one, loses one

The Charlevoix Rayder girls junior varsity basketball team had a strong showing in a win against conference foe Traverse City St. Francis last week, but struggled to maintain the momentum in a non-conference loss to Petoskey Wednesday.

On Thursday, Jan. 26, the Rayders Kourtney Putman led the Rayders with 10 points, while Jennaca Holecheck put in 9, Gloria Greene added 8, Kelsey Pischner had 7 en route to a 50-28 victory over the Gladiators.

The Rayders jumped out to a 17-10 lead by the end of the first quarter and never looked back. By halftime the lead was up to nine at 23-12. The Rayders came out strong to start the second half had increasing their lead to 38-18 at the end of the third quarter.

The win lifted the Rayders' record to 7-4.

In addition to the top scorers, head JV coach Todd Klinger said that Gloria Greene who came back from an injury that has kept her out since for six games, "was a big lift emotionally for the team."

"She hit some big shots for us to start the second half that ignited us to a big run that spread the lead to a 20 point lead," Klinger said.

"Every girl made a contribution to this win. Our defensive pressure created many opportunities for us to score easy baskets. This was a nice win because the girls were a little unsure going in to the game on how we would compare to St. Francis. This team is playing well and getting better every game."

But the Rayders had a more difficult time getting in a rhythm when they headed to Petoskey on Wednesday to make up a game that was postponed in mid-January by bad weather.

With the 33-19 loss, the Rayders' record fell to 7-5.

After being blanked 7-0 in the first quarter, the Rayders battled back to within four as the teams went into the half 13-9.

But the Northmen kept the Rayders at bay increasing their lead to 24-17 at the end of the third quarter, before the Rayders drew back within four by the game's end.

Jennaca Hnlechek led Charlevoix with 7 points followed by Maggie Hamilton with 6.

"This was a game that we never got into a rhythm as a team," Klinger said. "We missed some shots that we normally make and created many turnovers to convert to easy scoring opportunities. It was a good learning experience for the girls that when things are not going right that someone needs to step up and make something positive happen. These girls will come back from this and be better because of it.

The JV squad was slated to travel to Boyne City on Thursday and then will host Harbor Springs on Monday.

Signed, sealed and delivered

Two Rayders sign to play college ball

Two Charlevoix Rayders — one a football player, the other a softball player — signed national letters of intent to play collegiate sports on Wednesday.

Josh Hogan, a 6-foot-6, 200-pound tight end and defensive end at Charlevoix, was offered a partial scholarship after taking a recruiting visit to Marquette last weekend.

Last season Hogan finished with 18 solo tackles and 26 assists and added 13 receptions for 166 yards and a touchdown.

He'll join former Rayder Rob Boss at NMU. Boss, a 2002 Charlevoix High School graduate, is the Wildcats' offensive line coach. Boss had an outstanding career as a starter on both the offensive and defensive lines with the Wildcats.

"He has a lot of work to do, but with his raw athletic ability they see a lot of potential in him," former Charlevoix head varsity football coach Don Jess said. "He moves well, he has good feet, soft hands and the sky is the limit for him."

Jess said Hogan could be used as an H-back, a fullback, or possibly at wide receiver.

"He brings a lot of intensity and for his height he's pretty skinny but he's a very physical player, the most physical player we had all year," Jess said. "He just gives you everything he has, he's a good kid and a good teammate."

Jess said he expects Hogan will likely be red-shirted his first year at Northern.

NMU finished 4-7 overall and 3-7 in the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference last season.

Also signing a letter of intent Wednesday to play college athletics was senior softball player Kristen Mielke.

Mielke will attend Lansing Community College on a softball scholarship where she was recruited as a pitcher and to play third base, Rayder head varsity softball coach Ken Hoffman said.

Mielke is a three-year starter on the varsity. In her sophomore year she was named to the all conference and all disrict teams. In her junior year she was named to the all-conference, all disrict and all region teams. She has played for five years on the Petoskey Blaze travel team and has had four years training from pitching coach Roh Dunaham of West Coast Fundamentals in Lansing.

In 2011 she went 11-2, posting a .395 batting average and an .505 on base percentage.

From the pitcher's circle she tossed 70 innings posting a 1.54 earned run average. She rang up 66 strike outs and issued just 5 walks.

"I really believe LCC is a great fit for Kristen," Charlevoix head varsity softball coach Ken Hoffman said. "She will be able continue playing softball at the next level and get a good education while doing so. Kristen is a great kid, she has put in a lot of hours in the gym working towards this goal. I am so proud of her."

BE A WISE SHOPPER
It's always wise to remember that if an offer sounds too good to be true, it probably is. If you are offered merchandise at an unbelievably low price, check it out thoroughly. A call to the Better Business Bureau (serving Eastern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula) will tell you whether other consumers have had problems with the firm that has offered the merchandises. (248)223-9400. But call the Bureau BEFORE you make a purchase. You'll be glad you did.

Fledgling high school robotics club prepares for first competition

Alice Spence
COURIER STAFF WRITER

In an out-of-the-way classroom at Charlevoix High School, senior Becky Evans can be found working weeknights from 7-9 p.m. doing something she loves — applying math to real life situations.

Becky is a co-president of Charlevoix High School's robotics team, the "Raydernators." She, along with many other students, gather daily to build a robot for an upcoming competition.

"I just love math. Any way I can apply that to real life is something I love (doing)," she said.

Chemistry and physical education teacher Tom Schultz explained that Becky and other students are taking part in a FIRST robotics team. FIRST stands for For Inspiration and Recognition of Science and Technology. Schultz acts as the group's coach and said he first heard about the program from a magazine article.

"I remember thinking how impressed I was with FIRST being more than just a robot building club, but a team where kids compete like athletic teams and get recognized for enthusiasm/spirit, hard work, cooperation, gracious professionalism, and of course their robot design, strategy and performance," he said.

However, while Schultz knew about the pro-

Chamber Gala awards

COURIER EDITOR

The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce hosted its 53rd annual Gala and Awards Ceremony at Castle Farms on Wednesday to "celebrate the accomplishments of individuals and businesses in 2011 that have exemplified leadership and that go above and beyond in every aspect of their day." Awards recognized at the event include, Business of the Year, Ambassador of the Year, Outstanding Citizen of the Year and Customer Service of the Year. Two new awards will also be recognized, including New Business of the Year and Young Professional of the Year.

This year chamber officials tried a new format for the award presentations. Instead of having people at the event read prepared speeches about the award recipients, the chamber commissioned Real People Media to interview people in the community talking about why each winner is special.

The following list includes a rundown of each award recipient, and explanation of each award's criteria and excerpts from each winner's video tribute.

OUTSTANDING CITIZEN AWARD (established in 1987): Dedicated and giving, this individual over a number of years, has given freely of time, talents, and resources to make the Charlevoix area a better place to live.

The winner of the award for this year is Bev Boss. Boss was recognized for her work in many community efforts including the Charlevoix Senior Center, The Charlevoix Community Food Pantry, the Community Christmas Project and many other benevolent efforts through her church.

"She really spends a lot of time making sure that anyone who has any needs in our community is taken care of," Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce President Erin Bemis said of Boss.

Bev's husband, Herb Boss, said Bev's interest in serving the community really blossomed after she retired from working for the school district and she missed being around people.

"She spends a lot of time on different projects at home that people don't realize," Herb Boss said.

"She will do whatever she can to make sure that every child in this town has something on Christmas morning. She's not going to disappoint anybody, even if it stresses her out," fellow Community Reformed Church member Dianne Coolman said.

Coolman said Boss will help people who can't drive, or can't shop, people who are in a nursing home and need a visit.

"You can't even reach her. When you call her at home you get her husband. He's her answering machine," Coolman said.

Courier to begin charging for some online content

Caldwell

On Monday, Feb. 20, the Charlevoix Courier will begin charging for some of the content on its website, www.charlevoixcourier.com

The website will have a "meter" that allows each user 15 premium page views for free every 30 days. After passing the limit of 15 page views, the user will be asked to purchase an online subscription for $7.95 per month to view additional premium content.

The subscription will grant unlimited access to content at www.charlevoixcourier.com and premium content including databases and story archives.

"The Charlevoix Courier will offer a new digital access program that provides premium local news content to our readers. Our goal is to meet the current online demand for local stories in the Charlevoix and Northern Michigan markets," Charlevoix Courier Publisher, Doug Caldwell said.

"We want to provide you the ability to access local news 24 hours, 7 days a week — an enhanced service the Courier will provide our audiences."

Caldwell said free content that will not count toward the meter includes:

- Breaking news stories
- Views of the home page and section fronts
- Classified ads
- The calendar
- Photo galleries
- Obituaries

Other content, including local news and sports stories, will be considered premium content and will be subject to the 15 pages per month restriction for anyone who does not subscribe.

Current print subscribers will have free access to all web content and the e-edition as long as they remain print subscribers, Caldwell said.

Those who are not current print subscribers may purchase an online-only subscription for $7.95 per month.

The change comes as many major newspapers have successfully implemented similar metered models. The New York Times introduced a meter in March 2011 and The Baltimore Sun introduced one on Oct. 10, 2011.

Some other regional papers, including the Traverse City Record Eagle, have already introduced paid websites.

The Courier also offers an e-edition that is included at no additional cost with all print subscriptions. The e-edition allows readers to view the traditional print layout of the paper on their computer or tablet.

More information about digital access is available online at www.petoskeynews.com/about/digital/.

Packed house weighs in on park plan

Proposal to turn Camp Sea-Gull into lakefront park draws strong support, and opposition

Dan Reynolds

DAN REYNOLDS/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

More than 100 people packed the Hayes Township Hall Wednesday to listen to, or weigh-in on a proposal by township officials to use state grant money to purchase lakefront property for a park.

Tempers flared as more than 100 concerned citizens packed the Hayes Township Hall, for the first of two public hearings on the township's bid to purchase the multi-million dollar property known as Camp Sea-Gull. With substantial help from the Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund, the township hopes to turn the 20-acre parcel, with its 1,400 feet of frontage on the north end of Lake Charlevoix, into a lakefront park.

What's more, township supervisor Ethel Knepp says it can be done without raising property taxes.

The hearing, which took place Wednesday night, included an overview of the park property purchase plan and the grant application process. There was also a short presentation from the engineering firm retained to create plans for developing the park site.

According to the draft grant application, circulated during the meeting, total appraised value of the site is $4,445,000, with total acquisition costs of $4.5 million. The application estimates donations from individuals and private foundations will total $625,000, and estimates operation and maintenance at $18,500 annually. The trust fund grant requires a 25 percent local match.

Emmet County Controller Lyn Johnson was on hand to offer his perspective.

"We've made purchases through the land trust fund, from under $100,000 to more than $5 million," Johnson said. "Part of our main goal is to preserve and to have waterfront access. That is one of the top priorities in the county."

About three dozen township residents spoke up in favor of the park, citing its value for future generations, and the importance of preserving recreational land that will otherwise be bought up by private interests. Among them was Jerry Simpson, who has resided in Hayes Township for 31 years.

"I'm very much in favor of the park," Simpson remarked during the public comment period. "It's the chance of a lifetime."

Simpson also denounced what he referred to as "scare tactics" on the part of the Committee to Protect Hayes Township, a group that recently placed full-page ads in the Petoskey News-Review and on the paper's website to object to the park plan. The committee has now also launched its own website, www.protecthayes.org, which outlines the group's objections and provides reference materials related to the project.

Charlevoix soccer coach still kicking after letter dispute

Jon Boss avoids dismissal for insubordination at special meeting by only one vote

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

STEVE ZUCKER/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Charlevoix High School soccer coach Jon Boss reads from notes as he talks to the school district's personnel committee Wednesday.

A disagreement between a Charlevoix High School coach and the district's superintendent over the awarding of a varsity letter nearly cost the coach his job this week.

At a special meeting Wednesday, the Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education voted 4-3 against a recommendation from district superintendent Chet Janik to fire varsity soccer coach Jon Boss for insubordination.

Prior to the full board meeting, the district's personnel committee, comprised of school board members Valerie Snyder, Kevin Pearsall, Nancy Allison and alternate Dick Joseph voted unanimously to recommend to the full school board that it not terminate Boss. (Joseph, who did not vote, also indicated he would have voted in favor of the same recommendation.)

The dispute centers around Boss' refusal to award a varsity letter to a student who played both tennis and soccer last fall.

Janik and Boss agree about the basic facts of the situation.

During the personnel committee meeting Wednesday, Boss explained that his decision not to award a varsity letter stemmed from the fact that the student had declared tennis to be his primary sport and therefore he was present for fewer than half the soccer team's practices and games.

Boss said he had no issue with the student's performance when he was with the team, but that he could not "in good conscience" give out a varsity letter to a player who was not with the team for more than half the season — even if his absences were because of another school-related activity.

"I believe a strong commitment to a sport is important," Boss said. "A varsity letter should be earned and not just given out."

The student's father appealed Boss' decision to district athletic director Brian Certa, who deferred to Boss' discretion as the team's coach. Not satisfied with Certa's response, the father appealed to Janik.

Certa, who was also at Wednesday's meeting, noted that students who wish to play two sports must declare which one is their primary sport. "And that puts them in jeopardy of not getting a letter in the other sport," Certa said.

Janik said, after looking into the circumstances surrounding the situation, he decided that the student deserved a varsity letter for his participation with the soccer team. Janik said the fact that the soccer team was struggling to have enough players on its roster to field a team and the student's participation was a key in helping maintain a minimum number on the roster and the fact that Boss did not have any written criteria for awarding a varsity letter at any time during the season, both weighed heavily in his decision.

Janik said he told Boss to award the varsity letter to the student, but Boss persisted in his objection, saying he was not comfortable signing the certificate awarding a varsity letter that he felt the student did not deserve.

And here's where the crux of the matter crops up.

At some point during their discussions, Boss asked Janik if he would be willing to sign the letter award certificate.

Boss ultimately presented the student with the form, signed only by Janik.

Janik said he viewed Boss' giving the student the certificate without signing it as clear insubordination of his order to "give" the student the letter.

Boss contends that Janik never directed him to sign the document, only to give it to the student and that he believed that Janik was signing the certificate to award the letter in lieu of Boss.

Janik agreed that he did not specifically tell Boss to sign the certificate, but presumed it was understood in his order to give the student the letter — especially since letters are awarded by coaches, not superintendents, and there isn't even a space on the certificate for the superintendent to sign.

Another reason Janik gave for recommending Boss' dismissal, was the fact that when he gave the letter certificate to the student, he told the student that he still didn't think (the student) deserved it.

Boss conceded he did make the statement to the student. He also conceded he made other mistakes along the way in what was his first season of coaching the team — such as not being properly prepared to host a year-end banquet for the team.

But Boss also said he had no clue that he was in jeopardy of losing his coaching job until last week when Janik gave him the option of resigning or he would recommend to the board that he be terminated.

About 30 people filled the meeting room at the Charlevoix Middle School for the personnel committee meeting. Among the audience members were several of Boss' players, some parents and three other coaches in the district. Most were there in support of Boss.

Personnel committee chair Snyder said she didn't think Boss' actions rose to the level of insubordination, noting that there appeared to be some "muddy water" surrounding Janik's direction to Boss. Although he did not have a vote, alternate committee member Joseph agreed with Snyder. Kevin Pearsall said he was on the fence but ultimately voted with Allison and Snyder.

Originally the full board had scheduled a special meeting for Wednesday for a closed session to discuss a letter from the district's attorney and to have a training session. However, following the personnel committee's meeting the full board voted to add the Boss matter to its agenda for the meeting.

Ultimately voting in favor of a motion to deny Janik's recommendation to terminate Boss were Snyder, John McLean, Allison and Joseph, while board members Glen Catt, Kevin Pearsall and Mike Pearsall voted against the motion.

Following the meeting Wednesday Janik said he is unsure of the current status of the student's letter.

"I respect the process as well as the decision made by the board of education and I wish the best for coach Boss and the soccer team," Janik added.

Courier to begin charging for some online content

Caldwell

On Monday, Feb. 20, the Charlevoix Courier will begin charging for some of the content on its web site, www.charlevoixcourier.com.

The website will have a "meter" that allows each user 15 premium page views for free every 30 days. After passing the limit of 15 page views, the user will be asked to purchase an online subscription for $7.95 per month to view additional premium content.

The subscription will grant unlimited access to content at www.charlevoixcourier.com and premium content including databases and story archives.

The Charlevoix Courier will offer a new digital access program that provides premium local news content to our readers. Our goal is to meet the current online demand for local stories in the Charlevoix and Northern Michigan markets," Charlevoix Courier Publisher Doug Caldwell said.

"We want to provide you the ability to access local news 24 hours, 7 days a week — an enhanced service the Courier will provide our audiences."

Caldwell said free content that will not count toward the meter includes:

- Breaking news stories
- Views of the home page and section fronts
- Classified ads
- The calendar
- Photo galleries
- Obituaries

Other content, including local news and sports stories, will be considered premium content and will be subject to the 15 pages per month restriction for anyone who does not subscribe.

Current print subscribers will have free access to all web content and the e-edition as long as they remain print subscribers, Caldwell said.

Those who are not current print subscribers may purchase an online-only subscription for $7.95 per month.

The change comes as many major newspapers have successfully implemented similar metered models. The New York Times introduced a meter in March 2011 and The Baltimore Sun introduced one on Oct. 10, 2011.

Some other regional papers, including the Traverse City Record Eagle, have already introduced paid websites.

The Courier also offers an e-edition that is included at no additional cost with all print subscriptions. The e-edition allows readers to view the traditional print layout of the paper on their computer or tablet."

More information about digital access is available online at www.petoskeynews.com/about/digital/.

Packed house weighs in on park plan

Proposal to turn Camp Sea-Gull into lakefront park draws strong support, and opposition

Dan Reynolds
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

Tempers flared as more than 100 concerned citizens packed the Hayes Township Hall, for the first of two public hearings on the township's bid to purchase the multi-million dollar property known as Camp Sea-Gull. With substantial help from the Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund, the township hopes to turn the 20-acre parcel, with its 1,400 feet of frontage on the north end of Lake Charlevoix, into a lakefront park.

What's more, township supervisor Ethel Knepp says it can be done without raising property taxes.

The hearing, which took place Wednesday night, included an overview of the park property purchase plan and the grant application process. There was also a short presentation from the engineering firm retained to create plans for developing the park site.

DAN REYNOLDS/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

More than 100 people packed the Hayes Township Hall Wednesday to listen to, or weigh-in on a proposal by township officials to use state grant money to purchase lakefront property for a park.

According to the draft grant application, circulated during the meeting, total appraised value of the site is $4,445,000, with total acquisition costs of $4.5 million.

The application estimates donations from individuals and private foundations will total $625,000, and estimates operation and maintenance at $18,500 annually. The trust fund grant requires a 25 percent local match.

Emmet County Controller Lyn Johnson was on hand to offer his perspective.

"We've made purchases through the land trust fund, from under $100,000 to more than $5 million," Johnson said. "Part of our main goal is to preserve and to have waterfront access. That is one of the top priorities in the county."

About three dozen township residents spoke up in favor of the park, citing its value for future generations, and the importance of preserving recreational land that will otherwise be bought up by private interests. Among them was Jerry Simpson, who has resided in Hayes Township for 31 years.

"I'm very much in favor of the park," Simpson remarked during the public comment period. "It's the chance of a lifetime."

Simpson also denounced what he referred to as "scare tactics" on the part of the Committee to Protect Hayes Township, a group that recently placed full-page ads in the Petoskey News-Review and on the paper's website to object to the park plan. The committee has now also launched its own website, www.protecthayes.org, which outlines the group's objections and provides reference materials related to the project.

Charlevoix soccer coach still kicking after letter dispute

Jon Boss avoids dismissal for insubordination at special meeting by only one vote

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

A disagreement between a Charlevoix High School coach and the district's superintendent over the awarding of a varsity letter nearly cost the coach his job this week.

At a special meeting Wednesday, the Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education voted 4-3 against a recommendation from district superintendent Chet Janik to fire varsity soccer coach Jon Boss for insubordination.

Prior to the full board meeting, the district's personnel committee, comprised of school board members Valerie Snyder, Kevin Pearsall, Nancy Allison and alternate Dick Joseph voted unanimously to recommend to the full school board that it not terminate Boss. (Joseph, who did not vote, also indicated he would have voted in favor of the same recommendation.)

The dispute centers around Boss' refusal to award a varsity letter to a student who played both tennis and soccer last fall.

Janik and Boss agree about the basic facts of the situation.

During the personnel committee meeting Wednesday, Boss explained that his decision not to award a varsity letter stemmed from the fact that the student had declared tennis to be his primary sport and therefore he was present for fewer than half the soccer team's practices and games.

Boss said he had no issue with the student's performance when he was with the team, but that he could not "in good conscience" give out a varsity letter to a player who was not with the team for more than half the season — even if his absences were because of another school-related activity.

"I believe a strong commitment to a sport is important," Boss said. "A varsity letter should be earned and not just given out."

The student's father appealed Boss' decision to district athletic director Brian Certa, who deferred to Boss' discretion as the team's coach. Not satisfied with Certa's response, the father appealed to Janik.

Certa, who was also at Wednesday's meeting, noted that students who wish to play two sports must declare which one is their primary sport. "And that puts them in jeopardy of not getting a letter in the other sport," Certa said.

Janik said, after looking into the circumstances surrounding the situation, he decided that the student deserved a varsity letter for his participation with the soccer team. Janik said the fact that the soccer team was struggling to have enough players on its roster to field a team and the student's participation was a key in helping maintain a minimum number on the roster and the fact that Boss did not have any written criteria for awarding a varsity letter at any time during the season, both weighed heavily in his decision.

Janik said he told Boss to award the varsity letter to the student, but Boss persisted in his objection, saying he was not comfortable signing the certificate awarding a varsity letter that he felt the student did not deserve.

And here's where the crux of the matter crops up.

At some point during their discussions, Boss asked Janik if he would be willing to sign the letter award certificate.

STEVE ZUCKER/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Charlevoix High School soccer coach Jon Boss reads from notes as he talks to the school disrict's personnel committee Wednesday.

Boss ultimately presented the student with the form, signed only by Janik.

Janik said he viewed Boss' giving the student the certificate without signing it as clear insubordination of his order to "give" the student the letter.

Boss contends that Janik never directed him to sign the document, only to give it to the student and that he believed that Janik was signing the certificate to award the letter in lieu of Boss.

Janik agreed that he did not specifically tell Boss to sign the certificate, but presumed it was understood in his order to give the student the letter — especially since letters are awarded by coaches, not superintendents, and there isn't even a space on the certificate for the superintendent to sign.

Another reason Janik gave for recommending Boss' dismissal, was the fact that when he gave the letter certificate to the student, he told the student that he still didn't think (the student) deserved it.

Boss conceded he did make the statement to the student. He also conceded he made other mistakes along the way in what was his first season of coaching the team — such as not being properly prepared to host a year-end banquet for the team.

But Boss also said he had no clue that he was in jeopardy of losing his coaching job until last week when Janik gave him the option of resigning or he would recommend to the board that he be terminated.

About 30 people filled the meeting room at the Charlevoix Middle School for the personnel committee meeting. Among the audience members were several of Boss' players, some parents and three other coaches in the district. Most were there in support of Boss.

Personnel committee chair Snyder said she didn't think Boss' actions rose to the level of insubordination, noting that there appeared to be some "muddy water" surrounding Janik's direction to Boss. Although he did not have a vote, alternate committee member Joseph agreed with Snyder. Kevin Pearsall said he was on the fence but ultimately voted with Allison and Snyder.

Originally the full board had scheduled a special meeting for Wednesday for a closed session to discuss a letter from the district's attorney and to have a training session. However, following the personnel committee's meeting the full board voted to add the Boss matter to its agenda for the meeting.

Ultimately voting in favor of a motion to deny Janik's recommendation to terminate Boss were Snyder, John McLean, Allison and Joseph, while board members Glen Catt, Kevin Pearsall and Mike Pearsall voted against the motion.

Following the meeting Wednesday Janik said he is unsure of the current status of the student's letter.

"I respect the process as well as the decision made by the board of education and I wish the best for coach Boss and the soccer team," Janik added.

Learn your partner's 'love language'

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

The language of love ... OK, now that I have your attention, there is quite a bit of interest on the topic of love and relationships. I'm not trying to be Dear Abby or even begin to think I could wear stiletto's (my poor flat feet-ouch!), smoke, drink and write like Carrie Bradshaw. I'm just saying there's lots of interest out there.

I've decided to share some notes from a talk I gave regarding relationships. So, sit back, pour a cup of coffee, or wine if you prefer and highlight or take notes when needed.

Basically, there are three types of relationships. Think of the capital letter "A." The bars of the letter lean on each other. This type "A" couple is inseparable. It's as if they can't make a move without the other always being present. They even begin to dress alike. Then there is the "H" couple. Both bars of this letter go straight up and down. This signifies self-sufficient, independent each having their own friends, own activities. Then the last partnership is the "M" couple; the bars of this letter interweave a bit. If one disagrees with the other they feel sad but get over it. They participate in different and some of the same activities. They also encourage each other to do new things. Usually you will hang out with couples that have the same letter type as you.

After living together for a few years, spouses usually begin to turn to their friends for advice or to tell their problems to. It makes you feel good inside to share, but it's not always so healthy for your relationship. If you and you partner are having difficulties, it's your partner you need to communicate this with. As you begin to communicate with each other you will realize if you really do care for each other. I'm not saying your friends don't care, but if it's your significant other you are talking about, then it needs to be your significant other you are speaking with.

Then there is the topic of love languages that Gary Chapman developed that really makes a lot of sense. In his book, "The Five Love Languages," he stresses that we look for someone in our lives that meets our needs which, in essence, is our language of love. The languages include: affirmation, quality time, receiving gifts, acts of service and physical touch. Chapman traveled the world interviewing hundreds of people coming to the conclusion that we need to focus on what our soulmate's language is to keep the fires burning. If you don't have time to read his book I can help you out.

If it makes you feel wonderful when your significant other says something positive about you, your looks, your work then it's considered the love language of affirmation. If your friend, lover, spouse says something negative then it has the opposite effect. It just cuts you to the bone with loss of self-esteem. A negative statement makes all of us feel bad, but to what degree depends upon your personality and your need for affirmation. If you are someone who complains that your spouse spends too much time at work or away from home involved in his or her hobby, this is referred to as quality time. When your partner isn't with you, feelings of depression or loneliness set in, but when you are together its euphoric. If you are someone who loves gifts, even when it's not a special occasion, and it truly makes you feel loved, than gift-giving is your love language. If it makes you feel good when your spouse helps with chores and running errands, this if referred to as the language of service. Finally, there is physical. If you enjoy holding hands, sitting close, cuddling, back rubs, and whatever this may lead to, then your love language is physical. If you feel strongly about two of these areas you are considered having a bi-lingual love language. Knowing what love language your significant other responds to creates a stronger relationship. It's basically getting your needs and their wants met and doing the opposite of their love language to really turn the relationship sour.

I'll close my lap top for now on this topic and send good thoughts your way as you maneuver life's dance with your partner. Hopefully, the one who appreciates how special you really are.

LETTERS to the editor

Resident supports recreational site

Dear Editor:

I am writing, as a long-time permanent resident and near-neighbor to Camp Seagull, to offer my enthusiastic support for Hayes Township's project to create a public park/receational site at Camp Seagull. While I realize there will details to be figured out, and care must be taken to make sure the impact on the lake, the waterfront, and the watershed, are positive, I believe this is the highest and best ose of this parcel.

I would urge township elected officials to keep in mind that Lake Charlevoix belongs to everyone in the township, the county, the state, and the country by virtue of it being a navigable waterway. But of most importance is the value of the location to all the people of Hayes Township.

Access to Lake Charlevoix is not a right restricted to a privileged few who own lake front property. The enjoyment of the lake as well as the protection of the lake's health is part of every Hayes Township's residents' rights and obligations.

I urge the township to move forward on this project while in serious discussion with environmental experts on how to accomplish this project in a manner that continues to protect the lake. This project could be a model for other developments on the lake.

I would also urge readers to write to Marlene Golovitch: marlenefountain@hotmail.com, township clerk to voice your support.

Sincerely,
Sara Gay Dammann
Charlevoix

WATCH supports Camp Sea-Gull park

Dear Hayes Township Board,

We are writing to you on behalf of the WATCH (Water and Air Team Charlevoix) Board of Directors to strongly support your purchase of the Camp Seagull property for a township park.

As Charlevoix County's local environmental goardian for almost 30 years, WATCH has been at the forefront in protecting the quality of the water of Lake Charlevoix. We have been instrumental in reducing dramatically, the density of several developments on the lake, which we believe has helped in preserving the quality of the water.

It is clear to us that a significantly dense development could result on the 20 acre Camp Seagull property if it is not protected. There is no better way to protect it than to make it a park. We would like to see the 1,400 feet of shoreline remain in its current pristine state and not be jeopardized by removal of the vegetation which would certainly be the alternative. We look forward to hearing more about the project. Lake Charlevoix badly needs these natural areas.

Please keep the protection of our waters uppermost in your deliberations as you make this important decision. As we have reminded everyone in the many WATCH newsletters that we have written over the years, our children and grandchildren will thank us for our vigilance and foresight.

Sincerely,
Michael Buttigieg,
President
Bill Henne,

Support for Camp Sea-Gull proposal

Editor:

I'm writing to voice support for the preservation of the rights and the ability of all future generations to enjoy Northern Michigan's most precious natural resources.

A well-funded firestorm of opposition has arisen lambasting Hayes Township's ongoing efforts to acquire land for a public park and access to Lake Charlevoix. This isn't entirely unexpected or surprising given the spirited, sometimes vitriolic, struggles evidenced during other public rights preservation and/or land acquisition issues in northwestern Michigan.

Camp Seagull is a 20-acre site with 1,400 feet of frontage. The township is applying for a Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund grant application to buy it and provide public park access and a small boat launch facility.

In 2008 the township conducted a comprehensive planning survey of the 1,700 residents/property owners and of about 400 respondents and over 75 percent voiced support of this goal and action.

Of the total Lake Charlevoix frontage in the township, less than 1 percent is open to the public. Just two access points exist: Hayes Township park on Eastern Avenue (mandated rustic only: no facilities allowed; grossly inadequate parking); and Maple Grove 66-foot road end ("farmers' beach").

The debate of what is "enough" rages on. Were not Charlevoix's many parks/accesses "enough" when another jewel, North Point, was opened to the public? Were taxpayers' dollars "stolen?" Has North Point adversely impacted surrounding properties/values?

There aren't many big parcels left on Lake Charlevoix's north shore, with very little access available between Young State Park and Charlevoix. Making public a resource such as Camp Seagull is both an investment and a gift for future generations.

The next public hearing is Wednesday, March 7 at Hayes Township Hall. Please come to learn about this crucial project and voice your opinion.

Here's How to Insure a Great Valentine's Day

Valentine's Day is almost upon us. To celebrate, you may want to present your loved ones with chocolates, flowers or any number of other traditional gifts. But if your valentine also happens to be your spouse or your life partner, you also might want to show your love in another way — by making sure you have adequate insurance.

Just consider some of the things that life insurance can do for you and your family:

Pay off your mortgage — With sufficient life insurance, your family can remain in their home should anything happen to you.

Educate your children — College is expensive, and it seems to get more costly every year. If you were to die prematurely, your life insurance proceeds could help pay for your children's education.

Help fund retirement — Term insurance consists of just a death benefit. But "permanent" insurance policies, such as whole life or universal life, a tax-advantaged savings component that could help pay for your retirement and help keep you financially independent — which means you won't have to worry about being a "burden" to your grown children. Furthermore, proceeds from your life insurance policy could help your surviving spouse retire more comfortably.

Help protect your business — If you're involved in a family-owned business enterprise, you can structure a life insurance policy to help preserve the business or transfer it to the next generation.

Pay for estate taxes — If your estate is sizable, it could generate estate taxes. Life insurance proceeds can help your heirs pay these taxes.

Clearly, life insurance offers a variety of benefits. But how much do you need? And what type do you need? You might hear that your coverage should be worth around seven or eight times your annual salary. But there's really no one-size-fits-all formula. In determining how much life insurance you require, you should consider your age, your income, the size of your family, the amount of your mortgage, whether your spouse has a retirement account, your financial goals and other factors. Your financial advisor can help you assess these variables to determine the appropriate level of coverage.

One final word on life insurance: Don't wait too long before purchasing a policy or upgrading your existing one. Your life insurance premium is based, in part, on your age, so the sooner you act, the better. Also, the time to buy life insurance is while you are healthy, because poor health could prevent you from obtaining coverage.

As important as it is, life insurance isn't the only protection you and your loved ones may need. During your working years, you are actually more likely to become temporarily disabled, due to injury or illness, than you are to die. If you weren't able to work for a while, you could help your family maintain its lifestyle if you had an adequate disability income insurance policy. Your employer might offer you some coverage as a benefit, but it might not be sufficient, either in terms of income or the length of the disability covered. Consequently, you may want to explore an individual disability insurance policy.

When you think of romantic Valentine's Day presents, "insurance" probably doesn't pop up right away. Yet, by making sure you've got all the coverage you need, you may actually be giving your loved ones the greatest gift they'll ever receive.

McSauba disc golf course among tribal grant awards

With most costs covered, new course may be open by mid-summer

The Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians awarded 2011's last 2-percent allocation to nearly five dozen local governmental grant applicants, including many in Charlevoix County and three to Charlevoix-specific programs.

Among the grants was $15,395 for the City of Charlevoix's effort to establish an 18-hole disc golf course at the Mount McSauba Recreation Area. Last spring the Charlevoix City Council gave it's blessing for the recreation department, working with area disc golf enthusiasts to establish an official course at Mount McSauba after city officials raised concerns that disc golf use of hiking trails posed a risk to other park users. The city council approved the request, but left paying for the course's installation up to fundraising and grant requests.

City manager Rob Straebel said Wednesday that the grant should cover the bulk of the improvements for the course.

"There are still some erosion control measures that we will need to implement as well as installation of signage, trash receptacles and tee boxes," Straebel said. "Once this work is completed we will be installing the baskets. I would hope to have the disc golf course completed by early to mid-summer. With the challenging terrain and panoramic views of Lake Michigan, this will be one of Northern Michigan premier disc golf courses.

Straebel

The two other grants which will pass through the city to non-profit organizations include $2,218 for the "Colorado Challenge" outdoor education program for underpriviledged teens; and $3,400 for Third Day Fellowship and Outreach to help pay for its programs that help low-income clients who need food, housing, utility and other assistance.

The band's Tribal Council decided Jan. 25 which agencies would receive funding. The tribe received 100 applications for more than $3 million in requests and awarded more than $958,000 to 58 recipients.

The remaining grants awarded in Charlevoix County include:

— Charlevoix Public Schools, Title VII program, $11,500 for Indian education program;

— Hayes Township, $9,94[illegible] for the Charlevoix Area Community Pool to provide affordable fees for aquatic exercise and rehabilitation services;

— St. James Township, $10,000 for exterior brick-work repair for St. James Harbor Light tower on Beaver Island.

— Charlevoix County government, $12,775 for prisoner bed contract;

— Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, $15,000 for both tasers and air certridges, as well as children's car seats for safety program;

— East Jordan Public Schools, Title VII program, $9,000 for Indian education program;

— Boyne City Public Schools, $20,435 for physical education program;

— City of Boyne City, $28,888 for the Boyne Area Free Clinic patient testing and project fundraising program;

— City of Boyne City, $10,000 for a pathway along M-75 between the schools and the industrial park.

Appellate case discussed by county leaders Wednesday

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS REVIEW STAFF WRITER

CHARLEVOIX — County commissioners questioned who flubbed a recent appeal on a criminal case from Charlevoix County that may put taxpayers on the hook for upwards of $67,000.

Charlevoix County commissioners Shirlene Tripp and Bob Drebenstedt raised concerns at Wednesday's board meeting in Charlevoix. They questioned John Jarema, county prosecutor and board civil counsel, about the appeal filed on the Charles Merriman murder case to allow Petoskey-based attorney Dan Hartman to be paid for defense work he did initially as a pro bono assignment.

"Is the county going to have to pick up that extra money for these attorneys or are we addressing that and going to file proper paperwork?" Tripp asked Jarema.

Jarema said it's "too early to tell" whether the county will be forced to pay up in this case.

The Michigan Court of Appeals in a recent 2-1 decision ruled that Charlevoix County Circuit Judge Richard Pajtas abused his discretion in failing to pay Hartman for 710 hours of work in an extraordinary case, thought to be the longest in county history. Jurors convicted Merriman, now 62, an East Jordan area man, of second-degree murder after a 16-day trial in 2008.

The victim in the case was Bill Merriman, the defendant's brother, though authorities never discovered a body.

Hartman said authorities initially set the case for a five-day trial, but it extended to more than two dozen days and required "all the time and resources" between himself and co-counsel Michael Atchison, of Petoskey.

"It's not me trying to gouge the county," Hartman said.

The rub for officials is that nobody filed a brief with the state appellate court on behalf of the county, what would have been an effort to support Pajtas' decision that because Hartman didn't seek to change his status from pro bono to paid attorney until after the trial ended, he is not entitled to payment from county coffers.

Jarema said that's the Michigan State Attorney General's fault, but they are on target now.

"I turned it over to the Attorney General's Office and they are supposed to file — this time — an application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court," he said.

Officials from the state Attorney General's Office did not return calls for comment before press time today, Thursday, Feb. 9.

Jarema

At Wednesday's meeting Tripp also questioned if the attorney general's staff "dropped the ball" and Jarema answered that they did.

"I shipped it to them. I got the response saying that nothing was filed, called them and they said they don't handle that type of appeal," Jarema said.

However, Jarema said he sent documents requested by attorney general staff to Lansing and expects they will file the next appeal to the Michigan Supreme Court. Jarema said he doesn't perform any appellate work himself because that service is provided by the state Attorney General's Office, including the appeal on Merriman's criminal conviction.

"I think it would be reasonable for (Jarema) to presume the Attorney General would handle that part of the appeal,too," Hartman said about the billing dispute.

Drebenstedt asked if Jarema supports Pajtas' ruling and Jarema said he did and pointed out that he successfully argued the case when Pajtas made his ruling.

Meanwhile, 46th Circuit Judge Janet Allen confirmed Wednesday that Hartman applied to be appointed as Otsego County prosecutor when current prosecutor Kyle Legel steps down later this year. She also confirmed Jarema submitted a letter of recommendation for Hartman, but would not release a copy to a Gaylord Herald-Times reporter.

Drebenstedt said that raises concerns for him, too.

"I'm shocked and surprised to know that he would send a recommendation on a guy we're in a legal battle with," he said.

Jarema could not be reached Wednesday afternoon for follow-up comments about the letter submitted for Hartman in Otsego County. However, Hartman said attorneys often argue against one another in court, but otherwise maintain perfectly professional relationships.

Several Michigan prosecutors filed letters of recommendation for Hartman, including Jarema and Daryl Vizina, from Cheboygan County, Hartman said.

Gaylord Herald-Times reporter Mike Jones contributed to this article.

College Goal Sunday offers help with financial aid forms

College-bound students and their families can get help filling out the free application for financial aid for college at two area high schools during College Goal Sunday on Feb. 12.

Hosted by Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, College Goal Sunday will take place from 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 12, at Boyne City and Harbor Springs high schools. The event is free and open to students and their families.

Trained volunteers will be on hand to help students and their families complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid or FAFSA. The financial aid experts will be available to guide students and then parents through each step of completing and filing the FAFSA. Students under 23 years of age are encouraged to attend with a parent or guardian. Parents and students should bring their completed 2011 federal tax return (1040) if possible, or their W-2 and 1099 forms.

"We're excited to participate and help increase the number of students who continue education beyond high school and earn post-secondary degrees," said Kelly Johnson of Char-Em Intermediate School District, who is coordinating the regional event. "We'll have the experts on hand to walk you step-by-step through the FAFSA application process: it will be so easy!"

Johnson added that even those students not sure if they're college bound should attend.

"Even if you're not sure you're going to college, you should come!" Johnson said. "You can always apply for the money and decide later."

Those attending the two regional sites as well as other College Goal Sunday events throughout the state are eligible to win a $1,000 scholarship, two $500 scholarships and three $250 scholarships. In addition, at the Boyne City and Harbor Springs events, participants can register for a chance to win free gas cards.

College Goal Sunday is a collaborative effort of Char-Em Intermediate School District and all 11 public schools within Charlevoix, Emmet and northern Antrim counties, as well as the Michigan Department of Education, the Michigan Students Financial Aid Association, and EduGuide. Additional support for the statewide activities was provided by the C.S. Mott Foundation, the Lumina Foundation for Education, and the DTE Energy Foundation.

LOOKING BACK…

In August of 1891, the Chicago & West Michigan Railway announced it would begin building a great dock on what is now Depot Beach where equipment and materials would be delivered for the construction of the railroad that was scheduled to arrive in Charlevoix the following year. The dock would be 194 feet long by 40 feet wide. Pile-driving was completed in mid-September. Soon the dock platform was installed and the main portion became ready for use. Three boat slips were on the south side. Railroad tracks on its north side were placed a few feet below the platform. This was done to facilitate loading onto and unloading from box car floors that were even with the platform level. A narrow footbridge with a railing connected the shore to the dock. Note the men in the picture at their dock construction jobs in white shirts and ties. A few remnants of this dock can still be found underwater off the little spit of land that projects from Depot Beach's north (left) side.

This image is one of 850 that are included in the Charlevoix Historical Society's most recent DVD titled "Charlevoix, Michigan — A Pictorial Journey through 16 Decades." The DVD is available at the Society's Harsha House Museum, 103 State St. beside the Congregational Church. It is also available at the Central Drug Store, Round Lake Books, Castle Farms, and Ell-Air Gallery. Call (231) 547-0373 from 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday for February museum store hours, and mailing and Society membership information.

Champion spellers

Charlevoix Middle School students sixth-grader Grace Ochs (left) and fifth-grader Kaitlin Schwenke were recently named runner-up and champion respectively of their school's spelling bee. Both girls competed in the county spelling bee on Feb. 2 at Boyne City High School. In the county bee, Grace took fifth place and Kaitlin came in seventh. Their performance at the county bee qualified both girls to advance to the next level in Traverse City on Sunday, March 11.

$4.4 million bids arrive for B.C.-Charlevoix Road

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

CHARLEVOIX — County leaders must decide how to come up with an additional $1 million for a major road project this year, or choose which miles to leave unfinished.

Charlevoix County commissioners heard at their meeting Wednesday from road commission manager Pat Harmon, who discussed the project bids received last week by both state and county officials for the rehabilitation of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, among the busiest and bumpiest stretches county-wide. Prices weren't exactly what road officials expected and now they want to know which direction to go, he said.

The board scheduled a committee of the whole meeting for 9:30 a.m. Friday, Feb. 17, when commissioners will further tackle the issue. They will gather in the commissioners meeting room, 203 Antrim St., Charlevoix.

"They were a little higher than what we expected," Harmon said about the road construction bids.

In December, road commissioners expected the 10 miles of highway to cost about $5.2 million to overhaul, but low bids came in around $4.4 million. Northwest Design Group, of Petoskey, completed the initial engineering and cost estimates for the road commission.

Work on the highway will begin in the spring and is expected to be finished by autumn.

Federal dollars funneled through the Michigan Department of Transportation will cover most of the 2.5-mile section between Stephens and Sumner roads. The low bid received by the state came from M & M Excavating Company, of Gaylord, at $1.47 million.

Local money will be spent to complete the 7.5-mile stretch from Stephens Road to Western Avenue, very near U.S. 31. The low bid at $2.97 million came from Payne & Dolan, of Gaylord, though the next nearest bid from Rieth-Riley Construction, of Petoskey, amounted to less than a $2,000 difference.

Harmon ran the numbers for county commissioners.

In November, county commissioners transferred $1 million from the general fund to the road fund specifically to help pay for the work on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road. That will be combined with nearly $1 million in federal funds and $1.5 million in road commission savings.

"So we're $1 million short in completing the project," Harmon said.

The county's annual tax revenue from the voter-approved road millage is about $1.5 million.

Officials paved some of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road in past years, including the 2.8 miles from Sumner Road to Nelson Road. That section cost about $874,000 to repave, records show.

Council may relax medical marijuana rules

Council appears to favor fewer and smaller buffer zones for grow operations

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

The Charlevoix City Council appears poised to relax some of the restrictions it is considering on medical marijuana caregiver grow operations in the city.

At its regular monthly meeting Monday, the council was again considering a proposed zoning ordinance amendment that would require medical marijuana caregivers wishing to operate in the city to obtain a zoning permit and limit their operation to residential areas, outside of certain buffer zones.

After receiving a great deal of public input at a public hearing last month — most of it from medical marijuana proponents contending that the ordinance, as proposed at that time was too restrictive, the council asked city planning director Mike Spencer to do some more research on the topic. At Monday night's meeting, Spencer provided the council with several options focusing mainly on buffer zones surrounding churches, schools, parks, athletic fields, day care providers and other medical marijuana caregiver operations. The prior version of the proposed ordinance called for buffer zones of various sizes around all those locations.

During Monday's meeting, several council members said — aside from the public hearing — they've had a difficult time getting community feedback on the proposed ordinance.

After discussing the various options, the council directed Spencer to amend the proposed ordinance, requiring a 1,000-foot buffer around schools, 300-feet around churches and removing all other buffer zones. Council members rationalized the 1,000-foot zone around schools to match the state's Drug Free School Zone's law, which increases penalties on many drug crimes if they are committed within 1,000 feet of school property.

The matter will now go back to the city's planning commission, which is scheduled to review it at its next meeting, set for 7 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 13, in the city council chambers at City Hall. After the planning commission reviews the revised ordinance, it will send its recommendations back to the council for further consideration following a public hearing that the council has set on the revised ordinance proposal for 7 p.m. on Monday, March 5.

The council also voted Monday to extend the city's current moratorium on medical marijuana caregiver operations in the city until April 30 or when an ordinance is enacted, whichever is first.

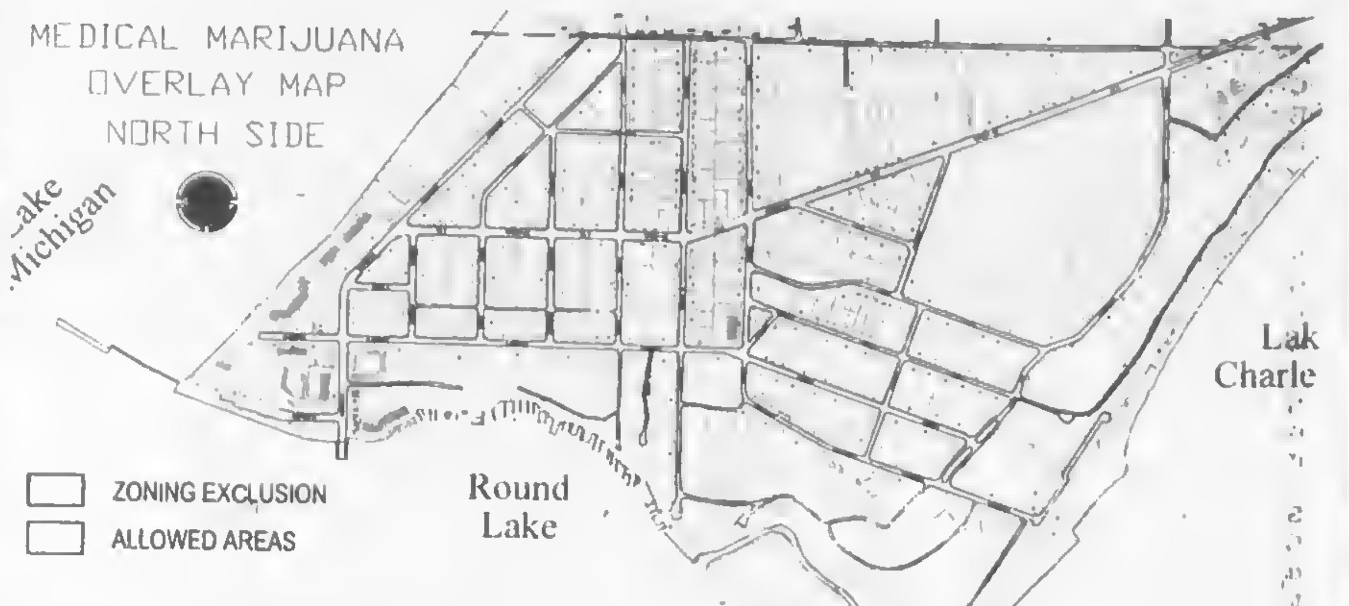
In other business, the council saw a preliminary drawing of a proposal by street superintendent Pat Elliott for curb designs for an upcoming street and underground utility replacement project on Clinton Street. The tentative plan called for curb extensions — or hump-outs — where Clinton intersects with State and Bridge streets. (At the State and Clinton intersection, the hump-outs would be only on Clinton Street.) Elliott said the design is intended to improve traffic flow, aesthetics and pedestrian safety.

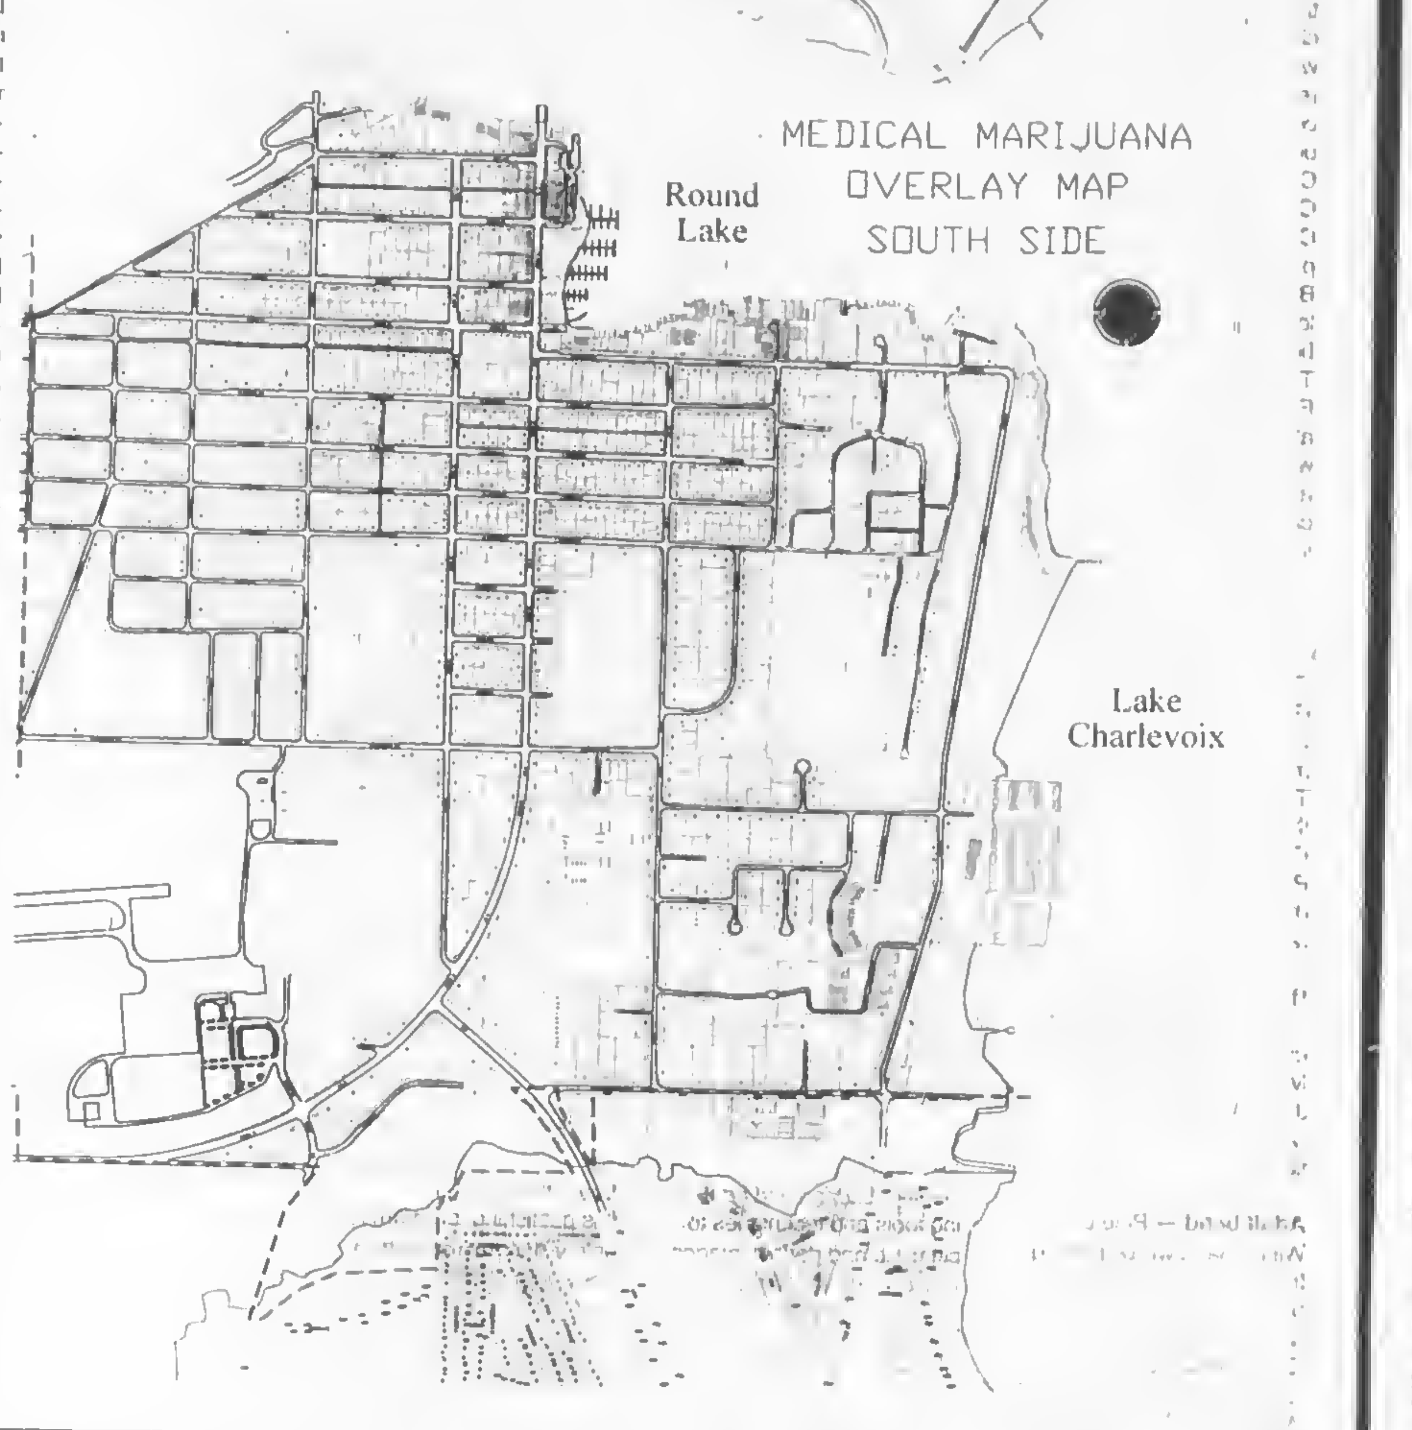
Elliot was seeking, and received, the council's blessing to proceed with submitting the conceptual plans to Michigan Department of Transportation officials, who would have to approve the Bridge Street modifications because Bridge Street is a state highway.

The tentative plans also call for a traffic island to be created at the intersection of Clinton and Park — if enough money is available to take the project all the way to Park Street. Elliott said the island would help alleviate traffic problems caused now by the odd angle that the two streets meet.

In another matter related to the upcoming Clinton Street project, the city manager said some or all of planned improvements to the White Lot (located behind the fire station) may have to be put on hold after two recent grant applications to pay for the improvements were denied. City officials are hoping to improve the lot, which is currently a dirt or gravel surface, in connection with the Clinton Street project.

See charlevoixcourier.com for revised ordinance and maps.





SEA-GULL

the group were in attendance at the meeting, including Mark Dorn, who owns property on Lake Charlevoix.

"We all love parks," said Dorn. "That's not the issue. The issue is, what park can we afford?"

Dorn said he resents being forced to reject the idea of a park, when it is really the magnitude of this proposed project that he finds objectionable. He believes the proposal's scope is far too elaborate and costly to residents.

"Forget Disneyland — this looks more like Epcot Center than Disneyland," he said after viewing the engineers' site drawings.

Numerous township residents echoed Dorn's concerns about costs, demanding additional information on the costs anticipated for site development and ongoing maintenance. Some also felt that township officials had failed to consider the impact of the proposed park on its neighbors.

"How would you feel if a boat launch was put right next to your property?" asked Paul Zardus, who owns a home in a neighborhood adjoining the site. Zardus said he feels strongly that the proposal suffers from a lack of due diligence, and will adversely affect his family's ability to enjoy the area.

Dorn and other Protect Hayes group members have suggested that Young State Park, which is approximately seven miles from the Camp Sea-Gull site, more than meets the recreational needs of those who live in and visit Hayes Township.

Charlevoix County planning director Larry Sullivan offered a different perspective, noting that Young State Park often becomes extremely crowded — making it impossible for many people to find campsites. "You have to reserve those sites months in advance," he said.

"I applaud the township board, and I encourage you to move forward," Sullivan added.

> "We will never ask for a millage, as long as I'm around, to support this park."
> — Ethel Knepp, Hayes Township supervisor

Following the public comment period, township supervisor Ethel Knepp reminded those in attendance that the proposed site plans and drawings are "not cast in stone... it's just something we had to do for the grant application."

Knepp explained that development of the site would not likely begin for a minimum of three years from the time of purchase. She then took a few moments to address the public outcry over the park's implications for already-rising property taxes.

"There is no way your property taxes are going to go up if we do get this grant," she said. "We will never ask for a millage, as long as I'm around, to support this park."

Camp Sea-Gull, located off Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, has served as an all-girls' summer camp for more than half a century. The property has been privately owned, and was listed for sale last year at $6.5 million.

The next public hearing on the proposed Camp Sea-Gull purchase takes place on March 7 at 7:30 p.m. at the Hayes Township Hall, 09195 Old U.S. 31 North.

gram, it was the students who were ultimately responsible for getting the program started at Charlevoix schools.

Senior Anna Moon was one of these students. As co-president, she was responsible for recruiting other team members and also keeping the group on task.

"Being a rookie team is new and hard. We have to figure out how things work. It's challenging. But this (robotics/engineering) is something I want to do in college," she said.

Becky also enjoys the engineering aspect. Of course, she said she likes to work with her teammates on the robot as well.

"I love being involved with new people. You learn the strong suits of people you don't normally talk to. There are lots of skills coming together here," she said.

As a rookie team, the Raydernators had to start from scratch when building their robot. They received a base kit of potential parts worth about $5,000 and went from there. Parts included a netbook, wireless router, circuit boards, batteries, chassis parts, and an Xbox Kinect. All students on the team play a particular role. Some are programmers, while others are working on media/marketing, design, assembly and safety.

Although everyone has a job to do, getting started has been intimidating for some.

"You look at all the parts, wires, electronics, pneumatics, routers, and you feel overwhelmed. You think, 'We have to build a robot out of this?' It's exciting but the time crunch is all on you and you have to organize what looks like a Radio Shack and a hardware store got shaken together as if they were a child's toy chest," Schultz said.

"It's hard, but it's rewarding. We tell the kids its the hardest fun they'll ever have," he added.

Schultz noted that his team has been building a defensive robot. With this year's theme, "Rebound Rumble" the competition will be about working as a team. Competitions will be similar to three on three basketball games. Different schools will be paired up and will have to work together to shoot as many baskets as possible in less than three minutes.

Students were given six weeks to build their robot. Charlevoix's building session ends this month. In March, students will compete with other schools in Michigan.

Senior John Boss will probably be controlling his team's robot in the competition. However, he has a lot of faith in his teammates and acknowledges all their hard work.

"We have a pretty sweet rookie team," he said.

Schultz echoed those thoughts when he said, "We have some of the brightest, well-rounded students you will find."

Right now, as the team finishes their robot, their main concern is money. Schultz explained the typical budget for a rookie team is $15,000-$20,000. Although the group has raised some funds and received some donations, they are still in need of more help. Right now, finding the finical means to pay for food and lodging during the competitions is what's most important.

Individuals or organizations who would like to partner with the Raydernators can visit during one of their working sessions or contact Schultz at tschultz@rayder.net. Those who would like to make a tax-deductible donation can contact Schultz, or send a check to the high school payable to Charlevoix FIRST Robotics.

"He's tireless in every effort he puts himself into and has such a care and love for everyone," Bemis said.

He does a marvelous job promoting Charlevoix, and working with the chamber," Peggy Kusina of Castle Farms said. "And he's always so positive ... If any little glitch comes up, nothing ever ruffles him at all."

Ace employee and city council member Shane Cole noted that Greyerbiehl makes giving back to the community a high priority, even encouraging employees to take time on the clock for community service efforts.

"He feels that giving back to the community is huge," Cole said.

"They've been a staple in our community for a very long time ... They go above and beyond," Bemis said. "But I think more important than all that is the amount of community involvement they have ... it's echoed from the top down. It is not just about operating in a community, but being a part of it.

Dick Joseph of Charlevoix Abstract and Title commented on how the staff often goes out of their way to assist him with his mobility needs when he visits the restaurant.

Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce board of directors chairman Rick Randall presents Tammy LaFave of Charlevoix State Bank with the Customer Service Award.

CUSTOMER SERVICE AWARD (established in 2009): Service excellence is a top priority. The recipient of this award, an employee of a member business, exemplifies high standards giving priority attention to every customer, client or guest.

This year's winner is Charlevoix State Bank employee Tammy LaFave.

Charlevoix State Bank President and CEO Mike Hinkle said LaFave's friendliness and outgoing personality are just two traits that set her apart.

"She speaks to people that she see on the streets. She speaks to people she sees in our lobby. She parades babies around behind our teller lines. She gives treats to puppies in our lobby," Hinkle said.

But, he said, LaFave is more than just friendly.

"She goes beyond just doing a good job at her job," Hinkle said. "She sets the standard. She stays late. She comes in early. She does whatever is necessary to take care of the customer ... She takes it the extra step. She knows every customer by name. She does an excellent job."

NEW BUSINESS OF THE YEAR (established in 2011): Having opened its doors within the last 18 months, the recipient of this award is a chamber member and entrepreneur that has demonstrated strong business growth and performance, sound business strategies and practices, unique and innovative approaches, and community involvement.

This year's winner is The Peacock, operated by Kim and Zac Sanger.

"They are a great addition. They've put in a lot of effort to make sure that their design and outlook fit with Charlevoix and they've matched their vision. They've made a long-term investment into this community and their retail front is a new and welcome addition," Bemis said.

"The Peacock, in particular, brings a very fun contemporary feel to our downtown. It's a one-of-a-kind business. The combination boutique salon, is a very important addition to our downtown," Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority Executive Director Keith Carey said.

Carey also pointed to the storefront the Zangers created.

"A key to a successful business in Charlevoix are the personal relationships that the business owner develops with their clientele. And I think Kim and Zach are very committed to that," Carey added.

"He's from Charlevoix. He's done great things outside of Charlevoix and he has returned home to raise his family here."

"He just has a heart, he just has that care and concern for people that goes above and beyond. Charlevoix is lucky to have Don Jess because he isn't just a young professional earning an income or bettering himself within the business. He's a young professional for the whole community," Don Voisin of the Charlevoix Agency said.

"Don has always led by example. He's always had a good rapport with his athletes. They've always respected him," Charlevoix Public Schools Athletic Director Brian Certa said. "What I appreciated about Don is that he cared about the kids beyond football."

Rayders win thriller over rival Boyne

After two key wins, Elk Rapids next big test

Steve Foley

NEWS-REVIEW SPORTS WRITER

Senior leadership, a refuse-to-lose attitude and just plain solid execution down the stretch.

It all came together in the late stages for the Charlevoix High School boys' basketball team Friday, Feb. 3 in a thrilling Lake Michigan Conference contest against rival Boyne City.

Playing in front of a nearly packed house at the Charlevoix High School gym, the Rayders overcame a late fourth-quarter deficit to slip past the Ramblers, 69-68, in a game that had the excitement, energy and feel of that of one of their many memorable Class C tournament games.

"It was fun for both schools," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "Our kids were fired up for the game and I know Boyne brought a lot of students over. It was really exciting and it was fun to get that old feeling back. It was an old school rivalry against an old rival in Boyne City.

"It was just a lot of fun and I still don't know how we really pulled this one off."

The win for the Rayders, 8-5 overall, 4-4 league, avenges a 69-55 loss to Boyne City on Dec. 16. The Ramblers are 9-3, 5-3.

"It was a great basketball game between two good teams that played hard and it was a great atmosphere," Boyne City coach Nick Redman said. "There was two good crowds here and it was a lot of fun.

"My hat goes off to coach Adam (Wood). Charlevoix is a good team, they shot the ball well from beyond the arch and when they do, they're tough to keep down."

GIRLS VARSITY BASKETBALL

Late surge pushes Rayders past Ramblers

Momentum from Friday win not enough to outdistance Kalkaska Blazers Tuesday

Charlevoix High school girls basketball coach Leslie Hoffman got the birthday present she wanted Friday, Feb. 3.

It was a much-needed victory.

Playing against league rival Boyne City, the Rayders overcame a late-fourth-quarter deficit to top the Ramblers, 54-50, in a hard-fought scratch-and-claw Lake Michigan Conference game at the Charlevoix High School gym.

Senior forward Megan Peters had a game-high 15 points and nine rebounds, while senior guard Jenna Way added 14 points and eight rebounds as the Rayders snapped an eight-game losing streak.

Charlevoix is 4-10 overall, 2-6 league, while Boyne City is 4-10, 1-7.

Charlevoix's full-court press caused numerous Boyne City turnovers and transition baskets, including a key late steal and layup from Way which gave the Rayders the lead, 51-50, for good with just under two minutes to play.

"I thought we were on the verge of making a run and we did pretty well in the second half," Hoffman said. "We talked about some adjustments on our press at halftime and we just wanted to be smarter with the basketball on offense.

"Lately, our motto has been to make smart passes. We're seeing good things on the floor, but we just have to make better passes."

Down 38-36 entering the fourth quarter, Boyne City scored five straight point to seize a 41-38 advantage two minutes into the final quarter.

The Ramblers' lead was still three, 50-47, with two minutes left, but Charlevoix close the game with a 7-0 surge to secure the victory.

An Anna Way jumper pulled the Rayders within one, 50-49, then Jenna Way made a steal and layup to put Charlevoix in front, 51-50. Peters then hit two free throws to increase the advantage to 53-50, and Sydney Carlsun closed the scoring with a charity toss with 42 seconds left.

The Ramblers had two possessions in the final minute to cut into the lead, but couldn't answer. Jenna Way made a steal with just 11 seconds to go to seal it.

"Our last few games have been tough ones and there were a few games where I felt we could've pulled it out," Hoffman said. "Hopefully, this will give us a confidence boost. It was a much-needed victory."

third quarter after trailing by six, 16-10, in the second, Kelsey Way and Anna Way added nine points apiece.

"We finished some layups and I thought Kelsey Way did a nice joh in the post," Hoffman said. "I thought we did a nice job of weathering the storm and our goal was to come out and play a strong second half and I thought we did that.

"We knew Boyne City would attack us."

For the Ramblers, Kyle Hicks and Tanner McCune scnred 10 points apiece, while Rainy McCune and Rachel Butler had nine each. Mary Myers grabbed a team-high eight rebounds, and Tanner McCune had seven.

"I thought we were just inconsistent," Boyne City coach Kevin Fitzpatrick said. "We'd handle their pressure and have great opportunities, but then at times we'd make a poor decision and give them a great opportunity. It was rag-tag basketball without a lot of flow and once they got their press going, it was hard going.

"Credit Charlevoix. They made some plays when they needed to make them. We fought back and got a lead and our girls fought so hard, but we need to get better with out decision making and execution."

Unfortunately for the Rayders, the momentum from Friday's win wasn't enough to carry them past Kalkaska on the Blazer's home court Tuesday.

Kalkaska's Sophy Menestrina scored 20 points as the Blazers handed Charlevoix a 46-30 Lake Michigan loss.

Kalkaska, which improved to 11-3 overall, 7-2 league, led 11-3 after one quarter and 25-13 at halftime.

"We never gave up, we battled tonight," Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman said. "We were able to make adjustments to their defense. We just hard a hard time getting the ball to drop."

Kelsey Way scored 11 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to lead Charlevoix, 4-11, 2-7, while Jenna Way had 11 points and six rebounds.

JV GIRLS BASKETBALL

Three wins in a row for Lady Rayder JV

The Charlevoix Rayder girls junior varsity basketball team is on a roll, winning its last three games.

On Tuesday the Lady Rayders defeated Kalkaska 50-45.

Jennaca Holecheck led the Rayders in scoring with 16 point while Gloria Greene had10, Ellie Way had 7, and Kelsey Pischner added 6.

The game remained close throughout. The Rayders were up 8-4 at the end of the first quarter before the Ramblers tied it up 17-17 at the half. The game remained knotted at 32-all at the end of the third.

Head coach Todd Klinger pointed to the defensive play of Kaitlyn Hinkley.

"She did a nice job in our press of really disrupting the Kalkaska offense," Klinger said. "Her speed gave then ball handlers fits."

"This was a revenge win for our team," Klinger added. "Kalkaska was the only league team that has beaten us. The first game was a game that we felt we should have performed better in the second half. We felt that we had something to prove to them. The first game was 1 point deficit at half and we lost by 23 points. A 29 point turnaround is credit to the girls for how much that they have improved. The girls should be proud of themselves."

The win lifted the Rayder JV squad to 10-5 for the season.

On Monday the Rayders defeated another conference foe, Harbor Springs in another close game 41-38.

Jeonaca Holecheck again led the scoring with 9 points while, Ellie Way added 8, Kourtney Putman and Maggie Hamilton had 6 each, aod Olivia Storm and Gloria Greene had 5 each.

The Rayders clung to a narrow 14-13 lead at the end of the first quarter, but had extended it to 26-20 by halftime. The Rams came back to knot it up at 33 at the end of the third. The game was tied 38-38 with about 12 seconds remaining in regulation when Holecheck it a 3-pointer to give the Rayders the win.

"She kept hustling on the play and got herself open to make big shot," Klinger said. "She is the type of player that this could become habit for. Jennaca is really developing into a pretty good player."

Klinger also pointed to the play of Kaitlyn Loviska who came off the bench in the fourth quarter to hit a big shot that broke a dry spell the Rayders.

"Her play gave the team lift at that point in the game," Klinger added.

"This game was a back and forth game from the start," He said. "Harbor came out and scored nn their first five trips down the court. They had the lead on us early but the girls fought back to take the lead. In the second half, it was Harbor's turn to fight back aod take the lead for a short time in fourth quarter. This was a game that could have gone either way but we never gave up."

On Thursday, Feb. 2 the Rayders traveled to Boyne City where they defeated the rival Ramblers 50-28.

Jennaca Holecheck led the scoring with 19 points, while Maggie Hamilton added 12, Kourtney Putman had 8, Gloria Greene had 6.

Charlevoix jumped out to an early 11-5 lead at the end of the first quarter and never looked back. The Rayders extended the margin in 25-11 at the half and led 39-25 at the end of the third.

Klinger said all of his starting five — Hamilton, Holecheck, Pischner, Putman, and Ellie Way played a strong game. He noted the starting five combined to score 44 of the team's 50 points.

"After a game of not playing to our capabilities the night before, the team bounced back with a good win over Boyne City," Klinger said. "It is always nice to beat Boyne City because of the rivalry and the girls all know each other."

The JV squad was slated to travel to Elk Rapids on Thursday and then will host East Jordan on Tuesday, Feb. 14.

Rayders defeat Boyne, fall to T.C. St. Francis

The Charlevoix Rayder freshmen boys basketball team bounced back strong from a loss to Traverse City St. Francis late last month when they defeated Boyne City oo Feb. 3 io a pair of Lake Michigan Conference contests.

Oo Jan. 27 Will Telgenhof led the Rayders with 14 points as the Rayders hosted the Traverse City St. Francis Gladiators, losing 51-43.

Also for the Rayders Ryan Joy added 12, while Noah Jeakle added 5 and Bryan Noirot put in 4 points.

The Rayders kept the game close until the end. Charlevoix lead 16-14 ad the end of the first quarter and 26-23 at the half. But St. Francis pulled ahead in the third quarter leading 39-36 at the end of the period.

Coach Joe Solomon said it was obvious from the opening tip it would be ao exciting and physical game.

"We were definitely the smaller team on the floor, and I was extremely proud of the way our players accepted this challenge," Solomon said. "We played pretty well defensively, holding off St. Francis in the first half. However we got in to foul trouble, with Will and Bryan eventually fouling out, and we weren't able to respond offensively like we needed once they took the lead."

But the Rayders bounced back strong on Feb. 3 posting a 57-36 victory over conference rival Boyne City.

Telgenhof again led the Rayders' scoring attack with 17 points while Ryan Joy added 15 and Noah Jeakle added 10.

The Rayders jumped out to a big lead early and never looked back.

Charlevoix lead 24-9 after the first quarter and 33-16 at the half. The Rayders extended the lead to 22 by the end of the third quarter leading 44-22.

"All around, I would have to say this was our best performance of the season," coach Solomon said. "We have struggled at times offensively this year, and it was nice to see our players capitalizing on scoring opportunities, and on the defeosive end I felt we were very sharp at every position."

The Rayder freshman squad will next been in action at home at 6 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 10 and theo will host Ellsworth at 4:15 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 14.

WRESTLING

Four wrestlers place in conference

KALKASKA — Three Charlevoix wrestlers earned second-place finishes and one placed third at the Lake Michigan Conference wrestling tournament at Kalkaska High School on Saturday, Feb. 4.

The Rayders' Austin Cesaro, 103; Jake Novotny, 140; and Mark Durkee, 171; each finished second, while Sam Hovie, 152, placed third.

Cesaro lost to Eric Wales of St. Francis in the 103 final, 10-3; Novntny dropped an 8-6 decision to St. Francis' Ben Jamieson io the 140 title match; and Durkee was pinned by Ty Johnsen of Grayling in the 171 final.

Hovie lost the consolation on a second-period pin to Elk Rapids.

The Rayders participated in the Division IV Team District Wednesday at Onaway, where they faced Mancelona in a semifinal match. The winner of that match were set to face the winner of the Boyne City vs Onaway semi-final for the district final immediately following. Results of the matches were not available before press time Thursday morning.

The district champion advances to the regional on Feb. 15 at St. Ignace where it will face the winner of the Munising district. District champions from Rogers City and Norway comprise the other half of the regional bracket.

Wrestlers from all three area schools will head to the individual district tournaments on Saturday, Feb. 11.

The top four wrestlers in each weight class advance to the individual regionals, scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 18. The Division IV Regional involving wrestlers from Charlevoix and Boyne is scheduled for Maoton High School.

The top four finishers in each weight class advance to the Individual State Tournament, which is scheduled for March 1-3 at The Palace of Auburn Hills.

THRILLER

Potter sunk a tough inside shot to tie it at 65-all. Potter calmly hit a pair of pressure-packed free throws on the Rayders' next possession to put Charlevoix in front.

Boyne City was then called for a three-second violation with 34 seconds to go, and Coby Herriman extended the Rayders advantage to 68-65 with a free throw.

Buyne City senior guard Keegan LaBlance, who played for two-plus years in Charlevoix and was playing in the Charlevoix High School gym for the first time as a Rambler, missed a potential game-tying 3-pointer with 10 seconds to go and senior Andrew Plude skied fur the rebound, drew a foul, and hit a free throw to make it 69-65 with seven seconds to go.

> "It was really exciting and it was fun to get that old feeling back. It was an old school rivalry against an old rival in Boyne City."
> — Adam Wood, Charlevoix head coach

Boyne freshman Corey Redman hit a 3-pointer for the final margin.

"I'm just so proud of my guys," said Wood, whose team lost to Lake Michigan-leading Traverse City St. Francis and Grayling by a combined nine points in its last two league games. "They've fought and they've been like this all year. We went 0-2 against two tough teams last week aod we just came up short and we talked about finishing here tonight and we finished.

"It's a big confidence booster. To get to where we are now is nice. We're a lot better team than we were back then the first time we faced them."

Charlie Hamilton had a team-high 18 points — including four 3-pointers — and two steals to pace the Rayders, Plude added 17 points and seven rebounds, aod Potter finished with 10 points. Tanner Catt added nine points and Coby Herriman had seven.

Herriman was key down the stretch as he drew a charge with 1:35 to play against Boyne City sophomore forward Ryan Carson, which forced Carson to the bench with his fifth foul.

Herriman's free throw with 22 seconds to play then gave the Rayders a three-point advantage.

"Herriman gave us some huge points and minutes, and he finally made a free throw which was nice," Wood said. "He may have won us the game with him attacking the basket."

Plude also was key as he scored 15 of his 17 points in the second half, mostly off dribble penetration.

"Plude had a tremendous game," Wood said. "He didn't get a lot of shots off in the first half and we recognized that. He went out in the second half with a mind-set that this is my senior year and with Potter in foul trouble, he put a lot on his shoulders and he came through.

"This was as aggressive as he's been in a while and I'm proud of him. He's elusive around the basket and he found a way to finish."

Senior Jay Redman scored a team-high 21 points to lead Boyne, which led 33-26 at halftime and 52-50 after three quarters. Jay REdman also had five rebounds.

"We talked about getting some quality shots during timeouts and in a close game, every loose ball is key and we gave up an offensive putback and then we had that charge called against us," coach Redman said. "Throughout the game, we have to do a better job of guarding the dribble drive and we just have to keep things rolling, execute better."

Also for Boyne, Corey Redman had 19 points and six rebounds, Carson finished with 17 points and 10 rebounds, and LaBlance had 11 points and four assists.

"Andrew Plude and Andrew Potter are very good players and I thought they played really solid," coach Redman said. "We just have to do a better job of stepping up and getting those 50/50 balls and loose ball rebounds when the game is close. With Ryan (Carson) fouling out, they hurt us late. We had our opportunity, but we just have to execute better."

Wood also lauded the effort of Hamilton, who led the Rayders in scoring despite playing with a broken finger on his shooting hand.

"Luckily he still knows how to shoot without that one finger," Wood said. "He just loaded it up with tape, there's three stitches in it. I was just proud of him for fighting through it."

The Rayders' momentum from Friday's win carried them to an easy 73-30 victory over Kalkaska Tuesday.

Andrew Plude scored 16 points and senior Josh Hogan added a career-high 12 in his first varsity start as the Rayders rolled to their third straight victory.

Charlie Hamilton added nine points aod Tanner Catt had eight for Charlevoix, which led 34-8 after one quarter and 49-10 at halftime. Eleven of the 12 Rayders who dressed for the game hit the scoring column as Charlevoix improved to 9-5 overall, 5-4 league.

"I thought we had good energy tonight," said Charlevoix coach Adam Wood, whose team has won five of its last seven starts. "Sometimes a game like this can be a trap game. We had a big game last Friday with Boyne City and we've got another one Friday (Feb. 10 at home against Elk Rapids).

"I give (Kalkaska) coach Matt Olds a lot of credit. They're in a tough situation, but those kids play hard. We came out and played hard and got the job done and now we're looking forward to Friday."

Andrew Potter finished with five rebonds and five assists for the Rayders.

ANNUAL DRINKING WATER QUALITY REPORT

OF THE City of Charlevoix Water Supply

January 2012

Here is this year's Annual Quality Water Report.

It is designed to inform you about the quality drinking water and services we deliver to you every day. Our constant goal is to provide you with a safe and dependable supply of drinking water. We want you to understand the efforts we make to continually improve the water treatment process and protect our water resources. We are committed to ensuring the quality of your water. The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally occurring minerals and in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity.

Our water comes from Lake Michigan, considered surface water. The State has performed an assessment of our source water in 2004. A determination of sensitivity and susceptibility to contamination was by made reviewing our source water chemistry, and potential contamination sources nearby the lake. The State has determined that our source water has a moderate sensitivity rating along with a moderate susceptibility to contamination. You may obtain a copy of the State report by contacting the City of Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant.

We are pleased to report that your drinking water is safe and meets all State and Federal requirements.

This report is a snapshot of the quality of the water we provided to you in the year 2011. Included are details about where your water comes from, what it contains, and how it compares to Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and State of Michigan standards. If you have any questions about this report or concerning your water utility, please contact Jim Caldwell at the Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant, (231) 547-3256, or Don Swem at the Charlevoix Water Department, (231) 547-3273. We want our valued customers to be informed about their water utility. The City of Charlevoix Water Supply routinely monitors for contaminants in your drinking water according to Federal and State Laws. This report shows the results of our monitoring for the period of January 1 thru December 31, 2011. All drinking water, including bottled drinking water, may be reasonably expected to contain at least small amounts of some constituents. It's important to remember that the presence of these constituents does not necessarily pose a health risk.

Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

Microbial contaminants such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations and wildlife.

Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals which can be naturally occurring or result from urban stormwater run-off, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining or farming.

Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture and residential uses.

Radioactive contaminants, which are naturally occurring.

Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban storm water runoff, and septic systems.

The State of Michigan and Environmental Protection Agency require us to test our water on a regular basis to ensure its safety.

We met all monitoring requirements for the year 2011.

Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant and Distribution System personnel sampled and tested for over 100 contaminants that were NOT detected in our water supply. The following constituents were detected at low but safe levels, well below the MCL (Maximum Contaminant Level).

In the following tables you will find many terms and abbreviations you might not be familiar with. To help you better understand these terms we've provided the following definitions:

Parts per million (ppm) or Milligrams per liter (mg/l) - one part per million corresponds to one minute in two years or a single penny in $10,000.

Parts per billion (ppb) or Micrograms per liter - one part per billion corresponds to one minute in 2,000 years, or a single penny in $10,000,000.

Picocuries per liter (pCi/L) - A pico equals one part per trillion; the measurement of radiation in water.

Nephelometric Turbidity Unit (NTU) - nephelometric turbidity unit is a measure of the clarity of water. Turbidity in excess of 5 NTU is just noticeable to the average person.

Action Level (AL) - the concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.

Treatment Technique (TT) - A treatment technique is a required process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water.

Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL) - is the highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.

Maximum Contaminant Level Goal - (MCLG) is the level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.

NA: not applicable

ND: not detectable at testing limit. * Turbidity - turbidity is a measure of the cloudiness of the water. We monitor it because it is an indicator of our filtration system.

* Turbidity - turbidity is a measure of the cloudiness of the water. We monitor it because it is an indicator of our filtration system

Lead and Copper - Lead and copper testing is on a three (3) year schedule, test results reported here are from the 2009 year; next round of testing is year 2012.

If present, elevated levels of lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Lead in drinking water is primarily from materials and components associated with service lines and home plumbing. The City of Charlevoix is responsible for providing high quality drinking water, but cannot control the variety of materials used in plumbing components. When your water has been sitting for several hours, you can minimize the potential for lead exposure by flushing your tap for 30 seconds to 2 minutes before using water for drinking or cooking. If you are concerned about lead in your drinking water, you may wish to have your water tested. Information on lead in your drinking water, testing methods, and steps to minimize exposure is available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1-800-426-4791 or at http://water.epa.gov/drink/info/lead/index.cfm

Unregulated contaminants are those for which the EPA has not established drinking water standards. The purpose of unregulated contaminant monitoring is to assist EPA in determining the occurrence of unregulated contaminants in drinking water and whether future regulation is warranted.

We're pleased that your drinking water meets or exceeds all Federal and State requirements. We have learned through our monitoring and testing that some constituents have been detected. The EPA has determined that your water is SAFE at these levels.

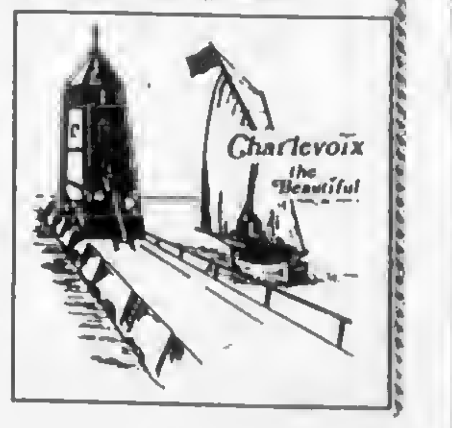
All sources of drinking water are subject to potential contamination by substances that are naturally occurring or man made. All drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that the water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1-800-426-4791.

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by cryptosporidium and other microbiological contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791)

Call us if you have any questions.

About our system. . . .

The City of Charlevoix operates a Direct Filtration Water Treatment Facility which uses water from Lake Michigan. With a capacity of 3 million gallons per day, water enters the plant through a submerged intake structure. Storage includes a one million gallon above ground reservoir at the plant, and a 300,000 gallon elevated tank (water tower) on Charlevoix's north side. The City has approximately 32 miles of distribution lines serving approximately 5,000 customers in the City of Charlevoix and areas of adjoining Charlevoix Township, as well as, the influx of summer visitors to the area. Present flow rates vary from around 400,000 gallons per day in the winter to as much as 2.5 million gallons per day in the summer. In service since 1987, it is a modern, efficient facility staffed by licensed, well trained operators. Charlevoix is continually improving its distribution system assuring fresh water and adequate pressure throughout our entire service area. An electrical generator at the Water Plant assures normal operation at full capacity in the event of an electrical power loss to the City. We at the Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant and Distribution System work around the clock to provide top quality water to every tap. The water Treatment Facility treated and delivered 260,760,000 million gallons of drinkable water in 2011.



Please help us protect our water resources, which are the heart of our community, our way of life, and our children's future.

Charlevoix County Transit bus hours expand

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS REVIEW STAFF WRITER

An additional five hours per week will be added to Charlevoix County Transit Service's weekday availability on the mainland.

Starting Feb. 6, transit buses began operating until 7 p.m. on weekdays, an hour longer than before. The change will mean more options for frequent passengers, including Nedina Wiltjer, of Charlevoix and Terri Rose, of Boyne City.

"I'll be able to do things that are coming up in the evenings at the library," said Wiltjer, 71, who no longer drives.

She hasn't bothered to look at what evening programs are even offered, knowing she couldn't attend.

"There's no point in getting my hopes up or being resentful I no longer have a car," Wiltjer said.

Rose, 42, who is disabled, said the extended service hours will mean she won't be so frantic when it comes to her errands and appointments. For example, she will more easily be able to both pick her children up from school and stop at the grocery store before heading home, she said.

> "It may seem frivolous to some people, but it's not for those of us who depend on transit."
> — Nedina Wiltjer, 71, of Charlevoix

"It will give some more time during the day for people who can't get out in the mornings," Rose said.

Jill Drury, transit manager, said the service hours change is a reaction to the community's changing needs.

"We're seeing more of a need for transportation for people trying to get home from work or make their doctor appointments, as well as for children staying for after-school programs," Drury said.

Wiltjer, who uses transit multiple times each week to go to the community pool, senior center, library and shopping, said she's beginning to think about plans for an evening supper out. That's all thanks to transit's expanded evening hours, she said.

"It may seem frivolous to some people, but it's not for those of us who depend on transit," Wiltjer said.

Drury said the transit agency also hopes to add Saturday service to the offerings by summer's start. That is another suggestion bus drivers relayed from their passengers, she said.

Wiltjer said Saturday bus service would allow an alternate day for her shopping trips, while Rose said it would make her Fridays far less hectic.

"That would mean so much. I always rush on Fridays to make sure I have all I need for the weekend because transit currently doesn't run on Saturday and Sunday," Rose said.

Service hours on Beaver Island are expected to be extended in the summer, Drury said.

Call (231) 582-6900 for more information about the transit agency, or to schedule a ride. Those on Beaver Island should call (231) 448-2026 to schedule bus trips.

On Wednesday, Feb. 8 the county board of commissioners voted to offer the job to Janik after he interviewed for the position the day before.

Janik told the Courier on Wednesday that the board has scheduled a meeting for next week at which time a decision will be made about contract terms. He said he won't make a decision about whether to accept the position until the

When Molly Kitson of East Jordan sat down with her mom, Meg, to discuss how they were going to celebrate her 10th birthday, they first decided they would celebrate with a party.

But then there's always the tough decisions about who to invite. So, they decided to rent out the East Jordan Community pool and invite essentially everyone in her class.

With that out of the way, they thought about many people's natural desire to bring some kind of a gift to a birthday party. But with that many kids, that's a lot of presents, and after all that wasn't what the party was about, Meg Kitson said.

So, Molly and mom hit on another idea — slightly modifying something similar that one of Molly's friends had done for the Charlevoix County Humane Society, she asked her guests to bring food items to be donated to the Care and Share Food Pantry in East Jordan in lieu of a birthday gift.

In all, the 45 children who attended Molly's party donated 297 food items on Saturday, Jan. 21.

"She was really excited about it," Meg said of her daughter.

The next day when the Kitsons were attending church services at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix — where Kitson, a Charlevoix native, (formerly Fowler) has attended since she was a child — they hit upon another idea.

New island ferry design under way

Plans for new ferry may be ready by summer, actual vessel likely years away

Transportation officials and residents on Beaver Island recently moved a small step closer to having a new ferry to serve the island.

However, it could be several years before there is anything more than some numbers and drawings.

On Monday, the shipbuilding industry publication Marine Log posted a press release from Elliott Bay Design Group out of Seattle, Wash., announcing that it recently entered into a contract with the Beaver Island Transportation Authority to design a new ferry to serve the long-term transportation needs of island residents and guests.

Speaking to the Courier on Tuesday, Barbara Schwartzfisher, the executive director of the Beaver Island Transportation Authority confirmed the information contained in the website posting. The authority is the public body responsible for overseeing ferry transportation between the island and Charlevoix. The authority has a long-term contract with the Beaver Island Boat Company to operate its current main ferry, The Emerald Isle.

Schwartzfisher said in early December the authority and Elliot Bay Design Group finalized a contract for $239,000 to design the new ferry. She said the finished design is expected sometime in June, but emphasized that the plans are just the first step in what will likely be a years-long process.

The biggest hurdle in the way is money — and lots of it.

"We still don't have a nickle to actually build a new boat," Schwartzfisher said.

She said the authority began discussing the long-term ferry needs for the island nearly a decade ago. In 2004 and 2005 it conducted transportation studies and in 2006 it began asking state and federal authorities for money to design a new vessel.

County board considers how to replace equalization director

Brandon Hubbard
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix County equalization director is set to retire in five days, but county officials are still trying to figure out how to proceed with finding a replacement.

Adding to the requirements of finding a replacement for veteran equalization director Betsy Mason is a state requirement that the county find a new director with a level four assessor, a requirement imposed by new standards of the Michigan Tax Commission. That new requirement could cost as much as $31,000 more per year in salary for someone with the higher certification, based on salaries in neighboring counties.

During a personnel committee meeting Wednesday morning officials discussed whether the county could potentially contractually join with other counties to share an equalization director and save money.

"I think the sticker-shock is a lot of what is involved," said Charlevoix County commissioner Chris Christensen.

Mason contended the larger salary comes with added education.

"It's the difference between a bachelor's (degree) and a master's (degree)," said Mason, explaining to the committee the reason behind the increased labor cost.

The equalization director put in her notice of retirement in November, but while the county has posted the position on its website that notice has gained only one application. The county plans to advertise in a trade publication next.

Mason encouraged the committee to rely on the Michigan Association of Equalization Directors for helping them make an informed decision about whether to replace her or contract services jointly.

Charlevoix County is planning to review how to potentially lighten its growing assessing workload.

The burden on its equalization staff multiplied because of increased tax tribunals from dropping home values in the past few years, as well as contractually doing the assessing for the cities of Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan. Those cities combine for more than 7,200 parcels that need assessing, with a rate of about one-third being assessed each year.

"It appears we're overloaded," said Joel Evans, Charlevoix County commissioner.

Mason said the staff is extremely busy trying to keep up with the workload.

"The law says the county can provide an assessor if one is not available (to local municipalities)," Mason said. "I'm not sure the intent of that was for it to last 30 years."

The committee agreed to meet with all three city managers Tuesday, Feb. 21, to decide how to proceed.

The level four assessor will need to be hired at the beginning of May to legally sign off on the county's equalization numbers.

Scores on the MEAP show improvement is needed

Rachel Brougham
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Data released Wednesday shows that while Michigan students have made some gains over last year, schools have a long way to go to meet new expectations.

The Michigan Department of Education released results of the Fall 2011 Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) scores Wednesday. The MEAP is taken each fall by public school students in grades three through nine.

For Charlevoix Public Schools the number of students meeting the "proficient" standard exceeded the state average in social studies (38.9 percent) and reading (76.5 percent) but was lower than the state average in math (29.2 percent.

Overall, 37 percent of Michigan students in grades three-eight passed the math portion of the exam. In reading, students fared slightly better with a 63 percent passing rate. Both scores were slight gains over the 2010 test.

Other subjects on the exam include writing, social studies and science.

Locally, the News-Review looked at results for the sixth grade in the subjects of math, reading and social studies. The state average for sixth grade students was 37.1 percent, 67 percent and 27.7 percent, respectively.

In math, Harbor Springs sixth-graders topped the local list with 54.1 percent meeting expectations. At the low end, 15.6 percent of Pellston students met expectations.

In reading, every area district saw more than 65 percent of sixth-graders proficient in the subject, with both Harbor Springs and Concord Academy Boyne topping the list with 83.3 percent proficiency.

In social studies, at the high end locally, 47.2 percent of Boyne City sixth graders passed, while the number dropped to 8.7 in Alanson.

Area superintendents say the scores will help them determine what their district needs to focus on academically in the coming years.

"Like virtually all school districts in the state, Charlevoix's MEAP and MME proficiency results for this Fall showed decreased scores. While we anticipated an initial drop in the number of students reported as 'proficient,' our principals and teachers are optimistic that ongoing school improvement and student support measures will provide a positive response to the scoring changes," Charlevoix schools superintendent Chet Janik said.

This is the first year of a new scoring system for the test. Students need to get roughly 65 percent of the answers correct to pass the test, instead of only 39 percent as was the previous benchmark.

There are four levels of student performance — advanced, proficient, partially proficient and not proficient on the tests.

State leaders say the new cut scores better reflect how well schools are preparing their students to be on track for career and college readiness in high school, and on track to proficiency in the next grade for grades three through nine.

Career and college ready means students are adequately prepared to pass first year community college courses without remediation.

"These are the results we expected after the adjustment of the cut scores, though also as expected, the gains achieved this year in reading and mathematics demonstrate that our students will continue to make academic progress even with this adjustment," said state superintendent of public instruction, Mike Flanagan.

"The new cut scores show that we aren't where we thought we were before, but this is the picture of where we are now. The focus needs to be taking this to the next level," he added.

Jennifer Sabsook, instructional services coordinator with the Charlevoix-Emmet ISD, told the News-Review earlier this week that an initial drop in the number of local students reported as "proficient" was expected. However, she believes the change will be temporary because of ongoing school improvement efforts and student support.

The MEAP test is based on state education standards and is the only common measure given statewide to students. It is designed to measure what Michigan educators, employers, and parents believe all students should know and be able to do in five content areas: mathematics, reading, science, social studies and writing.

Scores need to improve in the next two years.

Under the federal No Child Left Behind Act, all students must be proficient in reading and math by 2014. However, the Michigan Department of Education is planning to apply for a waiver that would allow the state to lower that expectation to 85 percent by 2021.

To see how districts fared at each grade level and subject, visit the Michigan Department of Education website at www.michigan.gov/mde.

Marijuana ordinance headed back to city council

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

The Charlevoix City Planning Commission on Monday voted unanimously (among the five members present) to recommend approval of a revised amendment to the city's zoning ordinance to regulate medical marijuana caregiver operations in the city.

The proposed ordinance came back to the planning commission after the city council indicated its desire to make the rules less restrictive than originally proposed.

The changes to the ordinance from the version originally recommended by the planning commission involved the "buffer zones" around certain types of property uses.

Originally the proposed ordinance, which does not apply to individual patients, specified that caregiver operations must be located in residential areas and not be within certain distances from schools, churches, parks, beaches, day care facilities and other medical marijuana caregiver grow operations.

Earlier this month, the Charlevoix City Council directed city planner Mike Spencer to redraft the ordinance to eliminate all buffer zones except for a 1,000-foot radius around schools and a 300-foot radius around churches.

The change came after the council received a great deal of public input at a public hearing in January — most of it from medical marijuana proponents contending that the ordinance as proposed at that time was too restrictive.

Now that it has been back before the planning commission, the matter will now go back to the council for further consideration following a public hearing that the council has set on the revised ordinance proposal for 7 p.m. on Monday, March 5. The council could vote to approve the ordinance at that meeting and it would take effect 30 days later.

Marijuana: A botanical and historical perspective

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

Now that Charlevoix is considering the regulations concerning legal growth and distribution of cannabis sativa (marijuana) in the community, information about the plant might be valuable to citizens. The second part of the Latin name simply means "of the field" or "cultivated." That particular plant has been a part of human history for a long time. Written records date back at least 2,000 years. Seeds have been found dating to at least 1500 BC.

While marijuana now grows all over the world, it originated in China, or possibly in Iran, where it was used medicinally for centuries. At that time it was recommended for malaria, beriberi, constipation, as an anesthetic for surgery and as a cure for old-age absent-mindedness. Like most plant remedies, that is, plants that had some noticeable physiological effect, it was used to treat common problems. Pharmacies and pharmaceutical companies were not available.

Botanically, cannabis is a tall (12 feet or more in good conditions), fast-growing annual plant. The plants come in two forms, so-called female plants, which bear seeds and male plants that only produce pollen. Only the female plants contain delta-tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), which is the active chemical substance.

Until 1937, cannabis was commonly present in patent medicines in the U.S. and was even sold as cigarettes to ease asthma. In 1937, buoyed by the success of prohibition, (that is an ironic statement) Congress passed the Federal Marijuana Tax act, which made possession and cultivation subject to five years in federal prison and a $2,000 fine. States passed equivalent laws, and many are still on the books. The federal law has not been modified, because no elected congressperson is very willing to support legislation that might legalize what the law and many voters considers a narcotic drug.

During World War II, supplies of Manila hemp were unavailable for rope manufacture because the Japanese controlled the part of the world where that hemp grew. Cannabis plants, especially selected for their capacity to produce strong fibers for rope, were planted on thousands of acres in the Midwest. Such cultivation ceased at the end of the war, but the plants spread from the fields and are widely present in most Midwest agricultural areas. When we lived in Iowa, where I taught botany, I used to bet people that I could find a marijuana plant growing wild within a block of their house. These were not good drug-producing plants, but their possession carried the same five year penalty prescribed by the Marijuana Act. Botanists collect plants to verify that they are present in a particular area. I collected those plants, pressed and dried them, and mounted them on permanent paper as a record. I hoped that I would not come to the attention of any Federal agents.

I was only questioned once, by an agent who blessedly ignored the strictest interpretation of the Federal law although he did give me a copy of it. There are few exceptions in the law for botanists. I was a young college professor with five children, and I tried to look as harmless as possible to a very large agent with the BIGGEST badge I had ever seen.

Most of the world has lived with marijuana plants for centuries, with little adverse effect. I suspect that Charlevoix will manage.

Editor:

I want to take this opportunity to inform you about changes to the Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) and the Michigan Merit Exam (MME) tests this year as there has been numerous media stories about this on a local and state level which has caused some confusion and concerns.

On an annual basis, Charlevoix students, along with all other Michigan public school students in grades 3-9, are required to take the MEAP and all 11th grade students are required to take the MME. Depending on the individual scores, students are categorized as being Advanced, Proficient, Partially Proficient and Not Proficient. This year, the Michigan State Board of Education has adopted new guidelines and has raised the cutoff score or "cut score" that a student must receive in each of the four categories.

These new cut scores represent a significantly higher standard for student achievement and are intended to more accurately reflect a student's progress toward college and career readiness. On some tests, students previously could have answered as few as 40 percent of the questions correctly to be considered "Proficient." Under the new scoring system, students will have to correctly answer a much higher percentage of questions. Michigan is one of only three states in the nation, along with New York and Tennessee, to move into this top tier of test scoring.

Like virtually all school districts in the state, Charlevoix's MEAP and MME proficiency results for this fall are expected to decrease when actual scores are publicly released. While we anticipate an initial drop in the number of students reported as "Proficient," our principals and teachers are optimistic that ongoing school improvement and student support measures will provide a positive response to the scoring changes.

An example of the expected impact on scoring will be provided by the Michigan Department of Education on the web at www.mischooldata.org. These examples will apply the new cut scores to the previous four years of test results. This information offers an overview on the impact these changes will have on future scoring. Actual previous scores have not been changed.

When student scores are reported, it is very likely that the percentage of students rated as "Proficient" will decline. I'm confident that Charlevoix Public Schools will still be well above the state results, but we believe more students will be rated as less than "Proficient." In fact, some students rated as "Advanced" under the old cut scores could be rated as "Not Proficient" or "Partially Proficient" when the new cut scores are applied.

Please remember that MEAP and MME tests are only two of several measures used and our board of education, principals and teachers' top priority is to maintain our high standards for our students and the students' test scores are consistently among the highest in the region. We anticipate this trend will continue even with the new cut scores.

One of our priorities this year is to align our curriculum to the new Common Core State Standards (CCSS) in English language arts and mathematics. These revisions will respond to the more challenging level of expectations that will be reflected in the new scoring changes.

Principals Suzanne Klinger, Travis Garrett and Doug Drenth will provide updates as new information becomes available and please contact any of us if you have any further questions.

Sincerely,
Chet Janik
Superintendent, Charlevoix Public Schools

Proposed trail connection is dangerous

Editor:

About a month ago, there was another accident at the corner of U.S. 31 and the Boyne City Road. Often the cause is some one pulling out on U.S. 31 too soon or a vehicle turning onto the Boyne City Road and obscuring a vehicle going north. Do we need to make this junction any more dangerous?

The vehicle count, just beyond the Argonne, towards Boyne City, on April 23, 2011 was 2,605. The count is for a 24-hour period and counted cars traveling in both directions. In the summer, the population in Charlevoix is approximately 25,000. I don't think it unreasonable to add 800 more cars per day to that April count, in the summer. That brings the total to 3,405 in a 24-hour period, not including the additional traffic we have with at least 10 major events in the summer. Now add a bunch of bikers to that mix.

Since there isn't much nightlife in Charlevoix, the majority of that traffic is probably in a 10-hour period.

Larry Sullivan, county planning director, as recently as Jan. 18, at the Charlevoix County personnel/ internal government meeting, spoke about the non motorized trail and the manner in which these trails would connect at the junction of U.S. 31 and the Boyne City Road. Traveling south from the Charlevoix-Harbor Springs trail, bikers and hiking families will exit the trail at Waller Road, bike along the easement of U.S. 31 and cross at the light to connect with the Charlevoix Boyne City Trail. Now imagine bikers coming from the Charlevoix-Boyne city trail crossing U.S. 31 at the caution light to hike north at Waller Road. Imagine again, bikers coming from Charlevoix, exiting Martin Road crossing U.S. 31 to connect with the new trail, and it is the middle of July! How many of us are traveling at least the speed limit of 55 miles per hour when we pass the Boyne City Road?

Yes, it is legal to bike on any road, but would there be any liability if Charlevoix Township condones/advocates this dangerous trail connection plan? If you think this plan is clearly dangerous please call Larry Sullivan at (231) 547-7234, Ross Maxwell at (231) 582-7040, county commissioners Shirlene Tripp, at (231) 547-9679, Robert Drebensted (231) 547-8463, Chris Christensen at 582-0684; Ronald Reinhardt at (231) 582-7912, Joel Evans at (231) 536-7073, Richard Gillespie at (231) 448-2577 or any of your township officials. Please take the time to call someone.

The 185-foot Mizpah was built at a cost of $525,000 in 1926 for the widow of the publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer. The boat boasted gold-plated doorknobs and a crew of 27. Her owner soon sold the vessel in order to build the world's biggest yacht at over 400 feet. Going through one more owner, the Mizpah ended up in the hands of Eugene McDonald, founder of the Zenith Corporation, in 1929. He lived on the boat in Chicago. McDonald conducted experiments with the first radar on the Mizpah that, though crude, were found to have potential. Charlevoix was where the Mizpah spent most of her summer days. In 1932 McDonald brought several guests to town, one of whom was sculptor Gutzon Borglum, taking a break from carving the faces on Mount Rushmore. The Mizpah served in World War II as a convoy escort between New York and Key West, after the war as a banana boat between Honduras and Tampa for 20 years, and ended her life in 1968 when she was sunk to form an artificial reef and fish habitat off the Palm Beach, Florida coast.

MICHIGAN WORKS!™ to host welding forum

Northwest Michigan Works! will host a forum on Feb. 28 specifically for employers of welders and business owners in the welding industry in Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

Peer companies and educational partners will meet to share information on qualifications and the future of the welding field, with the goal of growing and developing a trained workforce.

Michigan Works! managers will use the information gathered at the meeting to design an accelerated training program. That program will include recruiting trainees with the basic job skills, potential to learn, and abilities to become successful welders.

Scholarships will also be available for eligible trainees, and employers will have easy access to a new pool of qualified candidates to help businesses grow.

Through its re-designed delivery model, Northwest Michigan Works! seeks to better serve employer needs with these types of industry-specific events, event organizers said. A key approach is customized training to develop a labor supply that can meet demands for particular skills, number of hires, and timeline for hiring.

This event is open to all business owners and employers in the welding industry in Charlevoix and Emmet counties. For the location and time of the forum and to register, please call Anna Mouser at (231) 922-6506.

She was the salutatorian of the Charlevoix High School class of 1950 and graduated from Emmanuel Missionary College in 1955. She was born Aug. 22, 1932 in Ynona, Mich. She and her husband Merrill A. Brown of Cheney, Wash., recently celebrated their 54th wedding anniversary.

Preceding her in death were her parents, Ernest E. and Blanche Paul and brother, Jerry, all of Charlevoix, as well as sisters Lois Wert of Lansing and Connie Dawson of Eastport.

She will be greatly missed by her family, friends, and acquaintances. She is now resting from her labors and awaiting the call of the life-giver on the Resurrection morning.

Zonta to host literary event

The Charlevoix Area Zonta Club will be hosting its annual Literary Delights — a Michigan Women Authors' Luncheon, from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. on Saturday May 19 at the Charlevoix Public Library.

Tickets for the event are $40 per person and include a catered lunch and basket raffle drawings. Three Michigan women authors, Ellen Airgood, Nancy Ellison and Fleda Brown, will be speaking at the event and copies of their books will be available for sale and signing at the event. All of the proceeds of the event go to support projects to advance the status of women locally, nationally and internationally, including Zonta's Sights on Success event, which is a free, day-long event offered to middle school girls to build teamwork, self esteem and confidence.

The organization's featured author for February is Ellen Airgood. Airgood lives and works in Grand Marais. She and her husband run a diner together and she finds great satisfaction with the work, especially meeting people from all different places with all different stories. Her latest book, South of Superior, is about a woman who walks away from her Chicago life to move to the coast of Lake Superior in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan and care for an aging family friend where she finds great reward in caring for others. Airgood has also written A Side Order of Romance, Please.

For more information or to purchase a ticket for the event, contact Linda Weller at (231) 547-4548. Reservations for the event are required.

Judge rules in favor of landowner

Charlevoix oil and gas lease lawsuit concluded, precedent set

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

> "We signed in good faith and we expected Western Land Services to act in good faith as well."
> — Jack Ingalls, of Ingalls Trust

CHARLEVOIX — A Northern Michigan judge sided with property owners in a legal dispute centered around the region's oil and gas boom two summers ago.

Charlevoix County Circuit Judge Richard Pajtas on Jan. 31 denied a request by Western Land Services, of Ludington, and Northern Michigan Exploration Company, of Lansing, to reconsider his prior ruling that granted summary judgement to the Ingalls Trust which has land in Charlevoix County. The trust successfully sued the companies for more than $78,000 for breach of an oil and gas lease signed in July 2010.

"We think the judge understood the issue very well," said Susan Hlywa Topp, a Gaylord-based attorney for the trust.

Topp said she hopes Pajtas' decision will set a precedent for other property owners in Charlevoix County who challenged companies that voided their oil and gas leases without cause. However, in other similar cases, judges in Antrim and Emmet counties recently upheld the companies' rights to reject lease agreements until title to the minerals became finalized.

For the Ingalls, the trouble started when they received a letter from Northern Michigan Exploration Company in November 2010, four months after they signed the mineral lease, that said the contract would be voided because it was not on an approved form.

"We signed in good faith and we expected Western Land Services to act in good faith as well," said Jack Ingalls, trustee.

Attorneys for the companies — including Steven Barney, of Petoskey, and Kevin Roragen, of Lansing — failed to return phone calls seeking comment.

Pajtas ruled in December that Western Land Service's oil and gas lease with the Ingalls Trust remained valid because the company did not object to the title within the lease's stated time line and the company did not assign the lease to the other company, Northern Michigan Exploration Company. Therefore, Western Land Services is liable under the lease agreement to make bonus payments promised in the contract, the court ruled.

The oil and gas boom in 2010 skyrocketed after an exploratory natural gas well in Missaukee County sparked keen interest among energy companies. State officials sold record numbers of mineral leases — $178 million worth in one May 2010 auction — and representatives from prospecting companies signed widespread private leases across the region, including some in Charlevoix, Emmet, Antrim and Kalkaska counties, among other places.

The flurry of lease activity came in anticipation of what new horizontal drilling and hydrologic fracturing techniques can find and extract from the Utica Shale, a formation beneath much of the region.

Shortly after many property owners signed the leases and filed the documents with registers of deeds, they began to receive notification that their lease agreements would be voided, sometimes because they had mortgages or liens on their property, but other times because of misspelled words or other technicalities.

Many angry property owners said they intended to sue Chesapeake Energy Corp., along with Michigan companies Northern Michigan Exploration Company and Western Land Services, among others. Some followed through on their threats, including the Ingalls.

Kevin Koonce, a former landman for a Traverse City-based energy company, previously said in an interview for The Leader and Kalkaskian newspaper that the companies involved in this alleged scheme intentionally prevented competition for the mineral leases by overpaying for them with no intention to honor the contracts.

Topp and attorney William Rolinski, of Gaylord, represented the Ingalls Trust in the case, one of 115 lawsuits filed in six counties for breach of oil and gas leases. Defendants in the cases include Western Land Services, Northern Michigan Exploration Company, Chesapeake Energy Corp., RedSky Land, O.I.L. Niagaran and Silver Lake Energy.

board of commissioners has agreed to the proposed contract.

Janik, who was born and raised in Leelanau County, said he has 32 years in the educational system, which means he could retire and take on a second career.

"He currently owns a home in Leelanau County, but lives and works in Charlevoix.

Janik has been the district's superintendent since June of 2007. In November of 2010 he was one of four finalists for the superintendent's position at Kingsley Public Schools, but he was ultimately not offered the position. In March, 2011, the Charlevoix school board extended Janik's contract to run through the 2013-14 school year.

the donations.

So, that Sunday — which was Molly's actually birthday — when the congregation sang "Happy Birthday" to Molly she and her mom threw out a challenge: If 45 kids can collect nearly 300 items at one party, how long would it take the congregation to match the feat?

The answer: About two Sundays.

In that time the congregation collected 301 food items to be donated Charlevoix Community Food Pantry, which is conveniently housed in the lower level of the First Congregational Church.

Meg said it was inspiring to see not only how much enjoyment Molly and the kids seemed to take from making the contributions, but also how quickly the congregation also jumped on board.

"We all know these needs are always out there. Sometimes people just need to be reminded of it."

FERRY

thority has applied for several state and federal grants, but so far hasn't been awarded any money toward the estimated $8.5 million cost to construct the new vessel.

Established in 1993, the authority took delivery of the Emerald Isle in 1997 and entered into a 30-year agreement with the Beaver Island Boat Company to operate the vessel (along with its own vessel, the Beaver Islander) between the island and Charlevoix.

Using money from its per-gallon gasoline tax, the state pays Beaver Island Transportation Authority for 50 percent of the cost to operate the Emerald Isle and 90 percent of any needed capital improvement to the vessel or its dock on Beaver Island.

Although the ferry system's workhorse, The Emerald Isle, still likely has many decades of service life left in her, the Beaver Islander — which serves as the backup vessel and handles additional runs during the busy summer season — is no spring chicken.

In fact, Beaver Island Boat Company will be celebrating the vessel's 50th year of service this year.

Both Schwartzfisher and Beaver Island Boat Company president Margo Marks said the Beaver Islander is still in great working order and likely has many years of service left in her.

However, given her age, it is simply cost prohibitive to make any modernization upgrades, especially considering the many accessibility, environmental and other regulations that must be met, Schwartzfisher said.

She said the information posted on the Marine Log site about the proposed specifications of the new boat's design are accurate: A 150-foot steel ferry which can carry up to 150 passengers and 24 vehicles, powered by two geared diesel engines of approximately 1,500 horsepower each with fixed pitch propellers. The vessel will have a design speed of 13.5 knots, a beam of 42 feet and a hull depth of 15 feet. But she emphasized, that these are just starting points for the design, exact specifications will be worked out as the project moves forward.

Schwartzfisher noted that one of the main goals of the design will be fuel efficiency — likely to be accomplished, in part by a hull design and newer engines.

She said in addition to improving operational efficiency, the other main design goal will be to further enhance the travel experience for passengers on the 2.5 hour crossing by offering wireless Internet and making the boat quieter and more comfortable.

"The design will meet accessibility guidelines for passenger vessels and feature an enclosed car deck arranged to handle loose cargo such as dry goods, groceries, and other necessities for daily life on the island," Elliott Bay officials said in the press release.

It's all part of a plan to sustain the ferry system to the island long into the future by keeping costs down and ridership up, Schwartzfisher said.

She noted that working toward the goal of a new ferry is exciting, but for some, it comes with mixed emotions at the thought of saying goodbye to the Beaver Islander.

"The Beaver Islander is near and dear to people's heart," Marks said. "It was build 50 years ago for the island so there are a lot of emotions attached to it."

The good news for the sentimental sort, is that it will probably be several years before that bon voyage happens.

Schwartzfisher said it's hard to tell how long it will take the transportation authority to get the grants lined up to pay for the new ferry, and once that happens it will likely be another 18 to 24 months before the new ferry is completed.

Charlevoix's Sydney Carlson (12) drives past towards the basket past Elk Rapids' Brittney Trout in the Rayders' game against the Elks Friday, on Feb. 10.

Turning it around

Girls end eight-game skid, win three of last four

After struggling through losing eight games in a row earlier in the season, the Charlevoix Rayder girls varsity basketball team has found its way back into the "win" column.

On Tuesday the Lady Rayders traveled to East Jordan where Kelsey Way scored 24 points and grabbed 17 rebounds, and Jenna Way added 12 points and five boards as Charlevoix topped the Red Devils, 51-44, in a Lake Michigan Conference game.

The win was Charlevoix's third in its last four starts. The Rayders improved to 6-11 overall, 4-8 league, and avenged a 58-47 loss to the Red Devils on Jan. 10.

"We played with tremendous intensity tonight," Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman said. "With Kelsey (Way) leading by playing hard and finishing, we put forth a great effort."

Way scored 19 of her points in the first half, after which Charlevoix led, 31-30. The Rayder lead was three, 44-41, after three quarters.

"I thought the Key for us was our intensity on defense and picking apart their full court press right from the get go," Hoffman said.

Valerie Peters scored 12 points and Brianna Newberry added 10 for East Jordan, which saw its four-game win streak come to an end. The Red Devils are 12-5, 7-4.

"We could not put the ball in the basket," East Jordan coach Steve Hines said. "They contested every shot we took tonight."

Tuesday's win was a continuation of the strong showing the Rayders made at home against Elk Rapids on Friday, Feb. 10, handing the Elks a 53-41 conference defeat.

Jenna Way scored 17 points to lead the winning effort while and Maddie Boss added 16 and Kelsey Way had 10 points for the Rayders.

"It was a good team win for us tonight," Hoffman said. "Everyone on the floor, gave us good minutes."

Charlevoix outscored the Elks, 18-8, in the second quarter to seize a 24-12 halftime lead. After three quarters, the Rayder lead was 40-19.

"We turned up the pressure and forced them to make some turnovers in the second (quarter)," Hoffman said.

Celsey Wait and Alex Dart each scored nine points each for Elk Rapids whose record fell to, 9-7 overall and 5-5 in the conference.

The Lady Rayders will be back in action on Friday, Feb. 17 when they host Harbor Springs and on Tuesday, Feb. 21 they travel to Grayling. Game time for both contests is 6 p.m.

BOYS VARSITY BASKETBALL

Rayders fall to Elks, bounce back over Red Devils

The Charlevoix Rayder boys varsity basketball team roared back in a big way Tuesday after suffering a tough loss on Friday, Feb. 10.

Andrew Potter scored 18 points, Andrew Plude had 17, and Josh Hogan added 11 as Charlevoix rebounded from Friday's tough loss with an 84-57 Lake Michigan Conference win Tuesday over East Jordan.

Junior guard Tanner Catt dished out 10 assists for Charlevoix, and Sawyer Russell grabbed eight rebounds.

"Proud of the guys to bounce back," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood, whose team dropped a 68-55 league game to Elk Rapids on Friday, a loss that ended the Rayders' three-game win streak. "Tough night on Friday. We really got up and down (against East Jordan) and kept our pressure up. The guys did a good job of maintaining that throughout the game."

Plude and Potter scored nine points apiece in the second quarter, during which the Rayders outscored East Jordan, 29-15, to take a 45-25 halftime lead.

With the win the Rayders improve to 6-5 in the conference (tied for third with Boyne City) and 10-6 overall.

John Richards hit seven 3-pointers in scoring 25 points to lead the Red Devils, 3-13, 1-10.

The Rayders appeared to overcome the defensive breakdowns that played a part in their 68-55 loss to Elk Rapids on Friday, Feb. 10.

Elk Rapids was led by Luke Morrison who scored 28 points, Phillip Hayes had 15, and Austin McMullen added 13 as the Elks snapped Charlevoix's three-game win streak.

Elk Rapids improved to 9-4 overall, 7-3 league. The Rayders slipped to 9-6, 5-5.

Charlie Hamilton scored 16 points to lead Charlevoix, while Andrew Potter had 14 points and nine rebounds, and Tanner Catt added 11 points.

Down 12-11 entering the second quarter, Elk Rapids outscored the Rayders, 24-13, in the second for a 36-24 halftime lead. The Elks' lead remained 12 points, 49-37, after three quarters.

"We broke down defensively in the second quarter," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "We allowed Morrison into the paint, and he was able to create a lot of offense for them."

The Rayders will be back in action on Friday, Feb. 17 when they host Harbor Springs and again on Tuesday, Feb. 21 when they host Grayling. Game time for both contests is 7:30 p.m.

GIRLS JV BASKETBALL

JV stays strong, wins two more

The Charlevoix Rayder Junior Varsity girls basketball team continued its winning ways over the past week, racking up two more wins over Lake Michigan Conference foes.

On Tuesday, the Lady Rayders hung on to earn a 55-53 victory over East Jordan in a game that stayed nip-and-tuck throughout.

By the end of the first quarter the Rayders had fallen behind 13-8, but by halftime had tied the score at 23-all. The Red Devils pulled ahead again clinging to a 41-38 at the end of the third quarter. But the Rayder's rallied in the fourth to pull out the 2-point win.

With the win, the JV squad's record improves to 12-5 overall and 10-1 in the Lake Michigan Conference.

Jennaca Holecheck led the Rayder scoring attack with 18 points while, Gloria Greene put in 10 and Kourtney Putman added 8.

Head JV coach Todd Klinger pointed to the play of Ellie Way who played the full 32 minutes and controlled the tempo of the game from her point guard position.

"She did a nice of leading the team both on offense and defensive," Klinger said.

"The girls played hard and had to battle back to earn this win," he said. "This was a very exciting back and forth game. The lead changed hands many times, but at the end of the fourth quarter, we made enough plays to pull out the win.

The Rayders had an easier time posting a 54-41 win over Elk Rapids on Thursday, Feb. 9.

In that game, Charlevoix jumped out to a 13-9 by the end of the first quarter and had increased their lead to 26-15 by halftime. By the end of the third quarter the lead had grown slightly to 39-27.

Holecheck again lead the Rayders in scoring with 18, followed by Putman and Kelsey Pischner who added 12 each, and Olivia Storm added 6.

"This was probably our most consistent game where we controlled the tempo from the start," Klinger said. We were able to get a 10 point lead in the 2nd quarter and we sustained that lead through the rest of the game. Every girl gave a great effort when they were in the game."

FRESHMAN BASKETBALL

Rayder freshmen defeat Elks 47-31

The Charlevoix Rayder freshmen boys basketball team notched another win, defeating Elk Rapids 41-37 on Friday, Feb. 10.

The Rayders jumped out to a 10-6 lead by the end of the first quarter and extended their lead to 19-11 by halftime. Charlevoix came out strong in the third quarter stretching their lead to 37-20 and the Elks could never get within striking distance.

Will Telgenhof again led the Rayder scoring attack with 12 points, while Ke'nen Boorth had 10, Ryan Joy added 8 and Bryan Noirot had 7.

"We got off to a rather slow start offensively, and I give Elk Rapids a lot of the credit for that," Rayder freshman coach Joe Solomon said. "They were very aggressive on the defensive end and limited what we were able to do in the first half. We made a better effort to attack the basket in the second half and it paid off. Ke'nen Booths and Bryan Noirot having good offensive production was key as it took some of the scoring pressure off Will and Ryan and Andrew Michaud continues to be a key to our team on the defensive end."

The freshman team will be back in action when they host Harbor Springs at 6 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 17 and again on Tuesday, Feb. 21 when they host Grayling, also at 6 p.m.

WRESTLING

Two Rayders qualify for regionals

Two Rayder wrestlers were among six from the area who placed in the top four in the top four in their respective weight classes Saturday at individual district tournaments.

Those six advance to the individual regionals on Saturday, Feb. 18.

Jake Novotny and Mark Durkee of Charlevoix, along with Jon Calo of Boyne City, each placed in the top in the Division IV district at Munising High School and will partake in the regional at Manton High School.

Petoskey's Cody Hallworth, Nick Strobel and Dylan Bechaz each placed fourth at the Division II district at Gaylord High School and will wrestle in the regional at Mount Pleasant High School.

The Rayders' Novotny and Durkee placed third at 140 and 171, respectively, while Boyne's Calo finished fourth at 160 at Munising.

Novotny, a sophomore who was seeded third, opened with a pin in 1:44 of Matthew Johnson of Munising. He then lost to second-seeded Jim Ritzenheim of Iron Mountain, 7-0.

Novotny came back to beat Austin Bober of Rogers City, 1-0, then defeated Ishpeming's Jordan Tousignant, 6-2, in the third-place match.

It is the second straight year that Novotny has qualified for the regional. He made it last year at 130.

Durkee, a senior, was unseeded. He opened with a pin in 4:46 of Henry Cohn of Munising, then was pinned by Onaway's Bryer McGinn in 51 seconds.

Durkee came back to pin Eric Tracey of Mancelona in 2:20, avenging a 13-2 loss he had suffered to Tracey three nights earlier in the team district tournament.

Durkee then defeated Kirk Edmark of Ishpeming Westwood, 7-5, in the third-place match.

Also for Charlevoix, Austin Cesaro went 2-2 at 1-3; Sam Hovie finished 1-2 at 145; and Spencer Bruce was 0-1 at 189.

Calo opened with a pin in 3:03 of Jarret Brow of Newberry, then defeated Corey Mann of Iron River West Iron County, 11-6, to reach the semifinals.

Trey Leach of Onaway pinned Calo in 5:27, dropping the Rambler into the consolation bracket.

There, Calo took a 13-9 decision from Josiah Waitrovich of Iron Mountain and had a rematch with West Iron's Mann in the third-place match. This time, Mann prevailed, 9-4.

FRESHMAN BASKETBALL

Rayder freshmen defeat Elks 47-31

The Charlevoix Rayder freshmen boys basketball team notched another win, defeating Elk Rapids 41-37 on Friday, Feb. 10.

The Rayders jumped out to a 10-6 lead by the end of the first quarter and extended their lead to 19-11 by halftime. Charlevoix came out strong in the third quarter, stretching their lead to 37-20 and the Elks could never get within striking distance.

Will Telgenhof again led the Rayder scoring attack with 12 points, while Ke'nen Boorth had 10, Ryan Joy added 8 and Bryan Norrot had 7.

"We got off to a rather slow start offensively, and I give Elk Rapids a lot of the credit for that," Rayder freshman coach Joe Solomon said. "They were very aggressive on the defensive end and limited what we were able to do in the first half. We made a better effort to attack the basket in the second half and it paid off. Ke'nen Booths and Bryan Norrot having good offensive production was key as it took some of the scoring pressure off Will and Ryan and Andrew Michaud continues to be a key to our team on the defensive end."

The freshman team will be back in action when they host Harbor Springs at 6 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 17 and again on Tuesday, Feb. 21 when they host Grayling, also at 6 p.m.

WRESTLING

Two Rayders qualify for regionals

Two Rayder wrestlers were among six from the area who placed in the top four in the top four in their respective weight classes Saturday at individual district tournaments.

Those six advance to the individual regionals on Saturday, Feb. 18.

Jake Novotny and Mark Durkee of Charlevoix, along with Jon Calo of Boyne City, each placed in the top in the Division IV district at Munising High School and will partake in the regional at Manton High School.

Petoskey's Cody Hallsworth, Nick Strobel and Dylan Bechaz each placed fourth at the Division II district at Gaylord High School and will wrestle in the regional at Mount Pleasant High School.

The Rayders' Novotny and Durkee placed third at 140 and 171, respectively, while Boyne's Calo finished fourth at 160 at Munising.

Novotny, a sophomore who was seeded third, opened with a pin in 1:44 of Matthew Johnson of Munising. He then lost to second-seeded Jim Ritzenheim of Iron Mountain, 7-0.

Novotny came back to beat Austin Bober of Rogers City, 1-0, then defeated Ishpeming's Jordan Tousignant, 6-2, in the third-place match.

It is the second straight year that Novotny has qualified for the regional. He made it last year at 130.

Durkee, a senior, was unseeded. He opened with a pin in 4:46 of Henry Cobb of Munising, then was pinned by Onaway's Bryer McGinn in 51 seconds.

Durkee came back to pin Eric Fracey of Mancelona in 2:20, avenging a 13-2 loss he had suffered to Fracey three nights earlier in the team district tournament.

Durkee then defeated Kirk Edmark of Ishpeming Westwood, 7-5, in the third-place match.

Also for Charlevoix, Austin Cesaro went 2-2 at 1-3; Sam Hovie finished 1-2 at 145; and Spencer Bruce was 0-1 at 189.

Calo opened with a pin in 3:03 of Jarret Brow of Newberry, then defeated Corey Mann of Iron River West Iron County, 11-6, to reach the semifinals.

Trey Leach of Onaway pinned Calo in 5:27, dropping the Rambler into the consolation bracket.

There, Calo took a 13-9 decision from Josiah Waitrovich of Iron Mountain, and had a rematch with West Iron's Mann in the third-place match. This time, Mann prevailed, 9-4.

Charlevoix High School Presents 'Beauty and the Beast' March 3-4

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

The Charlevoix High School Performing Arts Program is making final preparations to serve up some time-honored and much-beloved entertainment on the school's stage when they present Disney's "Beauty and the Beast" next weekend.

Cast members are getting ready to take their audience into the enchanted world of Broadway's modern classic, based on the Academy-Award winning animated feature, the stage version includes all of the songs written by Alan Menken and the late Howard Ashman along with new songs by Menken and Tim Rice.

Performing arts program director Jodi Thompson said audiences will be transported to the heart of provincial life in a lovely French town. When Maurice becomes lost in the woods on the way to the fair, he seeks shelter in an old castle, but the master of the castle is a horrible beast that takes him captive. Maurice's daughter, Belle, must then give up her freedom to save his life. Belle's taming of the unfortunate Beast and his ultimate transformation back into a handsome prince enthralled Broadway audiences for more than 13 years.

Thompson said she picked the show because she has long been a fan of it, the students were interested in doing it and, she thought it would be a good fit for the students who would be in the program this year.

She also has a personal connection to the show.

"When I sang in the Opera Grand Rapids chorus, I had the opportunity to perform on stage with Richard White, the voice of Gaston in the Disney movie of "Beauty and the Beast." Richard played the role of the Pirate King. He autographed my Beauty and the Beast video cover," Thompson said.

Thompson said, for her, the show is full of favorite moments. Some of them include: Gaston's "Me" song, the Castle Cast scenes, Be Our Guest, the Beast's finale song in Act One "If I Can't Love Her," and the theme song "Beauty and the Beast."

She said a favorite scene among the cast is the fight scene between the villagers and the castle characters

Charlevoix superintendent leaving in May for Leelanau job

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

Charlevoix Public Schools Superintendent Chet Janik made it official on Wednesday that he will be accepting a recent offer by the Leelanau County Board of Commissioners to serve as its county administrator.

Janik made the announcement in an email he sent out to district staff after the county agreed on Tuesday to the terms in Janik's contract proposal.

He said he expects to make the move into his new position — and a new phase of his life — in the first week of May.

Janik

When that day comes, Janik, who by then will have served as the district's superintendent for almost exactly five years, will be retiring from 32 years in education.

Born in Poland, Janik emigrated to Cedar with his family in 1961 at the age of 5. He grew up in Leelanau County and still has a home and family there.

From 1980 to 2001 he worked in various administrative positions with Northwestern Michigan College. From 2001 to 2004 he worked at the Traverse Bay Intermediate School District and from 2004 until he came to Charlevoix in May of 2007 he served as the superintendent at Buckley Schools.

Janik said Wednesday, that he's excited about this next chapter in his life — which he views as a bit of a homecoming. But, he said he will miss many of the people — especially the school staff — he's come to know over the past five years.

Man flees police

Chase leads authorities to alleged jewelry thief

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

Police got much more than they bargained for when they caught up to a fleeing shoplifting suspect Wednesday.

Shortly before 11 a.m. Charlevoix police officers were called to the Glen's Market at the corner of U.S. 31 and M-66 to a report of a young male shoplifter in the store.

Before police arrived, word came from the store that the suspect had fled on foot to the north. Police and sheriff's deputies converged on the area and began searching for the suspect. For about 10 minutes the suspect tried to elude police by running through yards and jumping fences, but officers finally nabbed the man in a yard near the intersection of Meadow Lane and East Garfield Avenue.

Charlevoix Police Chief Gerard Doan said as officers took the man into custody, they searched the backpack he was wearing and, instead of items from Glen's, they found numerous Pandora jewelry items inside.

Golovich

After a brief investigation, police were able to connect the jewelry in the suspect's backpack to a break-in that took place several hours earlier at the J. Phillips Store at 317 Bridge St. in downtown Charlevoix.

Police believe the break-in took place around 6 a.m. during which numerous Pandora items were stolen.

Doan declined to elaborate on exactly how many items were stolen or their value. He said it's unclear if all of the stolen items were recovered from the suspect's backpack.

Police arrested the would-be shoplifter, and by late afternoon the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's office authorized charges of breaking and entering with intent commit a felony and possession of burglar's tools, both 10-year felonies against Matthew Craig Golovich, 20, of Charlevoix. Golovich's bond was set at $10,000 and he remained lodged at the Charlevoix County Jail late Wednesday.

Doan said the case is still under investigation and asks anyone who may have seen anything suspicious in the area of the J. Phillips store early Wednesday to call the Charlevoix Police Department at (231) 547-3258.

Plea deal pending in embezzlement case

Former St. Mary's school principal would pay $75,000 in restitution

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

The end of a long and difficult legal battle involving a Charlevoix church and its school's former principal may be in sight.

On Friday, March 9, former St. Mary School principal Keisha Veryser of Hayes Township, is scheduled to take advantage of a plea agreement with the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's office in which she will plead guilty to two counts of embezzlement from a non-profit organization, $1,000-$20,000. The charges are felonies that carry a maximum penalty of up to 10 years in prison. In exchange for her pleas, three more identical charges and two counts of perjury in a non-court proceeding will be dismissed.

Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney John Jarema said another condition of the plea agreement is that Veryser agrees to pay $75,000 in restitution, with half of that amount to be paid up front and the rest to be paid over the course of her upcoming probation.

The charges stem from Veryser's employment as principal at St. Mary School from Aug. 1, 2006-March 17, 2010.

According to court files, in March of 2010 Diocese of Gaylord officials asked Veryser to resign after they said they had discovered that she had been misappropriating funds for her own use.

Veryser resigned but in October of that year, she filed a lawsuit against the Diocese claiming she had been wrongfully discharged from her position. Veryser claimed that she was being made the scapegoat for shoddy bookkeeping practices that existed long before she took the principal's job. The Diocese not only denied Veryser's claims in its answer, but also counter-sued her for repayment of the money.

Veryser

Around the same time, the Michigan State Police began a criminal investigation into the matter. The state police handled the investigation at the request of Charlevoix Police Chief Gerard Doan who is a member at St. Mary.

After an 18-month investigation, the criminal charges against Veryser were issued on Oct. 31. Veryser turned herself in the following day and she has been free on a personal recognizance bond since.

In all, in court documents, police say Veryser embezzled more than $100,000 from the school.

The perjury charges stemmed from allegedly untruthful sworn statements Veryser made during depositions taken as part of civil suits.

Jarema said the officials with the Diocese of Gaylord were supportive of the plea agreement.

He noted that although the charges to which she is expected to plead guilty are felonies, she likely will not face state prison time because of how the case scores in state sentencing guidelines. She still could be sentenced to serve time in the county jail.

Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard M. Pajtas has recused himself of both the civil and the criminal cases because he, too, is a member at St. Mary.

If the plea takes place as planned, it, and the subsequent sentencing will be handled by Otsego County Circuit Court Judge Dennis Murphy.

Jarema said the plea may also bring closure to the civil cases pending between Veryser and the Diocese. The case has been slated for a jury trial in April for some time, but the court file has seen little recent activity. In August, Chehoygan County Circuit Court Judge granted a motion to dismiss the charges in Veryser's suit.

Tax help at library

Through a partnership with the Northwest Community Action Agency, a certified tax preparation volunteer will be available for free at the Charlevoix Public Library, by appointment, on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, and Sunday afternoons for low income households. To make an appointment and get a list of items needed to bring for filing, call (231) 237-7340.

The library is also offering basic state and federal tax forms for pickup in the main hall near the check-out desk. Reproducible books of all the tax forms are also available. Every computer at the library has links on the desktops to state and federal tax forms that are not available to pick up. Also, Turbo Tax software is loaded on the Michigan Room Computer for patrons to utilize. Patrons should come prepared with all tax information. Forms can be filled out, saved, and printed from this computer, but E-file is not available, so bring a flash drive to save the forms.

Public comments received on state grant applications

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix County commissioners accepted public input Wednesday about two potential state grant applications that could be submitted by April.

The board held a public hearing at the start of its meeting at the county building in Charlevoix, specific to Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund grant applications to purchase about 72 acres adjacent to the existing Whiting Park, as well as an extension to the Boyne City-Charlevoix non-motorized recreational trail. Commissioners are expected to consider whether to submit the grant applications at their next meeting in March.

Paul Hoadley, Hayes Township assessor, said he believes he knows a way to circumvent controversy about where to develop the trail along the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road right-of-way, at least where the homes are especially close to the highway. He suggested the trail divert westward down Quarterline Road to near the Lake Charlevoix shoreline, where it could skirt around the lake's edge and reconnect to the highway further north.

"I do favor the idea. I think it's an asset to have these kinds of trails," Hoadley said.

He added that he understands not everyone wants such a trail running past the front of their home.

Resident Nancy LaCroix said she remains concerned about where the trail will connect to the Little Traverse Wheelway along U.S. 31. She believes the intersection between that federal highway and the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road is far too busy for a safe trail crossing there, she said.

Commissioner Shirlene Tripp, of Hayes Township, who sits on the county's parks committee, said the current conceptual plans are just that — conceptual. More details about road crossings and exact routes will be sorted out in the future, she said.

"We're looking at all the options," Tripp said.

Dennis Jason, chairman of the county's planning commission, said the trail will benefit the local economy's important tourism sector and he favors the county making a local match to the grant, if needed.

"A trail system is an integral part of that economic development," Jason said.

Commissioner Chris Christensen, of Boyne City, said he wants the county to hold a second public hearing on the grant application for the trail extension because the current documentation doesn't specify whether a local match is required, how much that would be and if the county must foot that bill. His fellow commissioners agreed and a second public hearing on that grant application will be at next month's first meeting.

Others at this week's session spoke about the available property that could be acquired to expand the existing Whiting Park along Lake Charlevoix's southern shoreline, northwest of Advance.

Ross Maxwell, county parks and recreation director, said he is excited about the opportunities for trails and other recreation, should the Butler Trust property adjacent to Whiting Park be purchased as a park addition.

"There is an absolutely beautiful view from here, but I don't want to sound like a realtor," Maxwell said.

Richard Fish, chairman of the county's commission on aging board, said he thinks an independent forester should look at that tract to determine the timber value, should the county acquire the property. Some of the timber could be sold without a negative impact to the site's recreation opportunities, Fish said.

Commissioners will consider resolutions on March 14 to authorize the state grant applications to be submitted.

News-Review, county await lawsuit decision

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Both Charlevoix County and the Petoskey News-Review must now wait for a judge's decision on whether county officials may continue to withhold emails sought by the newspaper under the Michigan Freedom of Information Act.

Judge Charles Johnson, of the 57th Circuit Court, listened Tuesday afternoon to oral arguments from the county's civil defense attorney Gretchen Olsen, of Petoskey, as well as the newspaper's plaintiff attorney, Robin Luce Herrmann, of Bloomfield Hills. Johnson took their arguments under advisement and said he will issue a written opinion "as quickly as possible."

Johnson

In August last year, the newspaper filed a lawsuit against the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners and the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's Office. The civil complaint alleged three violations of the state's Freedom of Information Act, following a freedom of information fight that carried on for several months.

Christensen

The News-Review's suit seeks to compel county officials to release emails Charlevoix County prosecutor John Jarema previously refused to reveal between himself and Chris Christensen, a county commissioner. The newspaper contends some of Jarema's actions were "arbitrary and capricious."

Jarema

At issue are six emails between Jarema and Christensen, including four to do with available real estate, as well as one about a criminal embezzlement investigation. The sixth and final email was sent from Christensen to county board chairman Joel Evans about his concerns with a fellow county commissioner, a message also copied to Jarema, according to court documents.

Olsen argued the first four emails aren't public records and the other two are, but are exempted from public disclosure under state law. She said after Tuesday's hearing she believes Johnson will at least side with the county on the first four emails in question, those to do with real estate listings.

"I think that both sides would say we have an excellent judge and he will review the statute, case law and submissions and will render a decision he believes is appropriate based on those documents," Olsen said.

Luce Herrmann said both she and newspaper officials also are eager for Johnson's written order.

"We look forward to a decision by the court," she said.

Southern trip yields new furry friend

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

Who knew it would be such a warm winter in Northern Michigan. More sun, fewer worries about breaking a hip and walking on sand instead of ice along the lakeshore. I have to admit, I do miss the caverns and caves nature creates when frosty waves pummel the shore. The icy blue, frozen creations twisted into wondrous shapes, delighting seagulls and the curious passerby. Wouldn't you know, dating this mild winter we had decided months earlier to leave Michigan and rent a home in the south like other snowbirds before us?

We also didn't know we would face a season of rain that would last so long and go on and on. We set out to entertain ourselves on yet another overcast day. We meandered onto Highway 188, a mile from Dauphin Island where we came upon a wooden structure showing signs of distress from years of hurricane winds and ocean salt spray. The sign hanging out front was large compared to the size of the structure and its listing porch. Printed in bold red letters was "Mary's" and the words "fresh fish daily" were scrawled underneath.

It was Sunday afternoon and members from the First Baptist Church started filling in the seats of this earthy haven just as they had hours earlier for church service. By the time they finished their meal the Church of Christ opened its doors and again another group arrived in their Sunday finest, this time with a preacher who strutted like a rooster with his slicked back hair, black suit, matching black shirt and shiny shoes. As he walked by I couldn't help but notice his face, catching the glare from a single light bulb revealing his powdered face and finely tweezed brow. Mary's place was singing with laughter as everyone enjoyed the camaraderie and the Sunday buffet special: fried oysters, fried clams, fried crab, served with French fries and a fried dill pickle and to quench your thirst a tall sweet tea. I felt my arteries shift. I passed on the buffet as my palate and small intestines yearned to savor fresh shrimp gumbo.

The trip in and around the southern states was a breeze directional-wise. Our trusty GPS became a good friend after reaching mile 1,000 and we found ourselves talking to her like an old friend. "Shh-hh," I'd say when I wanted to hear the words to a song and telling her it was time for her to nap when we stopped and took a rest ourselves. Now, wouldn't it be nice if we could make a portable system attaching it to our belt, purse or necklace to guide us directionally when it comes to saying the right thing. I have time to ponder things like this when it's been overcast for a week.

It's interesting to observe our behavior barometer that's reflected in the weather. It was 21 years ago when we vacationed as a family in Fort Lauderdale where, on the fifth day of no sun and plenty of moisture, we took the leap and purchased our infamous dalmatian. Well, here we are again, grieving the recent loss of our beloved golden retriever and it's an overcast and rainy. Yes, isn't wasn't long before we were checking out the local rescued dogs that were displaced because of financial losses and storms that swept the area. Feeling a bit BradJolina we visited depressed areas of the bayous for the day.

Another day passed and still no furry friend to add to the family. Then it happened: A classified ad looking for someone to purchase a puppy that was in need of a home. I called. Her delightful Hispanic accent was lilting and sweet. "Yes," she said "Please stop in tomorrow." Our emotions moved from excitement to nervous when we arrived to see makeshift shanties, mobile homes on cement blocks and very few address numbers to guide us. We opened our window and listened for barking dogs. This was it, the site where a variety of canines behind fences asked for our attention. Their caregiver was kind and loving, caring for dogs as a mother loves her children. It was later we realized that individuals in this part of the city had been displaced by the last three hurricanes. This village of caring people loved their animals and wanted to find them loving homes. It was here we met Higgins, a three-month-old cavalier King Charles spaniel. He sat happily wagging his tail behind a gate that posted a cardboard picture of a golden retriever from a dog food ad but to us, a sign that this destination was part of the plan all along.

CHARLEVOIX HISTORICAL SOCIETY

LOOKING BACK…

In 1892, the Charlevoix Summer Home Association (which changed its name to Belvedere Club in 1923) lobbied the Chicago & West Michigan Railroad to place its new train station on association land because the resort had given permission for the tracks to cross its Lake Charlevoix shoreline property along Ferry Avenue. But the railroad decided to build on the north side of the upper channel instead. It promised the association it would provide a separate station for the resort's sole use so resorters would not be inconvenienced by the almost two-mile trip around Round Lake. The building was up and ready for use just a few weeks after the main station was finished (and still at Depot Beach). The Belvedere station was a totally different design. One story high, with one long pillared portico, its freight and waiting room occupied less than one half the area of the covered portico. Why this large outdoor area was thought to be necessary for a terminal that served so little traffic has never been determined. The station burned in 1931, the fire thought to have been ignited by embers flying from a passing train. But the true cause was never determined, and the station was not rebuilt.

Fresh off the griddle:

Flap Jack turns out a new concept in their traditional fare

Mark Lindsay
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

A longtime dining favorite among Charlevoix locals, Flap Jack Family Restaurant, has put a fresh face on an old standard with its new bakery counter.

Although the restaurant has offered baked goods before in its more than 20-year history, the new Cakes N More Bakery counter is an entirely new venture. According to Deb Marsh, a 20-year employee of the restaurant, diners have responded very well.

"We've always offered desserts, but now we have fresh baked pies, cookies and cupcakes," Marsh noted.

When Sherry Bender and her husband first opened the Charlevoix location of Flap Jack they tried offering baked goods, but eventually discontinued them, according to Marsh. It wasn't until Bender got together with her staff recently, looking for new ideas, that the bakery idea was revisited.

"We really wanted something that would appeal to our regulars as well as the tourist customers," Marsh said.

One thing Flap Jack has is regular diners. Walking in to the restaurant is enough to prove that, as you see the row of coffee mugs hanging on the wall, each with a name on it.

"We even had one of our regulars build and hang the rack for the mugs," Marsh noted. "Another regular customer built some of our shelving in the new bakery area also."

In addition to the new bakery counter, the owners have done some other upgrades and improvements including fresh paint and decoration. The staff also decorates the restaurant in seasonal themes.

"We all get involved and have fun doing these things," Marsh said.

The restaurant also offers a separate meeting room, that can be reserved for groups and events. The room has a large capacity and can be set up for wedding parties, business meetings and most any gathering.

"We have a lot of regular meetings from groups like the Rotary, to other social groups," Marsh said.

The staff at the restaurant is made up of many long-term employees, from Marsh's 20 years to several of the waitstaff and managers with more than 15 years there.

"We have a good team that's more like a family," Marsh said, adding that she believes part of their success is because of that longevity and teamwork.

Flap Jack offers many types of food and primarily their namesake, pancakes. They offer monthly themed pancakes of different flavors in addition to their regular menu selection.

"We try to do a lot of monthly specials that go with the seasons and what fresh produce is available locally," Marsh noted. This carries over from the regular menu into their bakery as well.

This month the theme at Flap Jack is "We Love Our Customers."

"Our regulars as well as first-time visitors enjoy our specials and our regular features like the senior menu or the all-you-can-eat fish on Fridays," Marsh noted.

The Flap Jack Shack is located 102 W. Carpenter St. in downtown Charlevoix and is open 6 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 7 a.m.-2 p.m. Sunday.

Bay Winds opens new Boyne City branch

Bay Winds Federal Credit Union has recently opened its newly constructed branch in Boyne City at 308 N. Lake St.

This all new full service branch features two drive-thru lanes as well as a drive-thru ATM.

Credit union officials said in an effort to give members the most personalized service possible, "the traditional teller line has been replaced with dialog stations, creating a side-by-side service environment that is more flexible, functional and member friendly."

"This approach to banking is a great way to provide the highest level of service without losing the personal touch Bay Winds is known for," Bay Winds president and CEO David Leusink said.

According to a credit union news release, the functional component of the dialog stations are the "cash recyclers," which count, sort and dispense cash, making transactions more accurate, more secure and faster. Organization officials said dialog banking provides the ideal mix of technological efficiency in a friendly environment that fosters dynamic customer service.

"We feel it optimizes the best of hi-tech and hi-touch," Lensink said.

Bay Winds Federal is a community chartered credit union open to residents who live and work in Grand Traverse, Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Cheboygan counties. It currently has more than 24,000 members, deposits in excess of $130 million with branches in Charlevoix, Petoskey, East Jordan, and Bellaire in addition to Boyne City.

McSauba to host Winterfest March 2-3

Mother Nature may not have been cooperative to many winter activities so far this season, but that isn't expected to stop the Charlevoix City Recreation Department and the Charlevoix Elks Lodge from hosting the second annual Winterfest celebration at Mount McSauba on Friday, March 2 and Saturday, March 3.

All proceeds from the event go to help pay off the debt on the snow groomer the city purchased a few years ago for Mount McSauba. In fact, city recreation director Teresa Hart said a winter like this one is a great example of why the groomer is so important for the city-owned ski area. She said without the groomer, this winter's weather would had a much bigger impact on recreation at Mount McSauba

"The snow's actually in really great shape," Hart said.

The same, unfortunately, can't be said for the ice rink, she said.

That isn't expected have an effect on many of the fun activities planned for Winterfest.

-Here are some highlights of the events that are planned:

— Cardboard sled building begins: The Groomer garage at the ski hill will be made available to begin building sleds from 5-9 p.m on Monday, Feb. 27, and Thursday, March 1, and from 6-9 p.m. on Friday, March 2. Organizers are seeking donations of the following materials: sturdy cardboard, duct tape, miscellaneous paint, and other sled construction materials. Drop off is from 5-9 p.m. on Monday and Thursday, from 6-9 on Friday and from noon-5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

— Registration for events begins at the ski hill from 6-9 p.m. on Friday, March 2, and beginning at 9:30 a.m. on Saturday, March 3

— Other events slated for Friday, March 2, include music on the deck from 6-9 p.m., bump-jumper practice from 8-8:30 p.m (Bump Jumpers will be available for sale starting Monday, Feb. 27 for $20; and flashlight parade skiing/snowboarding from top of big hill at 8:30 p.m

See cityofcharlevoix.org for event scedule.

Saturday's huge slate of events include Broom Ball (played on snow), longest drive with a tennis ball, human bowling ball, ski races, snowboard races, bump-jumper races, cardboard sled races, food will be available, live music, and more. The fee for all events is $5 per person. See the city's website at www.cityocharlevoix.org for a complete list of event times.

when the mob attacks the castle.

She said she's excited about the show for many reasons, among them are the leadership shown by her veteran cast members and some blossoming talent that's developed from other cast members.

"Matthew Whitley (Cogsworth) and Jason Jones (the Beast) are our senior performers this year and have led the cast with their maturity, talent and experience," Thompson said. "Alaska Dhaseleer has surprised me this year with her amazing voice and her growth as an actress as she has been working on her role as Belle — especially since this is her first lead role. Brandon Arp, playing the role of Gaston, has never performed a singing role before (He didn't think he could sing) and he has been doing a fabulous job. He even started taking voice lessons to help prepare him for this role."

Still, any musical is full of challenges, but "Beauty and the Beast" comes with some special costuming and prop hurdles.

"The biggest challenges have been coming up with all the costumes, props and set pieces for this show, and, where to put it all backstage," Thompson said. "Figuring out how to do the Beast transformation and the rose prop have been the most difficult. We're still working out the details on both of those challenges.

The Charlevoix High School Performing Arts Program will present "Beauty and the Beast" at 7 p.m. on Saturday, March 3 and 2 p.m. Sunday, March 4 at the Charlevoix High School auditorium. Tickets are $5 for students and $7 for adults and will be available at the door.

For those looking to get a sneak peek at some of the characters from the show and to help support the performing arts program at the same time, the cast will be hosting a Belle's Ball in the school's commons area and auditorium from 1-4 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 25.

During the event, little princesses and princes are invited to come meet, play games, eat, dance and make arts and crafts with their favorite "Beauty and the Beast" character. Admission is an $8 donation per child or $15 donation for two to support the production of "Beauty and the Beast."

to be associated with the Charlevoix Public Schools since 2007 and I have sincerely enjoyed working with all of you," he wrote in his email to the district staff. "There is absolutely no doubt in my mind that each and every one of you make our students your top priority on a daily basis. I have truly benefited personally and professionally from your wisdom, expertise and friendship."

Janik said he views his time in Charlevoix as a "best of times, worst of times" situation.

He pointed to the major budget issues that forced many staff layoffs and other cuts, especially in 2010, and long, difficult contract negotiations that started in 2008 and lasted more than a year.

But he said there were many highlights, too, including passing a technology, building, and transportation bond in 2008, the board completing two long-term strategic plans, and, ironically, the very amicable way the most recent contract negotiations took place earlier last year.

The school board has set a special meeting for 5 p.m. on Wednesday, Feb. 29, at the district's administration building. Janik said Wednesday, the meeting will be primarily a work session for the board to discuss how it wants to go about seeking a new superintendent. Preliminary discussions on the 2012-13 school year budget are also on the agenda, Janik said.

Search narrows for next Rayder gridiron coach

The search for the next person to take over the helm of the Charlevoix Rayder varsity football program is has been narrowed down and interviews are expected to start next week.

Charlevoix High School athletic director Brian Certa sai a five-member selection committee met on Saturday, Feb. 18, to review the 19 applicants for the varsity football coaching job at Charlevoix High School, vacated when Don Jess decided to step down from the position late last year.

Certa said the group of 19 consists of five applicants from out of state, several with college playing experience, numerous teaching degrees with highly certified teaching status, varsity head coaches, assistant coaches, numerous applicants coming from extremely successful high school programs, and some with college and professional coaching experience. He said applicants include those that have been inducted into the high school coaches hall of fame with experience turning programs into state championship contenders. One of the first tasks of the committee was to develop criteria for selecting the most qualified candidates to bring in for interviews.

Certa said the criteria the committee drafted to use for its search are: An individual who has the best coaching qualifications, leadership, great character, mentoring ability for other coaches, personal and professional integrity, success on and off the field, experience, stability, versatility for the school district, and a coach that values education.

"We believe these qualities will offer the best opportunity to guide our young players to become great men on and off the playing field while also boilding and guiding an entire coaching staff and community in supporting these efforts," Certa said.

The committee has narrowed the pool to six individuals with the hope of interviewing four or five people. Interviews are tentatively planned to be completed on March 1 and 2. The selection committee will then make recommendations to the administration and Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education.

Members of the selection committee include Certa, Tom Kernovic, retired athletic director from Ferris State University; Mark Snyder, former college football player, local real estate agent, member of the Rayder Gridiron Club and local youth coach; Scott Kelly, former varsity baseball coach, Charlevoix High School graduate and football player and executive director of BASES in Charlevoix, and Dr. Craig Boss, staff physician at Charlevoix Area Hospital, Charlevoix High School graduate, and football player from Charlevoix's undefeated team of 1977.

Rayders fall to Rams, defeat Vikings

The Charlevoix Rayder girls varsity basketball team struggled with early foul trouble contributing to a loss to Harbor Springs on Friday, Feb. 17, but then bounced back with a victory over Grayling on Tuesday

On Friday, the Rams came back from one-point halftime deficit to beat the Rayders 55-47.

Senior Elena Ongaro scored 18 of her career-high 26 points in the second half and finished with six assists as the Rams used a big second half in downing the Rayders in the Lake Michigan Conference game.

Harbor trailed, 24-23, at halftime, then outscored the Rayders, 32-23, in the second half to nail down the win, improving to 9-9 overall, 4-8 league.

"Elena took good care of the ball, particularily in the second half," said Harbor coach Jennifer Foley, whose team had lost six of its previous seven starts. "We had just three turnovers in the second half and it was such a good, focused team win. Winning on the road is also nice. We haven't played particularly well on the road.

"We didn't come in with an X's and O's game plan, we just wanted to make them react to what we were doing."

For Charlevoix, 6-12, 4-8, Jenna Way scored 13 points, Anna Way and Sydney Carlson added 12 apiece, and Kesley Way finished with eight.

"This was a tough one to swallow," Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman said. "We're not deep enough to get into foul trouble like we did and I've never seen so many jump balls in a game. It was hard to keep your momentum or get any type of flow going.

"It was foul trouble and we went into the locker room at halftime with three starters with three fouls. We didn't take care of the ball and didn't look to attack when we should have."

But on Tuesday, Charlevoix

Momentum from a 23-point victory over Harbor Springs on Friday, Feb. 17 wasn't enough to carry the Charlevoix Rayder varsity boys basketball team to a win over Grayling Tuesday.

On Friday, Charlie Hamilton scored 21 points, Andrew Plude added 11, and Coby Herriman grabbed 11 rebounds as the Rayders posted 77-54 a Lake Michigan Conference win over the Rams on Friday.

Peter Lauer scored a game-high, 23 points and Spencer Kloss added 19 to lead Harbor.

With the win, Charlevoix, which led, 39-28, at halftime, improved to 11-6 overall, 7-5 league. Harbor slipped to 6-11, 4-8

On Tuesday Charlevoix kept it close in the first quarter, but struggled to recover from a strong Viking second quarter as the Rayders fell to Grayling 61-54.

Tom Burrell scored 13 points and Riley Zigila added 12 for Grayling in the a Lake Michigan Conference loss.

Grayling, which improved to 14-4 overall, 10-3 league, led 16-13 after one quarter, then outscored the Rayders, 18-6, in the second for a 34-19 halftime lead. The Vikings led, 47-32, after three quarter. Steven Enos added 11 points for Grayling.

"Defensively we did a good job tonight," said Charlevoix coach Adam Wood, whose team slipped to 11-7, 7-6. "We shut down their leading scorer (Zane Tobin). Offensively, we had some good looks, we just could not get the shot to go down.

"They were working hard for second shots and running the ball well in the second quarter."

Andrew Plude scored 13 points and Tanner Catt added 12 to lead the Rayders.

Charlevoix will travel to Traverse City St. Francis on Friday, Feb. 24 and then will wrap up the regular season with a non-conference game in Cheboygan on Tuesday.

See next week's edition of the Courier for a preview of the upcoming Class C district basketball tournament. The Rayders have drawn a bye for the first round, which means they will face the winner of a Boyne City-East Jordan matchup at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 7 on their home court

Rayders notch two more wins

The Charlevoix Rayder girls junior varsity basketball team improved its record to 14-5 over the past week with victories over conference foes Grayling and Harbor Springs.

On Thursday, Feb. 16 the JV squad traveled to Harbor Springs where they defeated the Rams 44-37.

The Rayder jumped out to a big lead early posting a 23-0 first quarter shutout. The Rams got on the board in the second quarter, but the Rayders still took a 23-12 advantage into halftime. Charlevoix was able to keep the lead at 11 points, 34-23 at the end of the third. The Rams battled back in the fourth but could only get within 7 points by game's end.

Jennaca Holecheck and Maggie Hamilton led the Rayders in scoring with 10 points each while Olivia Storm added 8.

"We started pretty well by shutting them out in the first quarter," JV head coach Todd Klinger said. "Harbor kept playing hard, but our girls were able stay in control and hold on to win the game."

On Tuesday, the Rayders traveled to Grayling, where they defeated the Vikings, 54-36.

Charlevoix again jumped out to an early lead, 14-7 at the end of the first quarter. The Rayders increased the lead to 9 by the half when they lead 28-19. The Rayders began to extend their lead, posting an 39-25 margin by the end of the third.

Jennaca Holecheck led the Rayder scoring attack with 19, while Kourtney Putnan, and Hamilton had 8 each.

Klinger noted that Jennifer Archery came in off the bench and was "very active on both ends of the court."

"She had some big steals and big baskets that helped us take total control of the game," he said.

"The last few weeks, the girls have been playing good team basketball. I am proud of all of them for working hard and doing the right things to get better," Klinger added.

The JV team will wrap up its season with a game against Traverse City St. Francis at home at 6 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 23.

JV falls to Harbor in OT, avenges loss to Grayling

STEVE ZUCKER/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Charlevoix's Nick Plude (43) puts up a three-pointer in the first half of the Rayder JV's home game.

It was an emotional week for the Charlevoix Rayder boys junior varsity basketball team.

First they fell just a point short in a 55-54 overtime loss to Harbor Springs on Thursday, Feb. 16 and then the avenged an early-season 15-point loss to Grayling, defeating the Vikings 62-50 on Tuesday.

On Thursday, Feb. 16 the Rayders found themselves in foul trouble early. The Rams jumped out to a 11-5 lead by the end of the first quarter, but Charlevoix closed the deficit to 19-16 by the half. In the third, the Ram widened the gap again to 36-27. But the Rayders would outscore Harbor in the fourth 21-12, with the most important point coming with time expired.

Harbor's Bennett Langton hit a go-ahead three-pointer with about 5 seconds remaining in the fourth quarter. The Rayders called a time-out and set up a special press break that allowed Nick Snabes to get free with the ball and Snabes was fouled on his shot from half court at the buzzer. Snabes then hit a free-throw to send the game into overtime.

Zach Hankins led the Rayders in scoring with 16 and Snabes added a season-high 12 points to the effort.

Rayder JV coach Bryan Hawkins said the Rayders' early had a big impact on the game. He noted the team fouls were 7-1 in the first quarter and 9-1 in the third quarter, both in favor of the Rams.

"That meant they shot 35 foul shots to our 21, which had a big impact on the game" Hawkins said. "I was tremendously proud of our players for displaying composure and fighting back with a big fourth quarter. My feeling was that if we could hang in there, we'd have a great chance, and sure enough, we did. We just couldn't get our quality shots to fall in overtime, missing a couple of layups in the extra period."

Despite the previous game's emotional loss, Charlevoix bounced back on Tuesday with a fire in their bellies to avenge the prior loss to Grayling.

The Rayders jumped out to a 5-point 14-9 lead by the end of the first and had stretched that lead to 31-19 at the half. The Vikings made up a little ground in the third quarter, outscoring the Rayders 16-11, but Charlevoix surged again in the fourth putting up 20 points the Grayling's 15 to cement the win.

Hankins again led Charlevoix in scoring with 15, while Nick Plude added 14 and Nate Moon had 12.

"We had two priorities coming into this game: Play with toughness, and attack the basket to get to the free throw line," Hawkins said. "In our first meeting with the Vikings, they out hustled, and out scrapped us in the beginning of the game, having us down by nearly 30 points, before we came back to make it a respectable 15-point loss. We wanted to make sure, especially on our home court, that it wouldn't happen again."

Hawkins praised the play of Hankins, Plude, Moon, Sutherland and Justin Pearl.

The JV's record is 12-6 overall and 9-4 in the Lake Michigan Conference. The Rayders were slated to host Traverse City Saint Francis on Thursday and then wrap up their season with a non-conference game at Cheboygan on Tuesday.

Freshmen defeat Rams, fall to Vikings Tuesday

The Charlevoix Rayder boys freshman basketball team notched a solid win over Harbor Springs on Friday, Feb. 17, but fell victim to Grayling's defensive pressure late in the game, falling to the Vikings Tuesday.

On Friday, the Rayders defeated the Rams 59-41. Charlevoix opened up 12-6 lead over Harbor Springs by the end of the first quarter and had nearly tripled their lead to 31-14 by halftime. The Rayders continued to keep the Rams well out of striking distance, leading 41-26 at the end of the third.

Ryan Joy led the Rayder scoring attack with 20 points, while Bryan Noirot added 11, Will Telgenhof, 10 and Adam Michaud put in 6.

"We played another well rounded game, getting off to a good start on both ends of the floor" Freshman coach Joe Solomon said. "We were able to jump out to a big lead in the first half, and I was pleased that we never relaxed, and kept up the pressure throughout the game."

On Tuesday the Rayder freshman squad played neck-and-neck with Grayling through the first half but the Vikings' defensive pressure wore the Rayders down and the game slipped away to a final score of 76-52.

Charlevoix trailed by just one point at the end of the first quarter 16-15 and at the half, the score was tied at 32-all. But, but the end of the third period, the Vikings had pulled away 55-45, and the Rayders could not recover.

Telgenhof led the Rayder scoring with 16, Noah Jeakle added 15 and Joy had 10 points.

"I felt really good going in to this game, because we have been playing extremely well lately and I really thought we were ready to knock off a very good Viking team," Solomon said. "We played extremely well for about three quarters, then I think the physical and mental fatigue that Grayling's defensive pressure causes, really set in. We started turning the ball over, which led to some easy baskets, and we weren't as sharp as we needed to be on defense.

"I give the Grayling kids a lot of credit, they shot the ball extremely well and were able to maintain their intensity throughout the game. It was great to see Noah Jeakle find his shot again. He hit four big three-pointers that really kept us in the game early on."

The Rayder freshmen will wrap up their season with a game at Traverse City St. Francis on Friday, Feb. 24.

GIRLS DISTRICTS

Up for grabs

Girls' district tourney is anyone's for the taking

One thing is agreed upon when it comes to the Class C girls' district set to kick off at East Jordan High School on Monday: It could come down to anybody playing for the championship.

In what's shaping up to be an interesting district, host East Jordan, 12-6, will face Lake Michigan Conference rival Charlevoix, 6-12, in the opening game on Monday, Feb. 27, while Boyne City, 5-13, will face Mancelona, 1-16, in the second game.

Elk Rapids, 10-8, will then face the Boyne-Mancelona winner on Wednesday, Feb. 29, while defending district champion Harbor Springs, 9-9, will face the East Jordan-Charlevoix winner the same night.

The championship game is set for 7 p.m. Friday, March 2.

"This really is a wide-open district," East Jordan coach Steve Hines said. "Not one team has really dominated the other. Charlevoix and Harbor Springs have split their two meetings this year, East Jordan and Charlevoix have split, and East Jordan and Elk Rapids have split. No one team has been any better than any other.

"We're thankful we're playing on our home floor."

The Red Devils, who fell to Charlevoix at home, 51-44, on Feb. 14, expect another tough test from the Rayders, whom they defeated in Charlevoix by a point back in early January.

"We've split with them and it's interesting because home court advantage really didn't come into play either time," Hines said. "It's always a competitive game and they beat us last year in the tournament."

Hines said handling the Rayders press and controlling the boards, where they struggled in their loss, will be key factors.

"They're always going to press and we have to handle their pressure, but we know there's going to be opportunities where you can score against their press," Hines said. "We just have to take advantage of those opportunities."

For the Red Devils, junior guard Val Peters and senior forward Grace Howes both average about 10 points a game, while other key players include senior guard Brooklyn Richards and senior Jordyn Bacchus.

"Brooklyn's senior leadership has been very important," Hines said.

Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman said her team is ready for the challenge of facing the Red Devils again on East Jordan's home court.

"We played great against them and it was a huge win for us," she said. "We weren't at 100 percent either, but we did a lot of good things and it started with defensive intensity. We were able to put two great halves together."

Hoffman said containing Peters, who scored 31 points against the Rayders in their loss, will be key as well rebounding, where senior Kelsey Way had 17 boards in the win.

"We rebounded the best we did all season against (East Jordan) and some of that came from switching (defense) up from man to zone," Hoffman said. "I'm sure they'll watch game film and make adjustments."

Ssenior guard Jenna Way is averaging a team-best 10.2 points a game for Charlevoix, while Kelsey Way is at eight points.

"Looking across the board, we're all pretty even and each team has had it's highs and lows," Hoffman said. "I think it all comes down to who's poised and who does the little things like rebounding and boxing out."

The Rams, who last year won their first district title since 2003 by topping Charlevoix in the title game, will face the East Jordan-Charlevoix winner. Harbor dropped both league games to East Jordan and swept its two meetings with Charlevoix.

CHEERLEADING

EAST JORDAN — The Charlevoix High School competitive cheer team advanced to the Division IV regional competition Friday, Feb. 17 with a fourth-place finish at the district level at the East Jordan High School gym.

Iron Mountain won the regional title finishing with 724.1724 points, followed by Munising, 723.9184; Manistique, 719.8128; and Charlevoix, 655.2600.

The top four teams advance in the Division IV regional, which is scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 25, at Cedar Springs High School.

The Rayders, under coach Sara Hendrick, will be making their first-ever appearance in the regional competition.

The Rayders had their highest round one score of 206.4, highest round 2 score of 182.46 and a round three score of 266.4 for a total score of 655.26.

"We knew going into the district meet that it was going to be tough to get in the top four, but the girls were focused and determined to make Charlevoix school history," Hendrick said. "I have a small team compared to some of the others in our division, but that isn't stopping them. This group has overcome so many obstacles this season and advancing to Regionals is the icing on the cake for them."

Hendrick said the team is expecting tough competition at the regional meet, but said they have been practicing hard and are staying focused.

"No matter the outcome on Saturday, these girls had a great season and should be very proud of themselves. They are changing the way people in the Northern Lower Peninsula look at competitive cheer and I couldn't be prouder of them."

bounced back with a 63-59 win on Grayling's home floor.

Jenna Way scored 21 points and grabbed 11 rebounds as the Rayders took a Lake Michigan Conference win on Tuesday.

Megan Peters and Kelsey Way added nine points apiece for the Rayders, who improved to 7-12 overall, 5-9 league. Peters also had 11 rebounds.

The Rayders led, 32-24, at halftime, and were up 45-40 entering the fourth quarter.

"We played a great first half," Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman said. "We made some quick turnovers to start the second half, but continued a good effort. The girls showed good poise throughout the game. We had to make adjustments and the girls responded well."

Cierra Prosser scored 19 points to lead the Vikings, 7-12, 2-10.

NATIONAL Children's Dental Health Month

Everybody wants a bright, healthy smile. That's why it's so important to take care of your child's teeth, and teach good dental hygiene habits that will last a lifetime. To begin, review the basic oral care tips seen here with your child. With proper dental care, a balanced diet and regular visits to the dentist, your child will be all smiles!

- Brush your teeth at least twice a day or, if possible, after every meal
- Use a soft-bristled toothbrush that is small enough to reach all of your teeth
- Trade sugary snacks and soda for tooth-friendly snacks like nuts, popcorn, cheese or raw vegetables
- Remember to floss your teeth or use an interdental cleaner every day

These area dentists can help your child maintain a healthy and beautiful smile:

DEFENDING FREEDOM DAILY SINCE 1776

Since the founding of our nation, the role of newspapers in our democracy has been crystal clear. We have been, and will continue to be, the eyes and ears of the American people. After all, the right of free speech is meaningless if no one knows what's really going on. That's why more than 100 million Americans depend on their hometown newspapers daily and why today's newsrooms are staffed with dedicated, highly trained reporters and experienced editors who bring you the very best journalism found anywhere, in print and online.

Rayder Renaissance

Charlevoix High School rolls out new recognition, rewards program

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

You won't see any minstrels strolling through the halls, people gnawing on turkey legs during lunch, or jousting on the athletic fields after school, but there is a renaissance on the rise at Charlevoix High School.

But this one, according to high school principal Suzanne Klinger, is about bringing more smiles – to the faces of more students by recognizing those "everyday" achievements that sometimes go unnoticed.

A couple weeks ago, part of Spirit Day activities for Winter Fest week included the kickoff of a new program at the high school called Rayder Renaissance.

Klinger explained that it's a philosophy in which the school has been dabbling in for the past year or two since a team of school officials attended a Jostens Renaissance National Conference.

Klinger

Yes, it's the same Jostens that sells class rings, graduation announcements, caps and gowns and many other items in high schools around the country.

The Renaissance program is something the company offers under its Educator Services division.

Here's how the company describes the program on its website: "Jostens Renaissance is a recognition program that gives you the power to change your school for the better. You can boost your school's academics with the excitement, appreciation and energy traditionally reserved for athletics. This program empowers you with the uplifting energy of awards and accolades to inspire underachieving students and overworked staff. It's free. It's customizable. And it works."

Jostens describes the national conference as "nearly three full days of nationally known speakers, presentations on tried and true recognition ideas, case studies of improving school culture and exchanging best practices."

"The idea is if you reward and recognize students from all different venues – academics, behavior, attendance, positive participation – kids feel more valued and it can be culture-changing in your high school," Klinger said.

During the roll-out assembly in February, school officials recognized about 180 students who "prequalified" for the Rayder Renaissance program based on their first trimester performance.

Next Camp Sea-Gull hearing Wednesday

Steve Zucker
COURIER EDITOR

Hayes Township officials will host the second of two public hearings on a proposal to submit a grant application to the state for the purpose of purchasing a former summer camp on Lake Charlevoix and turning it into a public park.

The hearing is set for 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 7, at the Hayes Township Hall, at 09195 Old U.S. 31 North.

Early in 2011 members of the Schulman family, which has owned Camp Sea-gull — an all-girls summer camp off Boyne City-Charlevoix Road on the north shore of Lake Charlevoix — for some 55 years, announced they were closing the camp and putting the property up for sale.

The 23-acre parcel, with its 1,400-plus feet of Lake Charlevoix shoreline is currently listed for $6.5 million.

Hayes Township officials, who have been looking for a location for a park on the water for some time, began talks with the property owners about the possibility of the township purchasing the camp property. Since then, township officials have been laying the groundwork to seek the grant to assist in the purchase. The township has hosted public informational meetings, met with county officials and sought help in the application process from the Little Traverse Conservancy, had the property

Police investigating Boyne woman's death

M. CHRIS LEESE/NEWS-REVIEW

The East Jordan Marathon station as seen shortly after the incident Wednesday morning.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's office, at the request of the East Jordan Police Department, is investigating what police are calling the "suspicious" death of a Boyne City woman who was found in a parking lot early Wednesday.

On Thursday Schneider identified the woman as Kimberly Maurer, age 34.

Charlevoix County Sheriff Don Schneider said dispatchers East Jordan police and ambulance crews were called to the East Jordan Co-op, at 106 State St., in East Jordan when dispatchers at 9-1-1 received a call at 6:17 a.m. of a woman in the parking lot who was not breathing and had no pulse.

The victim was pronounced dead at the scene, Schneider said. He said there was no apparent cause of death at the scene.

He said the woman's body was transported to Spectrum Health in Grand Rapids for autopsy. He said cause of death was unknown at the time of a press release issued Wednesday afternoon.

Schneider said the circumstances surrounding her death are under investigation.

Authorities are asking anyone who may have information that may be relevant to the investigation call the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office at (231) 547-4461.

County board to decide on road fix funds

Boyne City-Charlevoix Road focus of debate: Build it now or later?

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

BOYNE CITY — Boyne City-Charlevoix Road may be completely overhauled this summer, but only if officials fork over another $1 million from county coffers.

This month, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners will decide whether to make a second $1 million transfer to the county road commission to complete this summer's planned repaving along the busy county road that connects Boyne City to U.S. 31, north of Charlevoix. Commissioners shifted $1 million in November to cover an expected financial shortfall for the project, but the low bids came in even higher than anticipated.

Charlevoix County Road Commission manager Pat Harmon said the agency has $1.5 million in savings and will combine it with nearly $1 million in federal funds. Add that to last year's $1 million from the county general fund and it leaves about another $1 million gap to cover the $4.4 million cost for the full 10-mile stretch, he said.

County commissioners want to know how the total $2 million loan to the road commission will be paid back, if they go for the proposed second transfer.

"That's the lingering question," county commissioner Ron Reinhardt said.

Commissioner Chris Christensen, of Boyne City, said just after Wednesday's board meeting that officials must consider that question before they decide whether to cough up the cash.

A leading payback suggestion is for the county to withhold $200,000 per year for 10 years from the taxpayer-approved road millage revenues that annually amount to about $1.5 million. Then all of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road would be repaved this coming construction season, save for the nearly three miles already completed in recent years.

The other option is for road officials to carve out at least 2.5 miles to leave untouched until a future year, Harmon said.

Reinhardt, who also serves as the board's liaison to the road commission, said he wants to set aside another $1 million to get this project done this year. However, he is aware the county has other major expenses expected sooner than later, such as the proposed sheriff's substation in Boyne Falls and a possible new county building on Beaver Island that would house transit vehicles, road commission equipment and sheriff's patrol cars, he said.

"We have other things in this county to do," Reinhardt said.

Meanwhile, state highway officials recently awarded the construction contract to the low $1.47-million bidder on the project's federal portion. Charlevoix County road officials gathered Thursday with contractors from M & M Excavating, of Gaylord, for a pre-construction meeting on that section, Harmon said.

County commissioners will further discuss and consider the options at their March 14 meeting in Charlevoix. Road commissioners will then make their following decisions — whether to award the full project contract or a shortened version — at the March 26 meeting in Boyne City.

The low bidder on the project's local portion is Payne & Dolan, of Gaylord, a company that submitted a $2.97 million bid. The next lowest bid came in at less than a $2,000 difference.

School board lays out plans for superintendent search

McLean

Janik

Charlevoix Public Schools officials have laid out short- and long-term plans for replacing the district's soon-to-depart superintendent.

During a special work-session meeting Wednesday, the Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education set its goals and a tentative timeline for replacing current superintendent Chet Janik, who announced last week that he will be retiring from education in early May and taking a position as Leelanau County Administrator.

Janik will be leaving the district after almost exactly five years in the superintendent's position. Board president John McLean told the Courier Thursday that the board hopes to name an interim superintendent before spring break begins at the end of the month.

Janik said the board plans use Char-Em Intermediate School District consultant Mike Washburn to assist in the search to fill the interim position.

McLean said using Washburn — who regularly works with the Charlevoix school district — will help the search for an interim superintendent go more quickly because Washburn is well acquainted with the district's needs.

After the interim position is filled, the board's attention will turn to filling the position for the long-term. He said in the coming weeks the board plans to hear presentations from three or four executive search firms and then will weigh its options — including using its agent to assist in the Char-Em Intermediate School District to assist in the search.

Janik said using the intermediate school district would likely cost the district less, but it's unknown at this time how much using a private firm would cost.

McLean, who is the only current board member who has been through a superintendent search process, said the board hopes to have a new permanent replacement to fill the superintendent's position by around the start of the next school year.

"I was pretty excited last night," McLean said. "We've set meeting dates with topics we want to cover and we are moving forward in a timely fashion."

Janik said there will likely be some overlap in the interim superintendent coming on board and his departure to help make a smooth transition.

At Wednesday's meeting, Janik also updated the board with some preliminary budget numbers for next year. He said, if the governor's proposed budget were to pass, it could translated into a $500,000 to $800,000 budget hole for the district.

McLean, who was not available in time for last week's edition to offer comments on Janik's departure offerd the following comments in a statement submitted to the Courier:

"It is a true loss to the Charlevoix Public School system to see Chet Janik depart. While we are extremely happy for his new position, we will miss his guidance and leadership that he has demonstrated over the last five years.

His tireless efforts on getting our bond passed for technology, building upgrades, and transportation has made us a model for other school districts. These changes are appealing attributes for families looking for the right educational setting for their children.

He is a true "people person". His involvement, not only in the community, but also in numerous service organizations is a testament to his dedication to our school district: ensuring the right message was always conveyed.

Chet kept our board unified and focused on tasks at hand. We are in very difficult times in regards to our fiscal position, but Chet always approached it with the "glass half- full" concept. While cuts have been severe both here as well as every district, he made sure that he and his administrative team kept the cuts as far from the classroom as possible.

I personally will miss the outstanding job he did working with me and providing the school board with the support needed to understand the intricacies of operating a school district. We will be hard pressed to find another man as dedicated and professional as Chet.

The next task for the Board of Education will be finding the right person to lead the Charlevoix Public Schools ... This is a very time-consuming effort by the board and is one of many of the important roles the board is charged with. We take this responsibility very seriously. We need to begin the process now with the hopes of ideally selecting someone by July/August."

'Super-PACs,' candidates breed cynicism in politics

Roger Knutson

It is difficult not to be cynical about politics in America. It seems as if simply voting is not sufficient participation. But how can I suppose that any financial contribution to the party of my choice will make much difference, when "super-PACs" are currently supported almost completely by people who are providing actual millions of dollars to the candidate of their choice. Almost all the SuperPac money appears to be coming from only a couple of dozen particularly well-heeled donors, who certainly expect something in return for their support.

By law, super-PACs and candidate campaigns are denied the possibility of coordination, but it is increasingly difficult to believe that law works when PACs and campaigns share the same office space and the same consulting firms. The employees must be very tight-lipped indeed not to share just a little bit of information at the water cooler or in the executive rest-rooms, even though they know each other well from previous jobs in other parts of campaigns.

A candidate announcing, "The current President has failed. I will not fail," is hardly a recipe for success in governing our country. And the specific suggestions, like abandoning much of public education, even at the college or university level, because colleges are "harming our youth," making contraception illegal, or going back on the gold standard for our currency, are almost silly. We are witnessing a degree of craziness that makes England's King George's famous madness seem a model of rectitude by comparison.

If Michigan has voted to support Mitt Romney in the just-passed primary election (this column has a week of lag time), after he suggested that the loss of 1.5 million jobs in the auto industry by the bankruptcy of GM and Chrysler would have made Detroit a better place, my level of cynicism will only go up.

I long for a time when the loudest shout and the most virulent statement is not repeated endlessly by a print and television media that seem to consider the election of the president or the selection of a candidate as equivalent to, but greater than, the Super Bowl or March Madness. There is enough madness in politics and among politicians. It doesn't need enhancement.

Cynicism aside, I will vote based on all the information I can gather, and maybe I will even add my "widow's mite" to campaign coffers. Politics has probably always been more than a little crazy. We just get to see the craziness more clearly now. We, the people, might eventually reject much of politics if our cynicism keeps getting reinforced. That outcome might not be good for the country but if it is bad for purposefully outrageous politicians, I would support it.

Resident supports Camp Sea-Gull park proposal

Editor:

We are writing to voice our SUPPORT for the Hayes Township purchase of Camp Sea-Gull in order to create a public park that will be enjoyed for generations. We believe it is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to obtain, with almost all "grant" money, a 20 acre site on Lake Charlevoix with more than 1,000 feet of lake frontage. It is truly a "wow" piece of land that SHOULD NOT be sold to a private developer who would build apartments, condo's or large "estate style" homes, thereby "sealing off" the lake frontage for public use.

We realize there is a small minority opposition to the purchase, but every issue at every level of government always has a vocal minority. It's an absolute. It happens all the time. Even our Supreme Court issues 5-4 decisions that 300 million Americans have to obey.

I have asked 10 of my Hayes Township friends their opinion and found two in opposition (although weak) and eight in favor. I'm positive the majority of Hayes Township property owners support applying for the grant and using the money to purchase the site.

Vocal minorities always inundate elected officials with emails, letters, phone calls and other tactics at their disposal. Please don't let any of these tactics sway you in exercising your good judgment. We, the majority, are counting on you to persevere and create a very-much-needed public access to Lake Charlevoix.

Not to belabor a point, but it would be a tragedy if a developer built private residences on this key piece of Lake Charlevoix property and we missed forever the chance to create a park for everyone.

Please stand by your convictions and be assured the majority is proud of your actions.

Frank and Beth Shepherd
Hayes Township

Northwest Academy students dine out

Local test program provides nourishment for the body and mind

CHARLEVOIX — Matt Saunders and Phoebe Gohs of Northwest Academy in Charlevoix recently approached Murray's Bar & Grill owners Emily Welsh and Laurie Hodgson with the plan of stopping by the restaurant in East Jordan for lunch on their way back from the new Gaylord Discovery Center.

Welsh, the mother of a 3- and 5-year old, had already been putting together a program for parents to bring their young children to the restaurant to learn about dining etiquette and healthy eating. So, the Northwest Academy field trip provided the perfect opportunity to test her idea.

"Kids are very important to us here at Murray's," Welsh said. "If the kids enjoy their dining experience, not only will they ask to come here instead of a fast food restaurant, but we will hopefully have a customer for life."

"It's equally important, however," she added, "that their parents and other diners enjoy themselves. That is why we want to give the kids the full story on what's involved in eating out at a restaurant — how the restaurant works, how to order, and how to behave."

At 12:15 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 23, 19 students in grades kindergarten through grade five along with eight staff members and parents arrived at Murray's and were seated together in the front of the restaurant. Their first task was to set their own place at the table with the help of a diagram and directions from Welsh.

Next, they were given a specially-created menu which featured four healthy sandwich choices — grilled cheese, tuna fish, grilled peanut butter and jelly, or turkey and American cheese. Their lunch included baby carrots, fresh fruit and their choice of beverage: milk, chocolate milk, lemonade, or ice water.

Each child ordered his or her own lunch, after which Welsh provided colorful handouts and discussed healthy food choices, restaurant etiquette and general dining rules that apply whether eating out or at home. The discussion was interactive and Welsh responded to many questions from the eager students.

"The kids even waited for everyone at their table to be served, put their napkins on their laps and ate with their mouths closed ... for the most part," Welsh added.

Because of the program's success, Welsh and Hodgson plan to offer the idea to other elementary schools in the area.

Murray's is located at 115 Main St. in downtown East Jordan.

For more information, contact Murray's at (231) 536-3395, email Welsh at murrayein@yahoo.com or Hodgson at laurie@northbays.com, or visit www.murraysbar.com.

LOOKING BACK...

In December of 1892 everything became up to date in little Charlevoix. An artesian well, the town's first steady supply of water, had been sunk at the southwest corner of Round Lake in 1890. Two years later it was housed in this brick building, which Charlevoix Sentinel editor Willard Smith called "... as fine a system of water-works as any town the size of Charlevoix can boast of. It bespeaks enterprise and a spirit of progress ..." Now a water network could begin to be installed around town. But difficulty in drilling to a sufficient depth through hard rock to meet increasing demand did not allow pumping at maximum flow until 1894. By 1906, however, the supply was simply not adequate. A new system of pumping and filtering a limitless supply of Lake Michigan water was installed about 450 feet south of the piers, from where it was pumped to a water tower on Park Avenue overlooking the channel. In later years, the building, just to the east of today's Ward Bros., became Harold Miller's woodworking shop where he made floats for fishermen's nets, and Hugh Mayne's Sinclair gas station operation. The building was still there in the early 1960s.

Depot hosts sports history program

The Charlevoix Historical Society will present a fully-illustrated program titled "The History of Winter Sports in Charlevoix" at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, March 6, at the Depot, Chicago Avenue at Depot Beach. The time period covered will be from the arrival of Charlevoix's first settlers in the mid 1800s up to the 1960s. The program will be narrated by Harsha House Museum Co-Director Steve Goslee.

Winter sports have always been a big part of the Charlevoix scene ever since the settlement's pioneers strapped on primitive skates to glide across the ice on the three lakes. Adult settlers were constantly reprimanding their children for chronic tardiness in reaching Sunday school to which they skated. It was much more fun to stay out on the ice than it was to come ashore to report for religious duty. Slick iceboats once flew people down Lake Charlevoix at blistering speeds. Winter festivals were begun, including skiing and tobogganing down Mount McSauba, parades on Bridge Street, and a winter queen beginning in 1930. Bobsleds used to streak along an iced-over Bridge Street from atop the south hill at Hurlbut Street all the way across the bridge to try to crest the north hill at Dixon Avenue. Amazingly, some of them made it. The whole town closed down for the Thursday afternoons on which bobsledding occurred, even the schools.

There will be no admission fee for the program, but support donations are always appreciated. Light refreshments will be served. Audience participation with memories of winter sports past will conclude the program. Call (231) 547-0373 Tuesday-Saturday for more information.

Three appointed to county committees

Three new faces joined the ranks of Charlevoix County officials this week.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners on Wednesday seated two applicants to the county's parks committee, as well as filled a vacancy on the county commission on aging's advisory board. The unanimously approved appointments took immediate effect.

Susan Vrondran and Brian Williams, both of Boyne City, will take seats on the parks committee, while Jerry Kelts, also of Boyne City, will join the commission on aging's advisory board.

Kelts will replace Ward Cook, who resigned from the advisory board.

RENAISSANCE

The program will now be fully implemented in the remaining two trimesters of this school year.

The program uses criteria including grade point average, discipline points, attendance and class credits earned, and offers rewards ranging from free admission to sporting events, early release to lunch on certain days, front-of-the-lunch-line privileges, off-campus lunch permission, early dismissal on certain days and other incentives.

This week Klinger is attending a Jostens Renaissance conference in Wisconsin. She was invited to attend to discuss the national program and to collaborate with other school leaders to help plan the program's future direction.

She said so far the program has been well-received by students, staff and parents.

Students are also involved in helping to steer how Charlevoix High School implements the program. Klinger said the school's leadership class has been instrumental in working on the program.

"Kids have been asking the teachers in the classroom, 'What do I need to do to be a part of that,'" Klinger said.

She said she hopes that the long term effect of the program will be better grades, fewer discipline referrals and attendance issues and an overall improvement in school morale.

appraised and now has prepared a draft application to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources Trust fund for a grant to help pay for up to 75 percent of the park's purchase.

For supporting documents, visit charlevoixcourier.com

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources Trust Fund was established by state law in 1976. The money in the fund is from the sale of mineral rights on state property and the money may be used only to buy or develop land for recreation or protection.

In advance of and during the first public hearing on the proposed grant application on Feb. 8, members of a group calling itself the Committee to Protect Hayes Township raised several objections to the proposed park project. Among the group's objections are the scope and cost of the project. The group also contends there is no need for such a park, with Young State Park seven miles down the road.

Others spoke in support of the proposal at the first meeting, calling it a "chance of a lifetime" for the township to provide public access to the lake.

On its grant application, township officials would seek $3.37 million for the purchase of the property. That's based on an appraisal the township had done on the property that placed its value at $4.45 million. On the draft application, the township proposes to make up the difference, or $1.125 million through $500,000 in township funds and $625,000 in fundraising. In the proposed grant application, township officials estimate the cost of operation of the park at about $18,500 annually. In the document, the township proposes the park to be used for swimming, fishing, picnicking, kayaking, boat launching, and to provide trailhead, bathrooms and parking for the proposed Charlevoix-Boyne City non-motorized trail.

The grant and matching funds are only for the acquisition of the property. Funding for any facility improvements at the site would need to be secured separately.

The grant application would need to be submitted to state officials by April 2 to be considered in the next round of trust fund grant applications.

Charlevoix's Janna Way (14) looks to make a pass around the defense of East Jordan's Emma Crick (20) and Jordyn Bacchus (32) during the Rayders' Class C District opener against the Red Devils Monday.

EAST JORDAN — Timing is everything.

And health, or a lack thereof, has a lot to do with it, too.

Jenna Way and Kelsey Way scored 19 points apiece Wednesday in leading Charlevoix past Harbor Springs, 68-48, in a Class C girls basketball district semifinal game at East Jordan High School.

Charlevoix, 9-13, will take on Elk Rapids, 13-8, 7 p.m. Friday, March 2, in the final. Elk Rapids rolled past Boyne City, 59-36, in Wednesday's other semifinal.

Wednesday's win was the sixth in nine starts for Charlevoix, which was 3-10 at one point this season, and it avenged two regular-season losses to the Rams, who finished 9-12.

Harbor also beat the Rayders in the district title game a year ago.

"It was huge for us," second-year Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman said of the revenge factor. "Right on the top of our scouting report, (it said) They got the district trophy over us last year.

"My question to (my players) was, Do you think we owe anybody? I think that's what got them kind of fired up. I think that was a huge motivator for us, and I think it kind of propelled us."

Sydney Carlson, who hit four 3-pointers and finished with 22 points in Charlevoix's district-opening win over East Jordan on Monday, nailed a triple 7 seconds into Wednesday's game to give the Rayders a 3-0 lead.

Charlevoix never trailed, and employed a rock-solid full-court press that helped produce 31 Harbor turnovers.

Megan Peters added 11 points and Carlson finished with nine for Charlevoix. Jenna Lechowicz scored 15 points, Elena Ongaro had 11, and Maggie

BOYS VARSITY BASKETBALL

Rayders bounce back from OT heartbreaker

After falling just short in the waning seconds of overtime in a hard-fought game against conference rival Traverse City St. Francis on Friday, the Charlevoix Rayder boys varsity basketball team bounced back to end their regular season on a high note with a non-conference win over Cheboygan Tuesday.

On Friday, the Rayders fell just a point short of the Gladiators in the 66-65 loss.

Andrew Potter scored 20 points, Andrew Plude had 16 points and 10 rebounds, and Charlie Hamilton added 10 for the Rayders, who slipped to 11-8 overall, 7-7 league.

Sean Sheldon scored 18 points for the Lake Michigan Conference-champion Gladiators.

Trailing 46-36 entering the fourth quarter, Charlevoix rallied and sent the game to overtime on a Hamilton jumper.

Charlevoix led by two in the last minute of the overtime period, but a Gladiator 3-pointer with about 30 seconds remaining in the game put St. Francis ahead. The Rayders got the ball back after a St. Francis player missed the front end of a one-and-one free-throw, with just seconds remaining, but the Rayders were not able to get off a shot before the buzzer.

"St. Francis is a big team," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "We struggled in the first half getting rebounds and second shots, but the boys played hard to make up the difference."

The win lifted the Gladiators to 16-2 overall and 13-1 in the conference.

But the Rayders came back strong on Tuesday.

Andrew Plude and Charlie Hamilton had 17 points apiece as Charlevoix closed the regular season with a 61-50 non-league win over Cheboygan.

The Rayders improved to 12-8.

"We know we have a very difficult district," coach Wood said. "It's tournament time and you'll never know who you'll face, so we're just trying to keep the guys on a normal schedule, trying to get some guys healthy and we'll try to keep our rhythm."

Isiah Woodard scored a game-high 30 points to lead the Chiefs, 5-14.

They open Class C district play on Wednesday, March 7, in their gym against either East Jordan or Boyne City.

GIRLS JV BASKETBALL

Wrapping it up

JV closes strong season with win over Gladiators

The Charlevoix Rayder girls junior varsity basketball team wrapped up their season on a high note with a convincing 56-32 win over conference rival Traverse City St Francis on Thursday, Feb. 23.

The Lady Rayders, who finished the season at 15-5 overall and 13-1 in the league, jumped out to a 14-7 lead by the end of the first quarter and never looked back. By halftime Charlevoix had more than doubled its lead to 32-15 and led 40-22 going into the fourth quarter.

Maggie Hamilton led the Rayder scoring atatck with 10 points followed by Jennaca Holecheck, Ellie Way, Kourtney Putnam who had 8 points each. Jennifer Archery, Olivia Storm added 6 each and Delaney Hodge added 4 points.

Rayder JV coach Todd Klinger praised his teams play, calling the game a well-balanced effort.

"Every girl played well when they got in the game," Klinger said. "This was a game where we were able to balance out the playing time and we never missed a beat with whoever was in the game."

Looking back on the season, Klinger said his team "improved immensely." He noted that the team went from a 3-4 record early in the season and exploded to win 12 of their last 13 games.

"Each one of them deserves credit for that turnaround," Klinger said. "The depth on the team was strong, which helped because working against each other in practice was making everyone better. I hope each of these girls stays with program and they put the time in during the off-season to keep getting better.

"I can see this group of girls doing great things when they become part of the varsity team. I really enjoyed working with the girls. They always worked hard and had great attitudes which made it easy to coach them."

JV ends season with two wins

The Charlevoix Rayder boys junior varsity basketball team wrapped up its 2011-12 season with two wins, one over conference rival Traverse City St. Francis on Thursday, Feb. 23, and another against non-conference Cheboygan on Tuesday.

In the game against the Gladiators on Friday, Charlevoix fell behind 12-9 by the end of the first quarter but then roared back in the second outscoring St. Francis 17-8 for a halftime lead of 26-20. They Rayders were able to keep the Gladiators at bay in the second half, stretching the lead to 37-29 by the end of the third and adding another 3-point cushion by game's end for a 58-46 win.

Zach Hankins led the Charlevoix scoring attack with 15 points. Nate Moon added 14 and Justin Pearl had 10.

"This was the second game in a row in which we prioritized toughness and execution in our press offense," Rayder JV coach Bryan Hawkins said. "These were two areas of emphasis that paid dividends against Grayling, and helped us against the Gladiators. We always know that Saint Francis is going to come in with a certain mentality of toughness based on their football success, so it's our job to be prepared and to match it on the basketball court."

Hawkins said his players did a good job of being patient enough to find Hankins, who was injured for the first the Rayders faced the Gladiators in January — a 60-59 loss at the buzzer.

"Moon and Pearl really did a nice job working off opportunities Zach gave them," he said.

Hawkins said the turning point in the game was the defensive work of C.J. Rice.

"He came off the bench and gave us great energy in our press, had a couple of tips and steals, and really got the place buzzing when he converted a traditional three-point play by making a basket and getting fouled after a steal in the press, then making the free throw. He chipped in with 9 points total."

On Tuesday, the Rayder JV wrapped up its season with a 64-34 non-conference win at Cheboygan.

Hankins had 20 points in that game and Nick Plude added 10.

The JV end their season at 14-6.

FRESHMAN BASKETBALL

Freshmen close out season with OT loss

The Charlevoix Rayder freshman boys basketball team wrapped up their season with a hard-fought 70-69 loss to Traverse City St. Francis on Friday, Feb. 24

The Rayders battled back from a 16-9 deficit at the end of the first quarter to knot the score up at 28 at the half.

Charlevoix then continued their momentum into the third quarter pulling ahead to a 46-38 lead by the end of the third quarter. But the Gladiators came back to tie the game up at 61-all with a long 3-pointer with about 30 seconds left in of regulation.

"This was really a terrific game to be a part of," Charlevoix coach Joe Solomon said. "We got off to a rather slow start, getting down by as many as 10 in the first, but our players fought hard on defense, and with the help of Noah Jeakle's terrific 3-point shooting we were able to claw back and tie it up at half time."

Soloman said the team "played extremely well" on both ends of the floor in the third quarter allowing the Rayders to accumulate an 8-point lead

"In the fourth quarter, it seemed like St. Francis was hitting every shot they put up, and when they did miss, their size advantage really hurt us as they beat us up on the boards. St. Francis continued its good shooting in the overtime, and we just came up a little short."

Noah Jeakle led the Rayder scoring attack with 23 points including seven 3-pointers. Ryan Joy added 21. Bryan Noirot,13 and Will Telgenhof had 8.

"You never want to end your season on a loss, but its hard to be down about a game that was so well contested and one in which your players play with such great intensity and determination," he added.

The freshman team finished the season 5-8 overall and 5-0 in conference play.

DISTRICT PREVIEW

Rayders face tough tournament ahead

Boys Class C District contenders expected to be as competitive as always

Andy Sneddon
NEWS-REVIEW SPORTS EDITOR

CHARLEVOIX — This one could be a lot of fun.

It almost always is.

Charlevoix hosts the Class C boys basketball district tournament that has proven year in and year out to be competitive as it regularly features hard-fought battles between rivals, most of whom are quite familiar with each other after slugging it out with one another all season long in the Lake Michigan Conference.

"I feel like in our conference we've kind of beaten up on each other all year," Charlevoix coach Adam Wood said. "It's a tough district and whoever gets through it is going to be very fortunate."

Elk Rapids and Boyne City enter the tournament with the best won-loss records — the Ramblers were 13-5 entering the final week of the regular season, the Elks 12-6 — but as history has shown, records don't necessarily carry a lot of weight in this district.

Five of the six teams in the tournament are from the Lake Michigan. Boyne, Elk Rapids, Charlevoix, 11-8; Harbor Springs, 7-12; and East Jordan, 4-15; are joined by Mancelona, 10-8, out of the Ski Valley.

Four of Mancelona's losses have come to Ski Valley heavyweights Pellston and Bellaire, both of whom were ranked in the top 10 in Class D throughout the year by the Associated Press.

Boyne City and Elk Rapids tied for third in the Lake Michigan behind champion Traverse City St. Francis and second-place Grayling, both outstanding teams in their own right.

The Elks went a combined 7-1 against the Ramblers, Charlevoix, East Jordan and Harbor, with the lone loss coming to the Rams, 49-47, a week ago.

Elk Rapids' Luke Morrison, one of the top players in the league, did not play in that game because of an injury.

Morrison averages 22 points and seven rebounds per game, while 6-2 Philip Hayes (13 points per game) offers a nice complement to the 6-3 Morrison, a senior.

Morrison was injured in a loss to St. Francis and missed the Harbor game, but, according to Elk Rapids coach Luke Johnson, he will definitely play come tournament time.

Boyne City dropped its two meetings with Elk Rapids, the first by seven points, the second by 12, and the Ramblers also fell by a point at Charlevoix, splitting their two games with the Rayders this season. They swept both East Jordan and Harbor and they won two from Grayling, the league's second-place team.

Charlevoix has been up and down this season, but has proven it can play with, and beat, just about anybody it lines up against.

The Rayders handed a very good Cedarville team — which has been ranked in the top 10 in Class D all season — one of its two losses on the year, and the Rayders gave both St. Francis and Grayling all either of those teams wanted in a combined four meetings with them.

In none of those four games was the final spread more than seven points, and they took the Gladiators to overtime before falling, 66-65, last week.

Andrew Plude is Charlevoix's top scorer at 17 points per game, while Andrew Potter is averaging 14, and Charlie Hamilton is at 11.

"We're fortunate to have it on our court, but that can be a blessing or a curse," Wood said. "Either way we've got to show up and be ready to play. No nights off come district time. We absolutely feel that we're capable, just like anybody feels that they have the potential to win it."

"I would have to say Elk has to be the favorite because they've beaten every one (in the tournament field)," said Boyne City coach Nick Redman, whose team won more games this season than any Boyne team since 1997-98. "Charlevoix proved they could beat us on their court and we've proved we can beat just about anybody. We've had a really good season. The one loss to Charlevoix and the (first) one to Elk were really one-possession games.

"Our key is just playing hard for 32 minutes and playing smart down the stretch, executing down the stretch. We have talent, we have potential, but you've got to execute when the game's on the line."

Boyne features good balance with four players averaging in double-figure scoring, led by guard Keegan LaBlance, who is at 15.5 per game. Jay Redman, Corey Redman and 6-foot-5 sophomore Ryan Carson also average in double digits.

Boyne has also gotten solid contributions, particularly, defensively, from the likes of T.J. Douglass, Tevin Larmond and Garrett Moeke, and sophomore Bradley Fouchia has made an immediate impact since a call-up from the JV two-thirds of the way through the season.

East Jordan struggled for much of the season and lost a couple of front-line players to discipline issues. But the Red Devils were playing much better basketball down the stretch, sparked by 6-2 senior John Richards, who scored 25 points against Charlevoix, 27 against Grayling, and 31 against Kalkaska.

Sophomore Noah Bacchus has been a steadying influence from the point guard spot in his second year on the varsity for the Red Devils.

Spencer Kloss, a 6-4 junior, leads Harbor Springs in scoring at 14 points per game. Guard Peter Lauer is second at 11 per game, while Kloss and 6-6 junior Nels Zoerhof both average about 10 rebounds per game. Guard Scott Morse is the Rams' assist leader.

The Rams won three of six starts — including that 49-47 victory over Elk Rapids — headed into the last week of the regular season.

Walker added eight for Harbor.

"It was great defense," Harbor coach Jennifer Foley said. "It was pretty intense and their traps were right on and we had a hard time dealing with it. What's so successful about our offense is our half-court sets and when we're playing at such a high speed it's hard for us to slow down and run something. It was hard to communicate, it was a loud atmosphere in here, and our point guards really couldn't hear what I was trying to call out. Kudos to (Charlevoix) for creating that."

A pair of Kelsey Way free throws with 1 minute, 28 seconds to play in the first quarter put Charlevoix up five, 13-8, and triggered a 21-4 run that left the Rayders ahead by 18, 30-12, with just under four minutes to play in the first half.

Harbor never fully recovered, but it hung in and drew within 10, 39-29, late in the third quarter. Charlevoix responded with a 10-3 spurt, bookended by a Peters putback and a Carlson foul-line jumper. After that spurt, the Rayders were firmly in charge, 49-32, making the final seven-plus minutes academic.

Kelsey Way, who finished with a team-high eight rebounds, scored 16 of her 19 points in the second half.

Charlevoix played with a high level of intensity from the opening tip and never wavered, the thoughts of two regular-season losses to the Rams fresh on their minds.

The Rams celebrated that first win over the Rayders "like they had won the national championship," Jenna Way said. "Seeing that burned a little fire in us. We knew what we wanted and we just came in here, took care of our business. We had a debt to pay is the right way to put it."

It certainly has helped that Charlevoix is now healthy after a season-long battle with the injury bug.

"When we have the bodies, the legs, energy ... it works out," said Jenna Way, who sat out Charlevoix's first loss this season to Harbor. "It's all about heart, heart and hustle, who wants it more."

Clearly, on Wednesday, that team was Charlevoix as it jabbed away at Harbor with its press from the outset, and never let the Rams off the deck.

"That's been our mantra all year, when we go all out on defense, our offense just seems to fall into place," Hoffman said. "We get deflections on the ball and all that kind of stuff. That was our goal, to not (necessarily) go for the steal right away, but to try to wear down (Ongaro) and (Lechowicz)."

Foley, Harbor's coach, said she could see that the Rayders were coming on strong late in the season. Charlevoix beat Elk Rapids, East Jordan and Grayling — three teams it had lost to in its first regular-season meetings — during its late-season surge, and they gave Lake Michigan Conference champion Traverse City St. Francis a very good battle before succumbing, 54-45, on the final night of the regular season. It was just the second time all year that any team came within 10 points or less of the Gladiators in a Lake Michigan game all year. St. Francis, which was bounced from the Class C state tournament by Manton on Monday, went a perfect 14-0 in the league.

"They've been playing pretty poised that last few games," Foley said. "I saw their last game of the (regular) season and they only lost to St. Francis by nine, and that right there tells you they're playing good basketball. And the way they put a hurt on East Jordan (on Monday) in the first half, you know they're coming to play. It's tournament time, and everybody is.

"I thought they played very inspired basketball. Whether it was (due to) playing Harbor Springs or not, I don't know, but they've been pretty good lately."

Megan Gregorski scored 13 points and Alex Dart and Rachel Hintz added 10 apiece in leading Elk Rapids past the Ramblers in Wednesday's other semifinal.

Elk Rapids led 14-9 after one quarter, then outscored the Ramblers, 17-6, in the second quarter for a 31-15 halftime lead.

Tanner McCune, the lone senior in Boyne City's lineup, scored 16 points, while Rainy McCune added eight.

Charlevoix and Elk Rapids split their two regular-season meetings in the Lake Michigan Conference, with the Elks taking a 53-50 decision on Jan. 6, and the Rayders winning 53-41 on Feb. 10.

In Monday's game, in addition to Carlson's 22-point effort, Jenna Way added 21 points for Charlevoix in its win over the Red Devils, 13-8.

Way scored 17 of her points in the first half, helping Charlevoix to a 28-15 lead at the break. The Rayders extended their advantage to 34-17 early in the third quarter, only to see East Jordan come all the way back and grab the lead midway through the fourth.

The lead changed hands five times in the next three-plus minutes until Carlson drained her fourth triple of the second half, tying it at 51-all. Kelsey Way scored on a putback to put Charlevoix in front — this time for good — at 53-51 with 1 minute, 12 seconds remaining.

"We needed someone to stand up tonight," Charlevoix coach Leslie Hoffman said. "And Syndney did that in the second half with some big shots."

Carlson, Jenna Way and Kelsey Way combined to knock down five of their eight free throw attempts over the final 43 seconds to keep East Jordan at bay.

"We fought hard and made one heck of a comeback in the fourth," East Jordan coach Steve Hines said. "We felt comfortable when we got the lead, but Charlevoix is a tough team. We had to account for their shooting that stretched us out and then we were not able to rebound effectively."

In the 54-45 regular season-ending loss to Traverse City St. Francis Jenna Way had 14 points and 10 rebounds to lead Charlevoix, while Kelsey Way added 13 points and 10 boards.

LITTLE LEAGUE

Registration under way

New Little League board seeks more players, sponsors and umpires

Registration for Charlevoix Little League softball and baseball is once again underway.

Parents can register their boys ages 7-15 and girls ages 8-15 on on Saturdays, March 17 and March 24 from 9 a.m.-noon at the Charlevoix High School.

Local Little Leauge officials note that change for this year is that parents don't have to register their players in person. They can also register online at www.eteamz.com/charlevoix .

Charlevoix Little Leauge President John Haan noted that there are many other changes taking place with Little League this year.

He said a dozen new board members are excited to maintain the many great traditions of Charlevoix Little League while also trying out new initiatives.

Among the new efforts the organization is working are a website and a Facebook page, a revamped softball program, a reinvigorated sponsorship program and an updated coaches' training program.

Haan noted that the Charlevoix Little League served approximately 140 baseball and softball players last year and the board hopes to greatly increase that number this year.

"The new board is excited, well-organized and we are ready for a great season," Haan said. "Our mission is to improve kids' baseball and softball skills, teach them to respect themselves and their sports and have fun."

The Little League program is also looking for sponsors, coaches and volunteer umpires.

"The community has always supported us and we need that support again this year," Haan said. "Charlevoix Little League is a great organization for sponsors to be involved with. It is a win for the sponsors and a win for the kids. In addition, we'd love to find community members who would be interested in volunteering as umpires. Good coaches and good umpires are key to a quality experience for the kids."

For more information, Haan can be reached at jhaan@rayder.net, or (231) 348-8522, or visit www.eteamz.com/charlevoix.

CHEERLEADING

Cheer team finishes 8th

The Charlevoix Rayder competitive cheer team finished in eighth place in a 12-team field in its Division 4 Regional tournament debut on Saturday in Cedar Springs.

The Rayders scored 196.6000, 176.2600, 372.8600, 281.3000 respectively in their four rounds for a total score of 654.1600.

Merill won the tournament with 726.3600 points, followed by Hart with 726.1018, Shelby with 705.3288 and Iron Mountain with 702.7926.

The top four teams in the regional will move on to the state finals on Saturday in Grand Rapids.

The Rayders earned the chance to make the team's first-ever Regional tournament appearance by finishing fourth in the district tournament the week prior.

"The girls had a great season and should be very proud of themselves," Rayder competitive cheerleading coach Sara Hendrick said. "We have big plans for next year, and I can't wait to see what else these girls can do." She added that the team's two seniors, Whitney Drost and Alena Purvis,"will be greatly missed."

Storm water ordinance could manage runoff, protect watershed

Sheri McWhirter
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

SHERI MCWHIRTER/NEWS-REVIEW

Marc Seelye, (far right) Charlevoix County drain commissioner, listens Monday to township officials discuss a proposed storm water ordinance.

Charlevoix County's township officials gathered Monday to discuss the ongoing effort to adopt a county-wide storm water ordinance.

The Michigan Townships Association's Charlevoix County chapter met at Boyne District Library in Boyne City, when county drain commissioner Marc Seelye answered questions about the proposed ordinance, along with Grenetta Thomassey, program director at the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council. The idea is for willing township boards to adopt the proposed storm water ordinance, though a county official would handle enforcement.

"This is strictly a voluntary situation," Seelye said.

Storm water runoff is a major ecological problem, both for erosion and pollution. It is defined as precipitation that flows over the ground, particularly across impervious surfaces that prevent it from naturally soaking into the earth. The water collects debris, chemicals, dirt and other pollutants that flow untreated into storm sewer systems or directly into local lakes, streams, wetlands and coastal waters.

The draft ordinance is intended to manage storm water runoff during and after development to protect water resources and ensure builders consider storm water implications in site planning, according to the proposed ordinance. Both independent attorney Bryan Graham and prosecutor John Jarema, also Charlevoix county commissioners' civil counsel, reviewed the draft ordinance before Monday's meeting.

Township officials agreed by general consensus that a county-level enforcement officer should be appointed, not elected, and a county-level appeals board should be established, rather than a multitude of township storm water appeals boards.

"We'd like it to be somebody not subject to election," said Jim Rudolph, Hayes Township trustee.

That means a soil erosion officer, rather than an elected drain commissioner.

Rudolph also said a county-level appeals board would eliminate the need for townships to train their own people, especially since it's not expected many storm water appeals will arise.

"That's our feeling in Wilson," said Jeff Argetsinger, Wilson Township trustee.

Township officials also asked where liability for the proposed storm water ordinance would fall, whether with the townships or with the county.

See charlevoixcourier.com for draft ordinance and lawyer's memo.

"With a township ordinance, I don't think you'll get entirely away from all liability," Seelye said.

Townships represented at Monday's meeting included Chandler, Eveline, Hayes, Norwood and Wilson.

"Somebody needs to go to the other townships," said Dennis Howard, Chandler Township supervisor.

Both Seelye and Thomassey said they will discuss the draft storm water ordinance with the remaining township boards in coming weeks. Seelye also said he encourages township officials to send him questions and concerns, so he can address them in writing at April's township association meeting.

Also, Seelye said he will speak to county commissioners about the storm water ordinance effort at a coming internal government committee meeting. To work properly, county commissioners must agree to enter an inter-governmental agreement with participating townships to allow both county-level enforcement and appeals, he said.

Library hosts talks on education

CHARLEVOIX — A conversation on the future of education in Michigan will take place 6-8 p.m. Wednesday, March 7, at the Charlevoix Public Library. In partnership with the Center for Michigan, a nonprofit and nonpartisan group in Ann Arbor, the library has volunteered to convene a group of 25-50 people for a 90 minute discussion focused on Michigan's pre K-12 education system and student learning. The conversation is limited to the first 50 participants; call to reserve a spot, (231) 237-7340.

Ken Winter, North Central Michigan College and Michigan State University adjunct instructor and president of Winter Communications, LLC, will moderate the conversation where key issues and choices related to education which impact students within our community will be discussed. There will also be opportunity to share success stories about what's working in our local schools to improve student learning. This conversation will be one of more than 250 structured dialogues taking place in 2012 all across the state. Altogether, the participants will include more than 5,000 local leaders and engaged citizens, including students, parents, job providers, and educators.

As part of a statewide effort, this local conversation aims to help accomplish four goals:

— Expand the knowledge of students, parents, employers and educators about the education choices facing Michigan today;

— Gather the perspectives and preferences of Michigan residents on major education policy and reform choices under debate in Michigan and around the country;

— Amplify the voices of Michigan residents and press state decision makers to follow participant recommendations on how best to improve students' prospects for future success;

— Provide participants with options on how to become more involved in improving educational opportunities for students in their own communities.

This conversation is hosted by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, Charlevoix Public Schools and the Charlevoix Public Library. To learn more, visit www.thecenterformichigan.net or call the library at (231) 237-7340.

Classes will run 9 a.m.-5:30 p.m. on Thursday, March 8, and 9 a.m.-3 p.m. on Friday, March 9, at VitalCare Hospice of Little Traverse Bay in Petoskey. Attendance is required on both days.

Training sessions include an orientation to hospice and discussion of the roles of volunteers.

Each class will deal with a different aspect of training including grief and bereavement, death and dying, communication skills, understanding the family, spiritual care of the family, care and comfort measures, ethical issues and advanced directives.

Volunteers are the backbone of hospice, providing in-home respite care, errands, companionship, activities, office assistance, and fundraising assistance. At this time, the greatest need is for volunteers willing to provide support in patient homes in Antrim, Charlevoix and Otsego counties.

Those interested in attending the upcoming volunteer training, or those seeking more information, should contact VitalCare Hospice of Little Traverse Bay volunteer coordinator, Heather O'Brien, at (231) 487-7943.

Recyclers Exceeded 10,000 pound Carton Goal

COURTESY PHOTO

Brien Leslie of Emmet County Recycling tags a bale of cartons from the "10,000 Pounds in 10 Weeks" challenge period. The tag notes the weight of the bale and the date it was made.

Recyclers in Emmet, Presque Isle, Cheboygan and Charlevoix counties have met and exceeded a challenge made by Emmet County Recycling in November: recycle 10,000 pounds of paper cartons in 10 weeks. The total actually came to 10,165 pounds.

Paper cartons include packages such as milk cartons and juice boxes. The counties — which all use the Emmet County Recycling Center to process and market their recyclables — have been accepting cartons for recycling since June of 2010. Other products commonly packaged in paper cartons include half-and-half, refrigerated juices, broths and wine.

The "10,000 Pounds in 10 Weeks" challenge was the core of a campaign to let Northern Michigan residents know that they can now recycle paper cartons. Cartons are accepted at all drop sites in Cheboygan, Charlevoix, Emmet and Presque Isle counties and curbside in areas of Emmet County with curbside recycling collection service. They go in the mixed containers bin along with glass bottles and jars, plastic containers and metal cans.

"The goal was set high," said Emmet County Recycling Director Elisa Seltzer, "but then Northern Michigan residents are strongly committed to recycling. At the end, the last couple of weeks were a real nail biter — we were weighing the cartons as they were baled and since the bales are around 2,000 pounds each there were a few weeks between roughly 8,000 pounds and the final weight."

Next, the Recycling Center will be hauling a load of cartons — now sorted from the other containers and baled — to Great Lakes Tissue (GLT) in Cheboygan. Cartons are composed of three layers: an outer, printed plastic layer, a white middle layer made up of high quality paper, and an inner layer including plastic and sometimes aluminum. GLT uses a machine called a hydropulper to separate the paper from the plastic and/or aluminum. They produce napkins, paper towels and tissues from the recovered paper.

Seltzer noted that carton recycling has economic as well as environmental benefits.

"GLT bought the former Procter and Gamble mill, which was sitting shuttered right in the middle of Cheboygan. They brought jobs back to the town. Recycled cartons are important to GLT because they're a lower cost feedstock, compared to virgin paper pulp. We're so fortunate to be able to complete the recycling loop with products being made and returned to the shelves right here in Northern Michigan."

"We'd especially like to thank everyone who started recycling cartons during the challenge," added Seltzer. "Keep those cartons coming."

STEVE ZUCKER/CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Fox Motors Charlevoix last week presented a check for $2,360 to Charlevoix Elementary School. The contribution was the result of a Chrysler's Drive For Kids promotion that Fox sponsored at the school during its Grandfriends Day event in October. The promotion offered a $10 donation to the school for each person who took a test drive. In all, 211 people took test drives on the day of the event, and Chyrsler kicked in an extra $250 for exceeding the 200-participant mark. Pictured above during the check presentation are: (front row, from left), Jeck Jerema, Elise Ivester, Aubrey Arnold; (back row, from left) Fox Motors' David Prehl, Charlevoix Elementary School Parent-Teacher Organization representative Lori Ivester, students Rachel Pott, Sam Perrish, Annie Bergmann, Sophie Heen, Claire Kiteley, Taylor Petrosky, Lizzy Petrosky, Phillip Sterrett, Fox's Jim Jeffreys and school principal Doug Drenth.

Two for the team

New robotics program fares well at competition

RaydorNator team members show off the two biggest awards they won at their first-ever competition last weekend.

Joshua Scott Hogan
CHARLEVOIX HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT

The fledgling Charlevoix High School robotics team (RayderNators) made a strong showing in its first-ever competition last weekend placed 7th out of 39 teams on their first day of the three-day the event and earning several awards.

The theme for the competition, which took place at Kettering University in Flint, was shooting baskets with basketballs.

The competition is fierce with the first 15 seconds of every match being done by the robot on its own — No one is on the controls. It's just the pre-programed robots. Normally, most teams just program their bots to shoot baskets for the 15 seconds. After those 15 seconds are up, the team members race into position grabbing the controls.

Tournaments, such as the one at Kettering, typically last about two to three days, and have about eight matches of three-minute rounds the first day and four matches of three-minute rounds the following day.

"We had six weeks to build our robot, which might sound like a lot of time, but we were really pressed towards the end. It was the hardest fun I've ever had," Charlevoix Highs School senior John Boss said.

Teams earned points by making baskets in the three hoops, all of different heights. The shortest one was one point to the tallest one which was three points. Team members can also earn point by balancing their robots a teeter-totter-type board. If you balance one robot it's 10 points, two robots is 20 points and if you balance all three it's 40 points.

Each team has three robots. Schools form alliances to better their team, one robot shoots the balls, another retrieves the balls, and the final is on defense trying to take-out or stop the other team from getting shots off. Each team gets its own pit, a place where they can work on their robot throughout the weekend to fix what they need to. Each team is also allowed to decorate their own pit to represent their

Board of Trustees approves grant application for park project

SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

For schematics of the proposed park layout visit charlevoixcourier.com

In a four-to-one vote that concluded a public hearing Wednesday night, the Hayes Township Board of Trustees authorized the township's application for a state grant to help purchase the 20-acre Camp Sea-Gull property on Lake Charlevoix. The township proposes to develop the land into a public park.

The hearing was the second and final public hearing to discuss the grant application for the proposed acquisition of Camp Sea-Gull for the purpose of park development. Since the plan's inception, Hayes Township leaders have faced considerable opposition from a group known as The Committee to Protect Hayes Township.

"This (the board's desire for a park) is not anything new," said Ethel Knepp, township supervisor. "The township has sent out a newsletter for the last 10 to 12 years, stating the intent to find park property." She added that three-quarters of the respondents to a township survey had indicated their support for Hayes Township to obtain land adjacent to Lake Charlevoix.

In addition, Knepp said the township is not going to spend any more money on park development plans, appraisals or other speculative measures until

COURTESY PHOTO

The frozen fish toss, is a favorite event of the annual Beaver Island St. Patrick's Day games.

Beaver Island:

Gearing up for St. Patrick's Day

BEAVER ISLAND — Beaver Island's St. Patrick's Day celebration is so legendary, it trumped such celebrations in larger cities — at least, according to one United Kingdom magazine.

"We beat out Chicago, New York and all those guys, which is only fitting," said Eric Hodgson, who, along with his wife, Dana, owns Shamrock Bar and Restaurant on Beaver Island.

The celebrations aren't surprising, given Beaver's Irish heritage. It's nicknamed America's "Emerald Isle."

The Hodgsons are the organizers of games that celebrate the day, which include a frozen fish toss, a shopping cart race and a rope pull.

The games begin between 1:30-2 p.m., or "whenever we can get people to put their beers down," said Hodgson, and take place in front of the Shamrock establishment.

After the games, the party moves into either of the two Irish pubs the island boasts. At Hodgson's Shamrock Bar and Restaurant, there is a king and queen contest, a limerick contest and other assorted indoors games.

Live music by island band Rigor Mortis will kick up in the evening and Irish dinner specials will be offered.

"You can definitely get your Irish on," said Hodgson. "We get kind of carried away."
